Choker necklaces, so popular with the Parisians, are matched by earrings, bracelets and accessories of like color. Corneilan and crystal are the most popular of the semi-precious stones used. Glass beads in such colors as ruby red, onyx blue, sapphire and jade green are quite as popular as the more costly stones.

The lip-stick which hangs on a long pearl necklace is the latest accessory from Paris. One can not lose one's lip-stick if it is tied about one's neck and the Parisian believes in having her lip-stick ever ready. Not only does she keep her lips a crimson hue, but she never feels that she is completely groomed until she has put a bit of color on her chin and on the lobes of her ears.

WIDER OUTLOOK

inner life of a man who is bent on self-improvement.

The higher we climb, the greater our attainments, the broader the horizon of life. Certainly we ought to be thankful for our goodly heritage to-day. We are heirs of freedom in thought and speech and action. Truth and conscience are unbound, and it is possible for everyone to live a full life. The old world was narrow enough. The new age opens with broader horizons. If progress brings its own dangers and drawbacks—and these are inevitable—still as thoughtful men we should rejoice in the fuller life of our times.

Education.

Among many things that make for broader horizons we give honourable mention to education. It used to be the privilege of the few. Now it is the right of the many. Without doubt it makes for the enlargement of life, opening up new spheres of usefulness and pleasure. And still the cynic may ask, What is education? Who is the educated man? To be educated is one thing, to be professionally educated is quite another. Teachers, lawyers, ministers, doctors are professionally educated; not necessarily educated in the truest sense of the word. It is a well-known fact that professional men are often poorly educated; specialists in one department, unintelligent in others. Overdone in one way, underdone in others, like a cake not turned. Education means the drawing out of the best in a man. It signifies the cultivation of the gifts that God gave us in germ. Education fails to educate where it leaves a man rude and uncouth.

It is not merely cramming the mind with facts. It should lead to self-knowledge, self-respect, self-control. A man might know ten thousand facts and be a walking encyclopaedia, and yet be boorish and uneducated. The rustic is not necessarily uncultivated. He may have learned true refinement in Nature's class room. Education should help out the best in Nature, and lead to all-round culture. We see what the eye brings to the seeing, and the keen, trained mind sees the nobler vision and the wider horizons of our time.

"Yet I doubt not, through the ages
One increasing purpose runs,
And the thoughts of men are widened
With the process of the suns."

The Educated Conscience.

In these latter days there has been a wonderful awakening of conscience, and this is one of the things that make for the larger life. A quickened moral sense is the foundation of nobler character.

Men do not always respond to the demands of the awakened conscience, but in whatever measure they do respond, they are better and happier. There is no doubt about the new public conscience in many matters. Think, for example, of the new interest in child-life. The like was never known before. Rotary itself is a sign of the times, a development of the moral sense. Men feel they must get together to understand and to help one another. The cultivation of the moral sense means that we get into right relations with our fellowmen. So many grow up with the childish sense of selfishness. They exist for themselves alone. The world revolves round them. This is pardonable in a child — not in a grown-up.

The awakened conscience recognises the existence and the rights of others. It makes for the common good. It brings new obligations, duties, responsibilities, but withal it brings in the better day, the broader horizon.

"The path of the just is as the light of the dawn, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day."

Experience

As the years go by, Experience itself becomes a great educator. If we are teachable, we are continually learning lessons from the past. Experience enriches us in all practical knowledge. It teaches not only fools but also the wise so that they become more wise and prudent and charitable. The governed experience of all the ages is at our command for inspiration and warning and guidance.

Travel is part of our many-sided life which enlarges the prospect, and "the travelling public" to-day is a great army. Travel is a liberal education in itself. To see the world, to meet citizens of other countries, to learn their ideas and customs to observe their likeness and dis-likeness to ourselves is an enlargement of life. It saves us from personal and national conceits. Travel is undoubtedly a factor in the ascent of life. It supplies, in its way, the wider viewpoint. It places us on a mountain peak from which we view the wider horizons of life.

Religion

True religion is the great means of elevating life. What secular education is to the mind, Religion should be to the heart. There is such a thing as the education of the heart. Religion is not merely a matter of feeling, but it does produce right-feeling, as well as right-thinking. We begin life usually with very imperfect ideas of God. He is little better than a big, over-grown man and somewhat of a tyrant at that. He can be bitter and vindicative taking vengeance on the innocent. According to the old theology (ridicule by Burns) He

"Sends one to heaven, an' ten to hell
A' for his glory
And no for any gude or ill
They're dune afore him."

But under wise guidance these crude ideas give place to something nobler. We realize that if there be a God He must be infinitely better than our highest conception of Him and that His name must be Love. We put away childish things and enter into the liberty of the Sons of God. A true religion enables us to be good and to do good and "to stay with the job," as nothing else can. It means a continual ascent "on stepping stones of our dead selves." It enable us to put away all that is base and unworthy and unmanly. In this way we attain to new elevation of character. The pure in heart see God and live in turn with the infinite and unseen and eternal.

"Let knowledge grow from more to more
But more of reverence in us dwell,
That mind and soul according well
May make our music as before,

Hence I hold it true that as we make progress intellectually, morally, religiously, with ever increasing experience, we are steadily climbing upward and attaining the wider, broader vision of life. With Excelsior for our motto and progress for our goal, we cannot fail to reach the higher heights.

With all the faults of this present age, there is undoubted progres. The light is increasing. It is for us to use it well and enjoy the life that is rich and abundant. The very possibility of the larger life should inspire us to greater effort.

The war has not renewed the world as some sage dreamed but it has hastened some processes that make for life. The demand for education, the awakened conscience, our deeper knowledge of ourselves, of man and God, are to be related to that great struggle and must help forward mens' best dreams.

BE CAUTIOUS OF SUBSTITUTES.

There are several medicines on the Canadian market to relieve Kidney and Rheumatic Ailments, but there is one preparation that seldom fails to give quick relief and for that reason Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills are in a class by themselves.

This statement is vouched for by well known residents of this city. For instance Mr. Arthur Pinch, well known in the city, states that he was unable to work and suffered severe pains from backache, but after using three boxes of Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills, he was able to go back to work and is as well as ever.

Mr. Thos. Oldham, another well known Simcoe street resident, has no hesitation in saying that for Kidney and Rheumatic Ailments, there is no equal of Dr. Banta's Pills.

Never neglect Kidney Ailments as they are liable to lead to other complications, but always keep on hand a box of Banta's Pills. If they fail to do what we claim for them, return your box to your dealer and your money will be refunded.

"STOP THAT?"

The more intense you are about the things you believe or the way you behave, the more you will be prompted to abolish those who differ with you. So claims Felix Adler, writing in The World Tomorrow.

While his psychological theory may not hold true for all of us, it unquestionably explains the Poll Pry atittude of many prohibitionists and blue law advocates in general.

For instance, a person who dislikes cats easily could be induced to join a League for Killing All Cats.

Many a person is an ardent prohibitionist simply because, when he once sampled whisky, he disapproved of the taste. Not liking it himself, he unconsciously formed a "complex" (or obsession) against others who really enjoy their liquor. The rule works similarly with the Red Nose Gent, who wants everybody to have booze because he likes it himself.

The Society-Against believes at the bottom of its heart that the members of the Society-For are crazy and that there should be some way of abolishing them.

It is primitive instinct, Dr. Adler contends, for us to like those who are like ourselves and to dislike those who are unlike us. Here you have the explanation of race prejudice and also the cause of many wars.

These dislikes short-circuit a lot of careers that might otherwise be successful. The chronic busybody devotes so much time to prying into and regulating the affairs of others that his own affairs suffer by neglect.

When a busybody's Poll Pry instinct become sufficiently diseased to be a phobia, he is apt to run for public office or become a reformer.

Democracy ideally is a condition in which the individual's conduct is interfered with as little as possible by outside forces, interference being tolerated only when the co nduct of the individua affects the welfare of others.

Democracy dies at the roots when personal dislikes or individual prejudices are compulsorily grafted onto the public at large—as, especially for example, certain phases of movie censorship.

We will not be surprised if the League for the Suppression of Spring Onion Eaters grows into a national political party one of these days.

"Conversation Circulation"

IN the days when "Conversation Circulation" statements were the basis on which the advertiser bought space, the advertising solicitor who put up his story in the most pleasing manner, generally got the business.

In case the advertiser questioned the figures he might possibly go to the newspaper office and look over the circulation records with his own auditors. But neither he nor his auditors knew the intricacies of newspaper circulation records or the possibilities for juggling figures.

Circulation differences and arguments caused bitter battles between many newspapers. Ingenious schemes were used by unscrupulous publishers to put up the appearance of a larger circulation than they had. The prevalence of these practices brought out the necessity for a reputable agency to audit and report on circulation matters.

The Audit Bureau of Circulations was started eight years ago by a nucleus of the leading advertisers, agents, newspaper, magazine, farm papers, and trade paper publishers. Today it has a membership of 1800. The purpose of the bureau is to make fair and impartial audits of circulation records and it is now accepted as the Standard Authority among space buyers throughout the United States and Canada.

Every Publisher-Member of the Bureau is required to make semi-annual statements setting forth the annual net paid circulation. Once a year the Bureau sends an auditor to the office of each publisher to check and if necessary correct his circulation statements.

Study the A.B.C. reports of the publications you are considering and it will not be necssary to argue about competitive circulation.

The Examiner is a member of the A.B.C. and would be pleased to submit a copy of the latest circulation report

The White Way

by Jack Lait

RICHARD VAN DUSEN was pacing the floor of his little studio apartment. Foo, his Chinese servant, was setting a tasty little tabl. The bell rang. Van Dusen motioned and left the room. Foo opened the door and let in a scared yet thrilled girl. The smooth Chinaman startled her. She shrank from his exaggerated courtesy as he offered to take her coat and hat, which she refused. Foo bowed, gave her an inscrutable look and was making his exit as Van Dusen, who had watched it all through a portiere, moved toward her and put his hands over her eyes. She jumped, then giggled.

"Well, here you are, my little queen of the chorus," he said.

"Yes—no—that is, I'm no queen."

"You're a little queen to me. I'm so glad you came." And he pinched her pink cheek.

"Maybe I shouldn't have come."

"Why not? A little supper, that's all. I'm single, you're fancy free, I take it."

"Well, some of the other girls in the show, the older ones, said it wasn't—wasn't——"

"Wasn't what? Proper?"

"Wasn't safe."

"Why not? This is a fireproof building."

"They didn't mean that. They said I hadn't been in the business very long and there were a lot of things I didn't know."

"Perhaps I can teach you some of them."

"They said you—you prob'ly would."

"And so I will. What's the idea of the painted gold-diggers in that giddy show suddenly becoming reformers? Most of them live in glass houses, themselves—and a few in brownstone ones."

"Yes, but they're funny like that. When a new girl joins, instead of trying to make her bad—as bad as themselves—they want to make her stay good. Why, when I made up my lips to come here they made me take it off."

"Oh—they want you kept in the background for fear you'll get the Johns they want themselves. They're faded and rouged—you're fresh and natural."

"Oh, do you think so? I never thought of that. Why, when I got my first week's salary and I wanted to buy a dress with it they shamed me out of it, got me crying and—well, I sent the money to my mother in the country."

"Money!" exclaimed Van Dusen, then shut down to a purr as he reached into his waistcoat pocket. "You aren't short?" And he advanced with two one hundred dollar bills between his fingers.

"Y-yes — n-no — that is, I AM short, but I couldn't take it—from YOU—you see——"

The kid had her eyes fixed on the fortune in his hand, the dizzy sum that meant clothes, rings, silk stockings, oh, so many——

Van Dusen sprang. His arm shot around her neck, his lips were seeking hers. She struggled, but he was the stronger and was about to conquer, when:

"DICK!"

Van Dusen jumped back, letting the girl fall limply into a chair. In the doorway stood a beautiful young woman in an ermine cape over a soubrette's stage outfit.

"I guess I got here just in time," said the unexpected guest. "Dickie, I always knew you were a chaser, but I never suspected you of being a kidnaper." . . . She advanced and addressed the girl, who sat frightened, humiliated, bewildered. "Now, you get your mail-order coat and your Main Street hat and beat it!"

"Just a moment," interfered Van Dusen. "You can't break in here like this, no matter who you are or who you HAVE been—and give orders to my guests."

"Guests?" she roared. "Why, you silk-lined lounge lizard, tell that to the infant. She's from the bush league. Don't waste it on ME—I've been around."

"Well, if you've been around," he said through his teeth, "you've probably learned that it's a great little idea to mind your own business."

"Mind WHOSE business? Say, you're a grand, gold-plated oilcan, Mr. Dickie Van Dusen, snooping around stage doors of girl-shows, decoying feeble-minded simpletons like her into an ambush like this."

"I'll invite whom I please, here or anywhere. You're not my wife, NOW. And when you want to come into MY apartments—uninvited—you will please knock before you enter."

"I'll knock—I'll knock you for a goal! . . . Now, Miss Baby-face, will you get out or do I have to drag you out?"

"Yes—because of another little adventure similar to this."

"But you left it. And I won't have you tearing in here like this, threatening me and giving orders to my friends."

"Whoa! Don't use THAT word, Dickie. Where you were raised it hasn't any meaning. But I have a different idea of it. I'd been keeping my eye on this little buddy ever since she tripped into our chorus. I just had a hunch she was the type a few of you sharpshooters would start sniping for."

"But—Miss Jacqueline," mumbled the little girl, "how did you know I was here?"

"Yes," cried Van Dusen. "What right have you spying on me? You sued, you got your divorce, you——"

"Oh, give your aristocratic chin a rest. I saw the child cut the finale to-night and sneak to the dressing room. As soon as the curtain hit the stage I ran to Pop, our doortender. He told me Miss Innocent had played hooky, dressed in a hurry and made for a stylish maroon car. I rushed into the alley, just as I was, and, sure enough, there was the dear old familiar car, with Lounsberry at the wheel, whirring off. So I tossed on the ermine kimono, called to my driver, got here on two wheels, and—thanks to the little key I forgot to return to you when we closed our matrimonial comedy—here I am, darling, in all my glory."

"Yes, here you are. The pleasure is all yours."

"All! Yours is sort of—h'm—jimmied up. . . . Well, better luck next time. Come on, now, I'll be nice. Have Foo bring her things and I'll take her home with me."

"NO!"

"Oh, Dickie—you don't really think a little thing like that will stop me, do you? If I could come as I am, she can go as she is. I have a closed car. Come on, Little Miss Chump."

"Why, Miss Jacqueline, I don't know wh-what to say. I didn't know, Mr. Van Dusen was your—had been your——"

"Oh, that isn't the point. I'm not jealous. But I know him. He's got class and education and money and experience. It isn't a fair contest."

"That's what Little Red Riding Hood got from the OTHER wolf," retorted Jacqueline. "Let's go!"

"I—I don't see why you should interfere," stuttered the girl.

Jacqueline staggered back.

"Oh—YOU don't see, either! Say, I've a good notion to spank you and chuck you and leave you flat . . . and it would serve you right."

Jacqueline turned. She realized that her own temper was playing the whole situation right into her ex-husband's hands.

"When I go," she retracted, "I'll yank this youngster with me."

"But you're not this girl's mother," protested Van Dusen. "She has the same right to choose her companions, her surroundings, her amusements as you have."

"She has a flock of rights—and YOU should be the last one to mention them. But what chance has she—drunk with the lights, the stage, the phony movies, the lying novels? Her good looks get her into a chorus, then you and your kind come along. . . . Good-by, girl!"

"But I don't want a guardian," sulked the child.

"Nobody does. But you need one."

"You never had one," tossed Van Dusen.

"None but you, dearest. That's why I know about these things. I had to go through to find out. Nobody ever interfered with me. That's why I tore into life with a lot of false ideals, and got so far in I couldn't back out. That's why I aimed for show business, and pearls, and millionaires—instead of a home—and a husband—and a family."

"But I don't want to MARRY anybody," said the little one.

"Oh, yes, you do," coaxed Jacqueline, putting her hand on a slender shoulder. "You're sixteen. I was sixteen once, not so very long ago. And I felt then as you feel now—Lights, Jazz, Excitement, Theatres, Men! Oh, I know a girl wants to be courted, admired, loved——"

"Yes? In the first place, this isn't a man . . . he's a GENTLEMAN. And YOU have no business monkeying with gentlemen. In the second place, what he wants is most particularly NOT talk. . . . Didn't you tell me about a boy who lived on the next farm to yours?"

"Oh, yes. I used to think I cared for him. But I didn't know anything then. He seems an awful yokel now."

"NOW—yes. . . . Think back of the other girls in the show—the ones so full of life and pep. Are they happy? Why do they drink? Happy people don't drink. They smoke. Some of them even take a shot in the arm . . . all to shut out their thoughts or their conscience—or their memories."

"Maybe. But those thrills are mighty short—and mighty feeble. The woman who has a husband she worships, and who worships her; the woman who sees her red-faced kids running home from school; the woman who has a home, and neighbors, and respectability; the woman who wouldn't—talk to a woman like ME—THAT'S the woman who gets the thrills."

"Oh, poppycock," sniffed Van Dusen.

"Yes?" snapped Jacqueline. "If I were you I wouldn't take it so hard. Maybe I'm saving you a lot of grief, too. There are game laws to protect all sorts of wild animals except girls. And sometimes there's a great to-do, at that, when a bad sport goes a-hunting—out of season—and without a license—and wounds a farmer's chicken. Yea, bo, those farmers do have shotguns and no sense of humor. A farmer's daughter is only a rube to you, but to her OWN mother——"

"ARE they? You wouldn't want your mother to walk in and see what I saw, would you? If you saw your own sister——"

"Oh, that isn't fair."

"I'm—g-going," gasped the girl.

"That's the stuff. And you'd better blow the show, too. There are lots of decent girls in choruses, but they're kids who just naturally have a genius for staying out of mischief, like some people can swim and others in the same water go right to the bottom. You haven't that balance. You're a sister who needs a life preserver—and he threw you an anchor! You're sunk now and in over your head. Come up for air, grab the lifeline, pull for the shore—and look out for the sharks!"

"Meaning me, the shark reference?" chortled Van Dusen.

"That or a goldfish. The one drags you down, the other lures you down—small difference. You're all alike—money, cash, coin, dough . . . you talk with it, you fight with it, you make love with it, you horn in with it, and—you think you can wiggle out with it . . . and, kiddo, it's the bunk. Say — I've known what it was not to have a dime for breakfast, and I lived to walk out on ten millions. Yes, I walked out on ten millions and lived!"

"You're doggone whistling it's spoiled—cutie, it's wrecked. Now, I'll call Foo and get your things. . . . Foo, the young lady's hat and coat. You'll know 'em by the label—Sears-Roebuck.

"And if that boy is still waiting for you, go home; go home to him. He may wear suspenders, but the chances are he'll be on the level—anyway, with you."

"Go on," mocked Van Dusen, "there are no he-angels."

"No," admitted Jacqueline, "but he's a farmer."

"Oh, farmers aren't as different from other people as you think," countered the infant. "My Hank is the finest boy on earth."

"If he was here you wouldn't rag him. He's six foot one."

"Attababy," cheered Jacqueline. "You scamper back to him. Mr. Van Dusen's motor will take you to your hotel."

"I say," he protested, "isn't that putting it on a bit?"

"Not putting it on—slipping it over. Didn't you say she was your guest? Well—never let it be said of a Van Dusen——"

"Very well. Take the car. To your hotel—to the train—to the devil."

"See?" said Jacqueline. "Didn't I tell you he was a gentleman? Here's some money. It will take you out of hock and back to mother. And DON'T let anybody sell you Grant's Tomb on the way to the depot. . . . And some night, when a decent man comes up behind you and puts his hand on your shoulder, so gently, to tell you in silence of his love and his trust and his pride in you—and the baby—then you'll snuggle the little warm thing closer and maybe think of me—and this night."

"How pricelessly charming," snickered Van Dusen. "If you ever come to New York again——"

"Yes," interjected Jacqueline, "on your honeymoon—be sure to pay Mr. Van Dusen a call . . . but bring that six-foot-one shrimp with you."

"What?" exclaimed the child. "Come to New York on a honeymoon? What do you think we farmers are—hayseeds? H'm—we're going to Niagara Falls!"

And out she breezed.

"There," said Jacqueline. "SHE lived to walk but on ten millions."

"She didn't walk," smiled Van Dusen feebly. "She was pushed."

"And now she'll go home and tell her freckle-faced sweetie about the city chap who tried to hornswoggle her off the straight and narrow."

"Oh, if you mean that angel stuff for me, put on another record. You don't have to be an angel to keep someone else from going to the devil. A lot of coppers are yeggs—but they crab a lot of rough stuff, don't they?"

"You certainly crabbed ALL my stuff," said Van Dusen. "Here I had a dainty snack prepared, a bottle of vintage frapped—and I'm left with it, high, dry and stranded!"

"How?" asked Jacqueline. "The supper's still all there. And the fizz hasn't been opened."

"But what kick is there to it—all alone?"

"Alone? Why, Dicky—what's the matter with ME?"

"YOU!"

"Certainly. What's a little divorce—among friends?"

"You—MEAN that?"

"Of course. It was dynamite for the infant, but as for me—well——"

"No. All BULL and a yard wide. I wanted to save the kid—sure. I'm tired of saving myself. Let 'er pop, Dickie!"

Lakeviews Won First Game of Series--Belleville Were Defeated

OSHAWA TOOK FIRST PLAY-OFF GAME FROM THE BELLEVILLE NINE

Motor Crew Scored Three in the First Two Frames and Shut Out the Trunks All the Way.

ERRORS HELPED.

OSHAWA, Ont., August 27 (Special to The Examiner). — In weather that was more suitable for rugby than for baseball, as a result of a cold north-west wind sweeping Alexandra Park, Oshawa, champions of A Division, took the first of home and home games from the Big Four League winners by defeating Belleville by 3 to 0, and convinced ball fans around this section that the Western teams received their right qualification as A Section when the League was split in two divisions at the beginning of the season.

Sensational fielding by players of both teams was the feature of Saturday's game, Brownscombe for Belleville making a running catch behind third base in the sixth for the third out; Jacobi, Rowden, and Riddick were the bright lights for Oshawa, the latter with one man on in the fifth pulled down Weir's drive to deep left, which was labelled for a homer, with one hand, and with a quick relay held a runner on third.

Oulette and Dainty, the slab artistes, both turned in nice performances, but the help behind the former got off to a bad start in the first frame, being responsible for two runs after the side should have been retired.

Again in the second, errors gave Oshawa their third and last run.

Dainty had gilt-edged support behind him, the three errors coming at a time when they were not costly.

Oshawa will now go to Belleville on Wednesday with the first of the series under their belt, and with the team giving the old reliable Patton, who will be Manager Shultz' choice to work on the slab, the same gilt-edged support, the locals should make it two straight.

If the third game is necessary, it will be played the next day, probably in Peterborough.

Weir, the first man up for Belleville, got on when Morrison at short let a roller get away from him, but was caught off first by Dainty, Wilson blocking o the bag; Ross fanned, Brownscombe walked; W. Mills hit safe; but H. Mills forced Brownscombe at third. J. K. Williams, Casey, and Hagerman were out in order in the second, Oulette walked in the third, Weir lined out to Morrison at short, Ross hit to right, advancing Oulette. Brownscombe flew out to Belding, W. Mills forced Oulette at third. H. Mills, Williams and Casey were easy outs in the fourth. Hagerman, the first up in the fifth, hit down third base line for two bases, Oulette fanned, Weir hit to deep right, Roddick making a one-hand stab for the out, and on a fast relay held Hagerman at third, and Ross was out, Dainty to Wilson.

In the sixth, Brownscombe popped out to Dainty. W. Mills fanned, H. Mills was safe on three strikes, Tyson letting the third one get away from him. Runner went to second on a passed ball. Williams went out, Morrison to Wilson. Casey, Hagerman and Oulette were out in the seventh on five pitched balls. Weir walked in the eighth, Ross flew out to Belding. Brownscombe forced Weir at second, and Brownscombe went out stealing second.

Belleville began their ninth with what looked like one of their famous rallies. W. Mills, the first man up, lined one out to centre, which W. Fair dropped after a hard run; H. Mills hit safe, but with two on Dainty and his help tightened up, and Williams was out, Rowden to Wilson. Casey flew out to left, and Hagerman was out to Morrison at short.

Oshawa chased two runs over the pan in their first when Jacobi, the first man up, walked on four balls; W. Fair flew out to Ross; Rowden hit a slow one to Williams at third, and in an attempt to make a double play he messed it, both runners being safe. Tyson hit to deep left, scoring Jacobi. Dainty cracked one to centre, scoring Rowden; Roddick went out, Oulette to H. Mills, and Belding fanned.

They added one more, and the last in the second, Morrison struck out, Wilson dropped one in front of the plate, and Hagerman threw it over into the crowd, Wilson going to second; Jacobi fanned. W. Fair hit a grass-cutter to Brownscombe at short, and he let it ooze through his legs, Wilson scoring, Rowden was out, Brownscombe to H. Mills. Tyson hit safe in the third, but was forced out at second by Dainty. Roddick and Belding were easy outs; Morrison, Wilson and Jacobi were out in order in the fourth W. Fair, Rowden and Tyson performed in the fifth. Dainty fouled out to Williams for the first out in the sixth. Roddick singled to centre, Belding sacrificed him to second, and Morrison was out to Brownscombe, who made a nice running catch back of third base. Oshawa went out on three pitched balls in the seventh, Wilson via Brownscombe to H. Mills, Jacobi and W. Fair to Ross at centre. In the eighth, Oshawa's last, Rowden was out, Williams to H. Mills, Tyson flew out to Weir, Dainty got on through an error by Williams at third when he made another bad throw to first of Dainty's scratch hit, Roddick fanned.

THISTLES OUT OF PECK CUP RACE

G. W. V. A. Footballers Eliminated Old Rivals on Saturday By Score of 4 to 1.

The Thistles were eliminated, four goals to one, by the Vets in the semi-final of the Peck Cup on Saturday afternoon, at the Oval. The game was lacking science throughout, which resulted in long swinging kicks and rush for the ball, in fact, it was minus anything of a startling nature

Both teams had many changes since they had met in a League game. From the kick-off the Vets made tracks for Scots' goal, but were repulsed through a nice tackle by Rae at the opportune moment. The play did not move to a dangerous point in the early stages and the extreme wing men had had plenty of scope of make headway until the half backs of each team would hold the forwards outside the dangerous area, thereby giving the full-backs plenty of time to clear their goal. Occasionally the goalkeepers would be compelled to come out of their goal to relieve the pressure for the attacking forwards and in this respect Blowers and Richards handled everything called upon to save. Play was confined to midfield until half time, with neither team having found the goal. Vets 0, Thistles 0.

On resuming, Chambers at left back, cleared an attack and made a splendid attempt to let Sharman away, but the shot went past. A few minutes later, Wade let drive from twenty yards out, with a right foot punt, that rattled the cross-bar and Richard beat all the way. He was recompensed afterwards through a similar shot that hit below the cross bar, giving Rickard no chance to save. Within next five minutes, Jack gave away a foul kick for handling. Wade was trusted with the kick and had a try for goal. Rickard saved and cleared, but Burrows, standing close in on the goal, sent it back in again to be saved, until Chambers made no mistake, putting the Vets two goals ahead. At this reverse, the Scots tried hard to get a goal, but Vets' defence held them in check. Melvin, on the right wing, went along the line to get a fruitless corner. Then he returned with Hutton who evaded Chambers and Bestard, then centred to Williams to score. From the centre, the Veterans' forward carried the ball into the Thistles' area, Rickards was clearing repeatedly from the attacking forwards, until Wade sent a low ground shot into Rickards, who touched the ball through his own goal. This was followed up later by Dyer on an individual effort to give the Vets a fourth goal two minutes before the final whistle. Vets 4, Thistles 1.

HERE AND THERE IN SPORT

The gathering of the clans for the Rugby enthusiasts will be held this evening in the Chamber of Commerce rooms when plans will be made for the coming season. The meeting is scheduled for 8 o'clock, and all followers of the sport are urged to be present. Peterboro's prospects in the Rugby field this season are excellent, and a good turnout this evening, will insure a representative gathering with a firm backing for the team.

The Men's Soft Ball League will meet to-morrow evening to make arrangements for the opening of the fall schedule. The meeting will be held in the Chamber of Commerce Rooms at 8 o'clock. It is important that representatives from every team should be present, as this will probably be the last meeting before the League gets under way.

In a driving contest held at Troon before the British open Roger Wethered won first place with a average of 269 yards. The best drive of the day was 278 yards. Walter Hagen's best ball went 270 yards. No drive went 300 yards.

This ought to set at rest many of the fables about golfers driving 300 yards or more. Of course, there have been instances where a strong wind and a long roll downhill would carry a ball 300 yards from the tee, but it has not been recorded in any driving contest where official measures were taken.

At Troon were about all the best golfers in the world, and no one of them was able to smack the ball 300 yards. Many of the drives looked as if they carried that far until the actual measurements were taken.

"Red" Legon, all round athlete, and one of Peterboro's stars in rugby, hockey and baseball circles, whose loss from the local sports had been anticipated with regret, has decided not to go to college this year. That means that the diminutive sorrel top will help to uphold the name of Peterboro for another season before he leaves to take up his studies at Queens!

Last year it was reported that Miller Huggins was in danger of losing his job as pilot of the Yankees This year it is reported that the job is in danger of losing him—as he is tired of the strain of looking after temperamental ball players.

The Association is contemplating two games for Labour Day, one in the morning and one in the afternoon.

On Tuesday evening, the Woollens will play C.P.C. or Quakers at the Oval. If a re-play is ordered the C.P.C. and Quakers will re-play the Peck Cup tie at King Edward Park.

Louis Firpo Shows Some Improvement.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J. Aug 27 (Canadian Press)—Unleashing some of the power in his massive shoulders during his daily work-out at the Sound Racing Park on the outskirts of the city yesterday afternoon Louis Angel Firpo administered sound thrashing to three sparring partners and showed some improvement in his battle technique.

All three of the punch catchers, with whom he worked, Joe McKann the strong Newark heavyweight; Jeff Clarke, the "Black Ghost" of Joplin and Natty Natalio Pera, the Argentine adonis, were badly shaken by Firpo's blows. He appeared to have solved the fighting styles of all three in earlier workouts and prevented any of them from laying a glove on him to-day.

LAKEVIEWS WIN 2-1 FROM KINGSTON IN JUNIOR O.B.A.A. SERIES

Whitehouse's Pitching and McIntyre's Hitting Feature Work of Local Youngsters in Saturday's Clash.

WIN OUT IN NINTH.

Pushing the winning run over with two out in the ninth, Manager Lew Lebarr's Lakeview team, Junior City champions, got away to a good start in the second round of the Junior O.B.A.A. competition by beating the Circle Six team, Junior champions of Kingston, at Riverside Park on Saturday by 2 runs to 1. As the score indicates it was a tidy argument the two fast Junior organizations put up and the 450 fans present enjoyed every minutes of the well-played exhibition.

It was a pitchers' battle between Frank Whitehouse, the crack young Peterboro southpaw and Clark, the steady right-hander of the Kingston crew and so far as the pitchers were concerned the teams might be playing yet for none of the three runs were earned. Whitehouse had a lot of speed and a sharp breaking curve that puzzled the visitors while Clark used a slow hook to good advantage. Each struck out seven batters and Whitehouse held the Kingston gang to seven hits, the Lakeviews extracting one more off the right-hander's delivery. In only one inning on each side did either of the box artists allow more than one hit.

The Kingston crew were a much more formidable aggregation than Oshawa and the Peterboro youngsters deserve credit for the steadiness with which they played, holding the visitors scoreless after the first inning and finally winning out in the last frame. In Purvis, at first and Legett at shortstop, the Circle Six team trotted out two of the sweetest looking juniors that have appeared at Riverside Park. Purvis is a smooth working first sacker and a nice hitter, while Leggett is fast, has a good pair of hands and a splendid arm.

Whitehouse's fine work of course stood out for the Lakeviews and starring alongside the pitcher was Don McIntyre, the left fielder, who got half of his team's hits, cracking out four clean safeties in four trips to the plate. Four times his batting set the stage for a run, the first three occasions to no avail but finally his fourth hit put the winning counter on third and Jack Lebarr's roller to Smith finished the work. Moore got two hits in four times up and Purvis and Reid of the visitors also hit safely twice, these four being the only players on either side to get more than one blow.

It was a rattling good exhibition of ball, a credit to both teams, and the fans all pulling for the Lakeviews to repeat the trick when they invade Kingston. They have only to show the same form as they did Saturday to make Circle Six go the limit to win on their own grounds.

In the first inning for Kingston McPherson was thrown out by Whitehouse. Richards got a life when Lebarr dropepd Collins' throw after the hitter had splashed one down the third base line. Richards reached second on a passed ball. Leggett drew a pass. Purvis doubled to centre scoring Richards and sending Leggett to third. Hartley hit to Whitehouse who held the runners and then threw the batter out at frist. Reid's weak tap to L. Lebarr retired the side.

For the Lakeviews Cameron rolled to McPherson. L. Lebarr fanned. Moore singled over second and stole the middle sack but Leggett threw Whitlow out.

Smith first up for Kingston in the second fanned. Moore made a fine stop of Clark's slashing roller and McKelvey struck out.

In the home team's end of the frame Collins flied to Reid in center. Whitehouse's hard rap was knocked down by Clark, but Halliday drew a walk and McIntyre singled to right sending Halliday to third and taking second himself on the throw to the difficult corner. J. Lebarr made the third out when he tapped to McPherson.

A brainstorm on the bases robbed Kingston of a good chance in the third. After McPherson had been thrown out by Whitehouse, Richards got a cheap hit when Cameron and Whitehouse got their signals crossed and allowed his pop fly to drop between them. Then Whitlow misjudged Legget's drive to centre and it went for a double sending Richards to third. When Collins' return to Whitehouse went wide, Leggett ran for third to find Richards still there. The latter tried to go home and Moore threw him out at the plate. That was bad enough baseball but the visitors pulled off another a moment after when Purvis after drawing a pass immediately broke for second with Whitehouse holding the ball. Leggett tried to come home on the play expecting a throw to second and he was an easy out when Whitehouse tossed to Collins.

The Lakeviews evened up the count in their half. Cameron rolled to McPherson and L. Lebarr fanned but Moore got his second hit, a clean single to left. With Whitlow up, Moore stole second and continued on to third on Richards low throw to the keystone station. Whitlow rolled to McKilvey and the third baseman's high toss gave him a life while More of course scored. Smith and McKelvey changed places at this stage. Whitlow reached second when Clarke's throw to catch him napping got away from Purvis. Collins ended the inning with a pop fly to Purvis.

Hartley struck out to start Kingston's fourth. Reid singled past second but was forced on Smith's tap to Halliday. Smith stole second, only to be picked off that base by Whitehouse, Moore taking the throw.

For the home crew Whitehouse was thrown out by Leggett. Halliday drew a pass and McIntyre singled to left. J. Lebarr, however, rolled to Smith who stepped on third retiring Halliday and then whipped the ball to second in time to complete a neat double play by forcing McIntyre.

Kingston were easy in the fifth although Clark drew a walk to start with. He was out when he tried to go to second on a short passed ball and McKelvey and McPherson fanned.

In the sixth Richards fanned and Leggett flied to Whitlow. Purvis reached second when his grass cutter got away from Halliday. Hartley was thrown out by Halliday to end the inning.

In the Lakeviews half Whitlow popped to Purvis. Collins singled past first, went to second on a passed ball and to third while Smith was tossing out Whitehouse. Halliday's tap to Clark killed off the chance for a run.

Reid gave Kingston a good start in the seventh by a clean single through short but Smith was out on a nice running catch by Cameron. Clark fanned and McKelvey's rap to Moore retired the side.

McIntyre got his third successive bit to open the Lakeviews end of the frame. It was a pretty double to centre. J. LeBarr had the bad luck to run into the ball when he dropped one down the first base line and was out while McIntyre had to go back to second. He was doubled up a moment later when Cameron lined to Hartley in left field.

McPherson first up for Kingston in the eighth was safe on Moore's fumble. Richards flied to McIntyre and Leggett to Whitlow but Purvis singled through short, the ball taking a bad hop past Cameron. McPherson reached third and Purvis went to second on the play of his team mate. It was a ticklish situation but Hartley's best was a slow roller to Halliday whose throw beat the runner to first.

Lakeviews went out in order, L. Lebarr fanning for the fourth time in succession, Moore rolling to Leggett and Whitlow flying out to Reid.

Reid's best as an opener in Kingston's ninth was a tap to Halliday. Whitehouse threw out Smith, Clark gave the visitors some reason for hope by singling to centre but McKelvey killed it with a rap to Whitehouse.

The Peterboro youngsters won out in their half. Collins fanned but Whitehouse beat out a bounder to Leggett. Halliday struck out. McIntyre cracked out his fourth consecutive hit, a single over second. Whitehouse going to third. McIntyre stole second. Jack Lebarr hit to Smith and the third baseman's low throw to first gave the runner a life and let Whitehouse carry the wining run over the plate. It was an exciting finish.

TILDEN & NORTON WON TENNIS TITLE

Defeated Williams and Washburn in Doubles Event — Big Day For Mrs. Mallory.

BROOKLINE, Mass., Aug. 27.—(Canadian Press)—The U. S. national tennis doubles championship was won Saturday by William T. Tilden II., of Philadelphia and his brilliant team mate, Brian I. C. Norton, of South Africa. The mixed national team defeated the U.S. 1921 Davis Cup team of R. N. Williams II., Bryn Mawr, Pa., and Watson Washburn, New York in five-set match probably the most evenly contested of the tournament, which has been in progress at the Chestnut Hill courts of the Longwood Cricket Club all week. The score was 3-6, 6-2, 6-3, 5-7, 6-2.

It was a red-letter day for Tilden for as well as renewing his hold on half of the doubles title, with Mrs. Molla B. Mallory, he defended the mixed doubles championship. The champions defeated Miss Kathleen McKane, Great Britain, and John B. Hawkes, Australia, in a thrilling and hard fought encounter by the score of 6-3, 2-6, 10-8.

Mrs. Mallory, too, had a big day for in the first series of championships she had vanquished Miss McKane in 25 minutes in the final of the Longwood women's singles tournament by a score of 6-2, 6-1.

SCHOONERS RACE AT GLOUCESTER

Several Speedy Entries in Open Fishermen's Race For the Lipton Trophy.

GLOUCFSTER, Mass., Aug. 27.—(Canadian Press).—Ancient Gloucester, setting out on a week's celebration of its 300th birthday, is talking and thinking nothing but schooners. Overshadowing all other events on the program of the tercentennial observation, to-day's open fishermen's race for the Lipton and Prentiss trophies fills the minds of resident and home coming Gloucester men. The betting in her home port is that the Henry Ford, the only Gloucester fisherman so far definitely entered in the contest will win under wraps.

The picked speed craft of the U.S. fisheries are entered. Each skipper is to take his boat over the starting line in the trim he likes best and the first boat home over the 31 mile course wins the race. The winner takes the trophy offered by Sir Thomas Lipton, who will arrive here this morning to see it won, and $1,000 in cash; and the second, the Colonel J. L. Prentiss trophy and $800. third, fourth and fifth places carry cash prizes.

Two Boston schooners have entered, the Mayflower and the new Shamrock. A fourth entry is the Elizabeth Howard owned by I. W. Howard of New York. A fifth schooner, the Yankee of Gloucester, smaller than the other competitors, is a possibility but has not been formally entered.

The starting signal for the race has been set for 9 o'clock. The coast guard cutter Modoc will serve as the judges' boat. The start will be from a line between the eastern point whistling buoy and the Modoc. The course is a triangle, seven miles to a leg, the schooners turning the first mark after a five mile sail along the coast to a point off Thatcher's Island. The first and last five miles, from eastern point to Thatcher's Island and back, will be immediately under the eyes of the shore observers.

MONGREL DOG IS DETROIT MASCOT

Nameless Alley Pup Was Adopted By Players and Brought Luck Along With Him.

H. G. Salsinger, writing in the Detroit News, draws attention to the part a nameless mongrel dog seems to be playing in the recent wins of the Detroit Baseball Club. It is no secret that ballplayers are scarce who are not superstitious on the field. But Salsinger's story is worth repeating.

"The romantic chapter of the current baseball season in Detroit is the mongrel alley dog from Chicago that has received more publicity than any dog in the last month.

"This cur, christened Victory by the Detroit players, is as worthless as any dog could possibly be, but the man is not living who would produce sufficient cash to buy this mongrel.

"Adopted as a messenger of luck on the Tygers' last visit to Chicago, the team won three games from the White Sox. Taken to Washington, the Tygers did not do so badly there, and when in Philadelphia, Detroit won the only two games played, the team convinced that the dog had brought along luck so long missing.

"From Philadelphia the team jumped to Detroit to play a Sunday game with Boston, returning that night to Boston to continue the series. In the hustle of returning east the dog was overlooked and left in the clubhouse here. With the mongrel Victory missing, the Tygers third but was left there, West and lost three out of four games to the Red Sox, and then, going to New York, they lost two there, one of the defeats the result of bad luck. The reason that three games were lost to Boston and one to New York by the margin of one run was ascribed to the absence of the mongrel mascot.

"When the team returned to Detroit last week Victory was awaiting the players in the clubhouse. Again in possession of the mongrel, the team felt sure that a run of luck would follow.

"The Tygers took three out of four from Philadelphia, two out of three from Boston, and they won the opening game of the New York series Thursday and lost yesterday. That makes six games won out of nine played since the team returned to Detroit and with Victory in the clubhouse, so try to convince the Detroit team that the mongrel is not carrying the luck of the game."

ONE GAME FOR CHAMPIONSHIP

Juvenile Series Executive Orders Leafs and Sacred Heart to Play Tuesday

Maple Leafs and Sacred Heart will play a sudden-death game at the Riverside Park, on Tuesday afternoon, commencing at four o'clock, for the championship of the Juvenile series. The teams received this verdict from the Juvenile Series Executive at a meeting held at the Chamber of Commerce on Saturday night, when the managers of the Sacred Heart and Maple Leaf Clubs were given an opportunity of presenting their cases.

The whole situation covering the games of the second half was reviewed by the Executive.

The winner will meet Cobourg in the O.B.A. Juvenilesemi-finals,probably on Saturday. Tuesday afternoon's game promises to be an interesting contest. Nine innings will be played.

HASTINGS SPORT

HASTINGS, August 27. — The fast travelling Hastings Juveniles will travel to Orillia on Tuesday with a 17-goal lead to play the return semi-final game.

A large number of supporters will accompany the boys, as this is the first time in 30 years Hastings has won the semi--finals.

The Deseronto Midgets won from Havelock in Trenton on Saturday by the score of 4 to 3, and this leave them in the semi-finals with Orillia.

Deseronto have a shifty bunch of boys and should go a long way in the finals..

Field Day

The third annual Field Day of the Young People's League of the Methodist church will be held in the Athletic grounds, August 29th.

A baseball tournament will commence at 2 o'clock.

RUGBY MEETING CALLED TONIGHT

In Chamber of Commerce at 8 O'clock—Everyone Invited to Attend.

The extent of last year's rugby revival in Peterborough should bear fruit this season which will be reopened to-night by a re-organization meeting in the Chamber of Commerce at eight o'clock.

Dr. Ed. Wood, president of the Rugby Club, has called this meeting early in order that the prospects and arrangements for the game can be surveyed before September arrives.

The four teams that comprised the city league last year had gathered together quite a lot of good material, and there must be more where that cam from.

All those who are interested in the game should turn out to-night. Peterborough was always well placed on the rugby map, and there are plenty of young men in the city who know the game, with others who would quickly learn it.

THEATRES

AT THE GRAND.

THE "ORIGINALS" IN "RAPID FIRE."

Many new innovations are to be featured in the famous new "Originals" show "Rapid Fire," which has already established a new era in Canadian theatredom in all the large cities. This stellar organization of funmakers who organized behind the lines in France, first as the Third Canadian Divisional Concert Party, and which company comprises fifteen former Dumbells, comes to the Grand Theatre for two days commencing with Matinee, Monday,

Said to be the greatest character female impersonator of the day, Arthur (Jock) Holland, who will be seen in a magnificent Russian number of the Queen Catherine period, in the famous "Originals" revue "Rapid Fire," at the Grand, next Monday and Tuesday, September 3 and 4.

September 3rd, with an attraction absolutely unique in the annals of amusements in this city.

To try and pick out any one number in the Originals' new show, as better than another, would be a hard job indeed, for there is something to suit everybody's taste, whether old or young. The best known characters from their previous shows, such as "Biff Bing Bang," "Dumbells Revue of 1922," and "Full o' Pep," cannot compare with the long list of novel characters to be seen in this season's show which comprises eral unusual and spectacular features never before seen in this country. The famous old Original quartette, formerly known as the Dumbell quartette, is appearing this year in Scottish and East Indian numbers with very brilliant costumes, scenic and lightning effects. The only khaki touch in the show is probably the funniest sketch the boys have ever attempted. This number has been especially written for 'Red' Newman, in which this noted character comedian is at his very best.

Other skits and sketches, embracing everything from Opera to Ragtime and Jazz presented in a programme of unusual variety constitutes an attraction entirely different and more enjoyable than anything ever seen here before.

AT THE ROYAL.

"SHADOWS" A REMARKABLE STORY AT THE ROYAL TO-NIGHT

Now and then a picture is produced that stands out above the others. It is such pictures that prove beyond any doubt that picture making is an art. Such a one is "Shadows" With a worth-while theme as its foundation, masterfully directed and artistically acted, the story creates in the mind an impression that lasts many days and weeks after one has seen the picture. The cast includes Lou Chaney, Marguerite De La Mott, Harrison Ford, Walter Long, Buddy Messinger.

"Thorns and Orange Blossoms," will be shown Thursday. To-night's supporting program includes a clever comedy "The Wise Cracker," and Bray Romance and Travelaughs.

PUZZLING PLAYS

(BY BILLY EVANS)

THE PLAY

A few years ago two unusual plays came up on the Detroit American League grounds.

Ground rules were in vogue. An overflow crowd caused ropes to be stretched in front of the right field bleachers. Balls hit into such territory were good for two bases.

In one game a hard hit line drive struck in front of the roped territory, bounded over the heads of the spectators back of the ropes and went into the bleachers, without coming in contact with any person or thing on restricted territory.

Later, a batsman hit a fly ball which struck in the territory back of the ropes. It then bounded into the bleachers. Both plays appeared indentical, yet different rulings were rendered in each case. The second hit was longer.

What would have been the proper ruling?

THE INTERPRETATION

In the first play the proper ruling would have been to allow the batsman a home run, which the umpire did. The ball struck on playing territory in front of the ropes and then bounded over the crowd into the bleachers, making such a hit a home run.

In the other the batsman was granted two bases as covered, by the ground rule, even though the hit was a longer drive than the other one.

In the second case the ball struck the ground back of the ropes, in territory restricted to two bases. The moment it struck the ground in such territory back of the ropes it became a two-base hit, regardless of what happened later.

The ball immediately became dead when it so hit, and the fact that it then bounded into the bleachers meant nothing.

Gasoline men have hard luck. So much on hand they have to sell at a reasonable price.

BIG GAME MAY BE PLAYED HERE

If Third Fixture is Necessary Peterboro May Get the Plum.

If a third game is necessary to decide the Oshawa-Belleville series it will likely be played at the Riverside Park on Thursday afternoon, according to the best information available this afternoon. There is of course a strong effort being made to have the game played in Cobourg, but Cobourg has already had one play off, and there is a feeling around the circuit that Peterboro as one of the bulwarks of this league, should be selected for this clash.

Last year Oshawa secured the play off and following that precedent, Peterboro should get the plum on this occasion. Of course Oshawa may spill the beans by winning right in Belleville on Wednesday.

DAY OF MOTOR CAR AT TORONTO FAIR

Representatives of Industry Are Present From All Parts of World.

TORONTO, August 27 (Canadian Press). — This is the day of the motor car at the Canadian National Exhibition, and officially the Fair knows it as Automotive Day. From all parts of America and even from Europe, there are representatives of automotive industries, for the Canadian Motor Show is now known and recognised as one of the leading motor shows in the world.

It is the sole event of its kind under the official sanction of the automotive industry. It is the only national motor show in the world, it is said at which are displayed all the products of the industry, though in this case they are not all under one roof.

Sir William Letts, famous British automobile man, and Eddie Rickenbacker, American ace of aces in aviation fighting in France, are the chief speakers at the Fair to-day.

The directors have as their luncheon guests leaders in the automobile world.

A very interesting event took place yesterday at the close of the morning service at the Park street Baptist Sunday School, when Mr. O. S. IN MEMORIAM.

GRIFFIN. — In loving memory of our dear grandson and nephew, Cpl. Milton L. Griffin, who made the supreme sacrifice at Monchy, France, on 27th August, 1918.

Just beyond the River Jordan,
Just across its swelling tide,
There's a land of life eternal,
Through its vales sweet waters glide.
By the crystal river flowing
Grows the tree of life so fair;
Many loved ones wait our coming
In the upper garden there.
We shall meet them some glad morning,
Resting by the waters fair;
They are waiting for our coming
In the upper garden there

—Grandma Stenton and Aunts.

GRIFFIN. — In ever loving memory of our dear son and brother, Cpl. Milton F. Griffin, who was killed in action on Flanders Fields, 27th August, 1918, at the early age of 18 years 3 months.

Some day, we say, and turn our eyes
T'ward the fair hills of Paradise;
Some day, some time, a sweet, new rest
Shall blossom, flower-like, in each breast.
Some day, some time, our eyes shall see
The faces kept in memory;
Some day their hands shall clasp our hand,
Just over in the morning land.
Oh, morning land, oh, morning land,
When earths have all been sung,
Labour ended, trials done;
We'll meet again, oh, happy word,
And be for ever with the Lord.

STOCK MARKET

A STEADY TONE.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—(United Press.)—Belgium's reply to the British note suggesting resumption of all conferences to replace diplomatic exchanges, added to Wall Street's belief that definite steps might be taken in the near future toward bringing about Allied accord on the reparations question. Domestic developments over the week end were also of a favorable character and the market showed a steady tone in the early dealings. Davison Chemical continued its rapid advance, reaching a new nigh level for the year at 42, while fractional gains were general among the industrial leaders. Speculative interest was at a low ebb in the first hours. Trading was limited and price changes continued to a narrow range.

With a protracted week end in sight over Labor Day and considerable uncertainty still existing with regard to fall business prospects, traders were hesitant about undertaking new commitments. Rails moved irregularly, reflecting the widely varying character of the July earnings statements so far at hand. Union Pacific decreased net was entirely a matter of heavier maintenance expenditures. Southern Pacific made an excellent showing in both gross and net. The latter item having been the largest for any month in several years. Reading fell below the large net earnings of June but was still far ahead of this period of last year and is sure to finish the year satisfactorily, whether the miners strike or not. On the whole the July railroad net will fall below that of June or May, but chiefly for the reason that the carriers were pushing the re-habilitation of equipment with extraordinary energy.

HUNTER'S SHOT IS THEORY FOR WOMAN'S DEATH

Struck in Head While Sitting Beside Her Husband, She Dies in Half an Hour.

TRAGEDY ENDS PARTY

SOMERVILLE, N. J., Aug. 28.—Bowling merrily along a road in the outskirts of Bound Brook, a few miles from here, watching for a place to picnic, Mrs. Mary Gahlen, without a cry, slipped from the front seat of her husband's automobile to the floor of the car. A tiny hole in the side of her head showed where a small calibre bullet had entered. Whence it came no one in the party could tell, and after investigation it remains as great a mystery to the county police.

It was a merry company of four that started out from 376 Park Avenue, East Orange, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Gehlen. With these two were their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John Kramer. They had no particular programme except to drive through the prettiest country they could find. They took a lunch with them, and intended to stop at some suitable spot when they got hungry.

Shortly after noon they approached Bound Brook and were beginning to look for their picnic grounds. Some distance from the town they crossed a bridge over Green Brook, a tributary of the Raritan River. Between the bridge and the first buildings of Bound Brook the road stretches along low meadowlands on one side and along ground used as a municipal dump on the other. Finding nothing suitable in that neighborhood, the party hastened along to get through the town.

As the car sped through this stretch there was a sharp report that might have been a blowout. But almost at the same instant a glass panel in the sedan was shattered and Mrs. Gehlen fell. Her husband jammed the brakes, and as the car stopped he lifted her from the floor. She was unconscious.

Mrs. Gehlen was lifted to the back seat and, while her daughter and son-in-law made frantic efforts to revive her, Mr. Gehlen raced his motor four miles to Somerset Hospital here. Physicians took her to the operating table but she died within an hour without regaining consciousness. An autopsy performed by Dr. William H. Long, county physician, showed that death was caused by a .22 calibre bullet, which had entered her brain. The body was taken to the local undertaking establishment of John Maxwell, whence it was sent to the East Orange home.

County Prosecutor A. M. Beekman and County Detective George Totten started an investigation as soon as they got a report of the shooting. A possible explanation they thought at first was that the bullet had come from the rifle of some person hunting along Green Brook or in the marshy meadowland. This seemed likely as it is known that boys often go there to shoot muskrats and swamp birds. But a search of the vicinity failed to disclose a youth who might have fired the shot.

Another clue was found in the dumping ground. The authorities remembered that an ammunition store burned down some time ago and that much of the debris was carried there. They thought it possible that the explosion of a discarded cartridge had caused the death. This theory gained support when a visit to the dumping ground showed that it was on fire in several places.

Firearm experts, however, declared they did not believe a loose cartridge, discharged in such a manner, would have the force to penetrate a glass window and kill anyone. But it was conceivable, they said, that a loaded revolver had been thrown away among other things. It could be discharged by fire, they declared, with enough force to kill.

ST. LOUIS BOASTS OF FINE ORCHIDS.

Many Rare Specimens on View Never Before Exhibited in America.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 28.—(Associated Press).—With 5,200 plants recently added to its orchid collection, The Missouri Botanical Garden here is said to have the largest and most varied orchid collection in America if not in the world.

G. H. Pring, horticulturist at the garden, who collected the 5,200 pants in Colombia and Panama, says that the collection includes a number of Panamanian orchids hitherto unknown to the United States, and a rare abino specimen said to be one of only two plants of its kind known to exist. It is a whitish mauve orchid, and Mr. Pring obtained it in Panama.

The Panama collection is made up of 300 plants, representing 106 varieties, said to be the largest and most diverse number of Panamanian orchids that ever has reached the United States. About 75 of the varieties never have been displayed in this country Mr. Pring asserts.

FRENCH PLANE CRASHED WITH TEN PERSONS

One Killed and Nine Injured When Transchannel Airplane Developed Engine Trouble.

ATTEMPTED TO LAND

LONDON Aug. 28. United Press. —One man was killed and nine injured when a French transchannel airplane crashed in Kent, Monday afternoon. The machine left Le Bourget airdrome, Paris, flying on the regular route over northern France. It crossed the channel at a high altitude, and was speeding over Kent toward Croydon, the Londan air port, when engine trouble developed, causing the crash.

It was reported at a late hour that M. Gunther, killed in the crash, was the pilot of the plane, and that he was a Russian.

The nine injured passengers, who included several Englishmen, are in an hospital at Maidstone, where they are expected to recover.

A Goliath-Farman.

The plane was a Goliath-Farman bomber belonging to the French air union. Engine trouble developed, and the pilot attempted to land.

The passengers became panic-stricken when the pilot put the craft's nose downward, and rushed to the rear of the machine. Overweighted, the plane crashed.

POSTAL METER AT EXHIBITION

Sanctioned by Federal Authorities it Will Prove of Service to Big Firms

A demonstration of the postal meter, a machine sanctioned by the Federal Postal Department for use by firms who have a large amount of mail matter, is being made by the Department at the Toronto Exhibition, and the local postal authorities will obtain a machine for display here. This will be exhibited in connection with the general exposition of postal work to be given at the Peterboro Exhibition.

It is expected that a number of city manufacturers and business firms who have made enquiries about the new instrument will be glad to see it in operation.

Each meter is individually registered, and bears its own number as well as the license number, thus identifying the mailer with each impression taken. No accounting is necessary, as the automatic registration and protective features of the meter safeguard all the operations of the machines.

Speeds Up Service.

One of the difficulties which confronts the staff of city post offices in tendering speedy service in the despatch of mails is the congestion of mail matter during the daily peak-load hours. This is occasioned by the mass of business mail converging at the post office at certain times of the day. If this mail did not have to go through the processes of "facing-up" and "cancelation," it could be despatched almost as soon as received.

The delay due to these operations will be, to a large extent, overcome by the introduction of the new system. The ingenious machine, making the above system possible, produces an impression which represents the postage stamp, the cancellation and the date, and hour of mailing, and is operated in the office of the mailer. It will seal and imprint all commercial sizes of envelopes and booklets, either simultaneously or separtely, as desired.

Under Control of Postmaster.

The machine is controlled by a meter, which can be adjusted only by the postmaster, and is detachable from the machine for that purpose. Besides facilitating the handling of general commercial mailings, both from a post office and commercial standpoint, the system reduces the expense to firms on projecting mail advertising campaigns. At the present time postage is paid in advance under the permit system, entailing the numerical checking of all mail under permit and the preliminary steps necessary under that privilege. No small amount is involved in the firm's actual mailing room expense, and in adopting the most modern system of mailing the Post Office Department is not only

PREDICTS AMALGAMATION OF MORE CANADIAN BANKS

Merger of Canadian Bank of Commerce and Bank of Hamilton Indicated to Be on Share for Share Basis

TORONTO, August 28 (Canadian Press). — The amalgamation of more Canadian banks was predicted this this morning by Sir John Aird, the general manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, which has absorbed the Bank of Hamilton.

According to some sources of information, the merger of the two banks mentioned is on a share for share basis, so far as the Bank of Hamilton shareholders are concerned.

Yesterday the Bank of Hamilton stock was quoted at $150.00, while the Bank of Commerce shares have been held lately at $190.00.

The joint directorate of the two banks are meeting this afternoon.

It is stated that a further announcement might be made at the conclusion of this meeting.

A WARNING TO BOOTLEGGERS

Roman Catholic Church Will Issue Circular Concerning Illicit Brewing Drastic Action.

QUEBEC, Aug. 28.— The illicit brewing of liquor has taken such a development in some of the Border counties in this province, in the last few months, that shortly, it is learned, His eminence Cardinal Begin is to issue a circular letter in which such abuses will be severely dealt with by the church. The conditions are said to have reached those existing in olden days.

Shipmetns to the United States are being made by the illicit still owners and the Federal authorities have been approached by parish priests in an effort to try and improve the conditions. Not only is the liquor shipped by hundreds of gallons per week, but abuses of all kinds are reported in certain parishes and even deaths have been attributed to the bad quality of some of the products. The Quebec Liquor Commission has been advised what is going on but the illicit fabrication of liquor falls under the jurisdiction of the Federal administration and it will take a few weeks before plans have been completed to deal with the situation.

Through the exportation of the illicit still products large sums of money are being made and some farmers, who a few months ago were in poor circumstances are said to have succeeded in putting aside several thousand dollars.

This activity is said to have resulted from the fact that last year several rural districts suffered from bad crop and the need of money prompted many to begin bootlegging.

According to information at hand the church is to issue a very severe warning to those engaged in such operations and in view of the demoralcation may follow disregard of the warning.

BURNED AT STAKE TWO BOYS DYING

Playing Indians, Companions Tied Victims to Tree and Set Fire.

BELMAR, N.J., Aug. 28.—Charles Spindler, 16, and William Hubbard, 16, of Wall Township, near here, are dying in the Ann May Hospital at Spring Lake, from burns.

It is alleged that Dick Forman, 16, and Caleb Hubbard, 18, brother of William, tied them to a tree last night and set fire to them playing Indians.

Forman and Caleb Hubbard are in the jail here. They will be arraigned to-day before Judge Neil Aliger.

Small quantities of excelsior, placed about the feet of the "captives," ignited the grass and earth nearby, which were soaked with oil from the Coast Gas Company's plant, adjoining. When the flames sprang up around the boys tied to the tree, their playmates ran to a brook and tried to put out the flames with water.

By the time the fire had burned through the ropes holding them to the tree, Spindler and Hubbard had been terribly burned about the face and body. Every piece of clothing was burned off them.

Toronto is putting up 16-foot-high apartments for birds in her parks, martens being especially desired as tenants, because they eat so many mosquitoes

OPEN BRIDGE ON LABOR DAY

Pavement to Ashburnham Will Be Ready for Traffic on the Holiday.

The pavement on the Hunter Street bridge will be opened to traffic on Labour Day, Ald. Stocker, chairman of the Board of Works told the Examiner this morning. He had personally wished that the barricades be left up until next Tuesday, but it was pointed out to him that there would be considerable traffic over the bridge on the holiday with a ball game attracting others across the river.

The surfacing was completed last week and the new pavement gives every appearance of good workmanship. The fire department's motor truck raced across it on Saturday to respond to a grass fise in Ashburnham, but it was reported that William Lytle, inspector on the bridge refused to let Chief Gimblett return over it. In the references to the bridge it was stated that there were no superficial evidence of ill-effects from the passage of the big truck, but it was said that the contractor feared the base might have been injured if it had not set firmly and permanently.

THREE PAYMENTS NOT ALL BENEFIT

Tax Collector Says City Loses $1700 Annually Through System.

Commenting on the three payment system of collecting taxes. Tax Collector W. J. Green to-day voiced his partial disapproval of the plan.

It is a good method insofar as it permits citizens the privilege of making payment in easy installments, he said, but the city loses approximately $1,700 annually by it.

This is lost in interest on the over draft which is necessary between the first and second and between the second and third payments.

This deficit of $1,700 must be taken up in estimates, and ultimately the people pay it.

Queen Marie Goes Matchmaking In London for Her Two Children

LONDON, Aug. 28 — Queen Marie of Rumania is again engaging the attention of Europe's courts and chancelleries, with her political and diplomatic activities, and her arrival in London this week is awaited with much interest, for it is known that her visit will be something more than a mere social call on her royal cousins, King George and Queen Mary.

Marie is anxious to induce the British sovereigns to recognize her son-in-law and daughter as the King and Queen of Greece, in which positions they were placed after the revolution which overthrew Constantine. She also would like to find a suitable wife for her younger son, Prince Nicholas, who is just 20, as well as an appropriate position for his royal talents.

In this connection friends of the Queen believed that she would not be averse to having Nichoas accept the throne of Albania, which is known to be open to him. If he took the Albanian crown, it is pointed out, Marie would qbe in a position to achieve her long cherished ambition of erecting a powerful Balkan Federation.

Europe's most versatile Queen also is said to have a discriminating eye out for an appropriate Princeling, royal pretender or King—a species which is growing increasingly scarce in Europe—as a husband for her youngest daughter, Ileana, when she becomes of age.

Ileana, one of the prettiest and most talented girls among European royalty, has been in London several weeks, accompanied only by a woman tutor, and it is remarked by social oracles that her sagacious mother probably desired to have the Princess remain in London while the Prince of Wales is here, the inevitable inference being that Marie had hopes that the popular Prince would yield to the attractions of the little Princess and discuss ultimate marriage.

U. S. GOVERNORS IN A PARLEY TO PROVIDE FUEL

Pledge Fullest Co-operation to Assure Substitutes for Hard Coal Should Strike Be Called

EDUCATE PUBLIC

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—(Canadian Press).—Governors and Governors' representatives of anthracite consuming states, conferring here to-day, adopted a resolution submitted by Governor Cox, of Massachusetts, pledging their fullest co-operation with Federal Fuel Administrator Wadleigh, in his efforts to supply the country with fuel in the event of the threatened suspension of anthracite mining on September first.

The Governors, or their personal representatives, of eleven New England and Atlantic States were called into conference to-day to discuss emergency measures calling for the use and distribution of hard coal substitutes which would avert widespread suffering in the event of a suspension of work in the anthracite mines next Saturday.

Answering a call sent out by President Coolidge last week, the State officials met with Federal Fuel Administrator Wadleigh and James C. Brydon, president of the Bituminous Operators' Association. Mr. Wadleigh, it was said, was ready to present for their consideration a plan drafted at Atlantic City last July by the bituminous opertors.

Chief among the topics the representatives of the anthracite consuming states were ready to discuss was the education of the public in the use of fuels other than hard coal. It was generally felt that a systematic plan of public instruction in the efficient use of coke, fuel oil and other substitutes, including bituminous coal, would result in the alleviation of much of the suffering that might attend a shortage in anthracite.

The question of a possible embargo on coal shipments, which it had been anticipated might be introduced by some one at the conference of governors and representatives, was not discussed.

Governor Cox's resolution adopted after representatives of the bituminous operators' association, had been heard and then courteously told that the conference was not open to them or to newspaper men read:

"It is the sentiment of the representatives of the anthracite consuming states, that their local organizations will cooperate to the fullest extent in any plan approved by the Federal fuel distributor, which will secure to the consumers a maximum of fuel."

Conference Adjourned.

The conference then adjourned sine die, with the representatives apparently confident that their pledges of cooperation would mean the best possible distribution of available anthracite and substitute fuels.

COUNTERFEITERS' RIGHTS.

BERLIN, August 28 (United Press). — Miassojedoff, famous Russian painter, arrested for counterfeiting dollar and pound notes, declared it was his "divine right," having had a vision from heaven instructing him how to make American and British watermarks.

Excited Residents of Town in Italy Turn Gold Hunters

ROME, Aug. 28. — (United Press).—The inhabitants of the little town of Monasterace, in the Province of Calabria, have turned gold hunters, following the accidental discovery of a vein of gold. Natives from all parts of the province began a rush to the spot Monday after the word had spread.

While the bed of a stream was being drilled to lay foundations for a railroad bridge, the steam drills suddenly brought to the surface a small piece of pure gold. Work was instantly suspended while searchers started to locate the vein, believed to lie in the hills where the river originates.

STEEL DELAYS CITY BUILDING

Work on Aylmer Street Sub-Station Has Been Held Up for Three Weeks.

The construction of the city's electrical distribution station at the corner of Aylmer and Sherbrooke Sts., has been held up for three weeks by a delay in the shipment of the steel girders. The basement and all the concrete substructure was finished nearly a month ago by Mr. V. C. Hayes, the contractor, and was ready for the main walls. It was reported to-day that the steel is now on the way to Peterboro from the Hamilon Bridge Company. Bricks are being piled on the ground and everything assembled to rush the job as soon as the work is resumed.

The basement is said to be an exceptionally fine concrete product, and if the rest of the building harmonizes with it, the city should have not only a spacious and useful electrical plant and Utilities office but also a rather beautiful addition to that part of Aylmer street; and it is also understood that the substation will cause no noise or other nuisance to the neighborhood.

Child Fell Over Cliff 45 Feet to Rocks Below.

OWEN SOUND, August 28 (Canadian Press). — Terrence, the eight-year-old son of Major and Mrs. H. E. Pembroke, of Owen Sound, fell a distance of 45 feet from the top of the limestone cliffs, west of the city, yesterday afternoon, and is still alive, although very seriously injured.

His left shoulder is very badly broken and his head and back are seriously cut and bruised.

With five or six companions about his own age he was playing about the top of the cliffs, and in some manner slipped over.

That he was able to fall the 45 feet to the broken rocks below and survive is considered miraculous.

INJURED BY AUTO.

Percy Harrison, merchant, at the Accident in front of his Store.

Percy Harison, merchant, at the corner of Smith and Water streets, is still confined to bed with injuries which he suffered on Saturday night when an automobile bruised him against the gas tank in front of his store. The car tried to avoid a horse and buggy at the corner, and in swinging wide actually bumped the horse and brought up against the tank and a post. Mr. Harrison's attention had been momentarily diverted and his act in turning to one side saved him from a serious mishap. As it turned out he did not entirely escape the automobile which hurled him ten or twelve feet across the sidewalk.

AMALGAMATION OF TWO BANKS SATISFACTORY

Shareholders Are Pleased and Officials Say Affairs of Hamilton Bank Reflect Credit on Directors

TO SAVE OVERHEAD

TORONTO, Aug. 28.—(Canadian Press.)—From an economic standpoint, and in the interest of a sound business banking policy, the amalgamation of the Bank of Hamilton with the Canadian Bank of Commerce, controlling assets of more than $455,000,000, is a very important undertaking and one that meets with the entire approval of the directors and shareholders of both financial institutions, according to the statements of Sir Edmund Walker, President of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, Sir John Aird, general manager, and Cyrcus A. Birge, president of the Bank of Hamilton, to the Canadian Press this afternoon. The merger has been effected after many months of negotiation and consideration of the affairs of the Bank of Hamilton and reflects credit on the directors of the smaller institution, the Canadian Bank of Commerce officials stated.

Not Like Home Bank.

"I would very much like to point out that this is not at all like the situation in the Home Bank of Canada," said Sir Edmund Walker. "And there is no cause for the least alarm. The merger is to save overhead and is simply the result of a bank not having its headquarters in a large city. There are, of course, other reasons, but they are unimportant compared to the one of overhead, which is sufficient in itself. The amalgamation is entirely satisfactory to all parties concerned."

Shareholders Pleased.

HAMILTON, Ont., Aug. 28.—(Canadian Press.)— The absorption of the Bank of Hamilton by the Canadian Bank of Commerce, announced late yesterday, meets with general approval among Hamilton shareholders and it is not likely that there will be any strenuous opposition offered when the deal comes before the shareholders for final ratification. The general opinion here is that the shareholders will be guided by the directors in the matter.

Thomas Hobson of Lees, Hobson and Co., solicitors for the Bank of Hamilton, and who is also a heavy shareholder, stated this morning that even though he did not know anything about the deal, he was very well satisfied. He presumed that the shareholders, when they voted, would follow the lead of the directors who knew more about the bank's affairs than the shareholders did. Mr. Hobson said that he had yet to learn what the bargain was, but he thought it ought to be share for share as the Bank of Commerce was absorbing a first-class business.

While, for sentimental reasons, business men regret that the identity of the Bank of Hamilton will be lost, they regard the amalgamation as good business.

The Million Dollar Doll

By C. N. and A. M. Williamson

Authors of "The Lightning Conductor"

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY

Teresa Desmond (Terry), lovely and unbelievably innocent, has left her father.

Terrence Desmond, a selfish, unre-liable man, the proprietor of the Blue Moon, a road-house, and has gone to

Juliet Divine, her beautiful half-sister —known as the Million Dollar Doll—whose sketchy career is unknown to Terry. No one knows of the girls' relationship and 'Julia' is careful to keep Terry, who is an exquisite counterpart of herself hidden from her (Julia's) fiance,

Eustace Nazlo, is a wealthy Greek whose unwelcome advances caused Terry to run away from her father.

Miles Sheridan, Terry's 'Dream Prince,' furnished the money for her convent education when she was a child, partly to atone for a past rudeness of

Hartley Phillips, acting as Sheridans' medium, has offered Julia twenty thousand dollars to take a yacht trip with Sheridan in order to facilitate Betty's obtaining a divorce. Unable to go herself, Julia persuades Terry to go in her place, posing as the Million Dollar Doll. Terry does this because of her desire to repay 'the Prince' for his generosity.

CHAPTER XXVI

A New Julia!

She was to have such fairylike dresses, and hats and cloaks! It had been a shock at first, even to try on bright colors, after deep mourning. But Mother had hated black.

Terry had worn it more because it gave her a kind of screen, set her apart from the loud gayeties of the Blue Moon, than because it was the conventional thing. She would not have been human; and seventeen, if her clothes and her jewels hadn't enlivened the weariness of waiting.

It was always her maid, Emmeline who answered. According to her, "Madam" happened to be out, or engaged, or lying down with a headache; and at last Phillips' suspicions were excited.

It would be awkward if the girl should take some whim and let Miles down when it was too late to find a substitute. The plan was his, and it was up to him to see that nothing went wrong. He made up his mind to see for himself that no plot was being hatched.

Late one afternoon, the electric bell at the front door sounded. This hadn't happened for some days, as those of Julia's friends who were in New York had all been "choked off" on some excuse or other.

Emmeline was fitting the girl with a white cloth skirt and coat that were too large, and she left her victim bristling with pins as she ran to answer the door. Her eyes bulged at sight of the visitor, and mechanically she made a motion to shut him out.

Phillips was too quick for her. He pushed into the hall, insisting: "I must see Miss Divine."

"I'm sorry, she's out, sir," lied the mulatto woman.

"Very well. I'll wait till she comes in," he persevered. "This farce that's been going on over the 'phone has lasted long enough. You are in her confidence, and I send this message by you. In three days the yacht sails.

"Miss Divine has to prove to me by showing herself that she's playing the game. Otherwise, the bargain is off. Off, from tonight!—and I get someone else to take her place for the trip."

Emmeline's experience had taught her how to make the best of a bad situation.

"Come in, sir," she invited, with sudden meekness. "Madam—Miss Divine—told me to say she wasn't 'at home.' But she is in. I'll enquire if she'll see you."

"Give her the message exactly as I give it to you," Phillips said sternly, his theory being that, the more brutal you were, the more you impressed women like Juliet Divine and her confidante.

He followed the woman to the door of a large room where Julia had entertained her card parties. It was handsome, but unfriendly-looking in the dust sheets that covered the furniture.

Phillips would not sit down to wait. He prowled about impatiently, frowning at the flamboyant pictures in expensive frames, and sneering at Juliet's taste—or lack of it.

"Vulgar all the way through to her soul, if any," he mumbled. "If she doesn't show up in five minutes, I'm damned if I don't go! I'll take it as a sign she's up to some foxy trick."

But she came in less than three minutes, a slim white thing in a plain black dress, a creature more beautiful than he remembered her, a living contradiction of his thoughts.

Phillips found his fury unaccountably cooling. Perhaps she hadn't meant to deceive him. Anyhow, something had etherealized her and she looked astonishly young.

Terry's heart was knocking in her breast. Emmeline had rushed back, pounced upon her, almost with violence, and torn off the dress she had been fitting. It had seemed to the girl beyond her courage to face Mr. Phillips, but Emmeline (who was to receive a small percentage from the twenty thousand if all went well) urged passionately that Miss must see the gentleman.

If she refused, the fat was in the fire! And there was no time to lose. He was in a dreadful stew!

Terry had thrown aside her own black frock, to be fitted and the quickest thing was to slip it on again; nothing of Julia's which would fasten easily was quite ready to wear.

Emmeline trembled to let her charge meet Mr. Phillips clad in such absurd simplicity: but even that was better than leaving him to lose patience.

"I began to suspect you'd given us the slip, thrown us over," said Hartley Phillips, bluntly. But his tone was less harsh than he had intended.

He watched the girl, expecting some pert retort, but she gave him no answer. If she hadn't been Juliet Divine, he might have thought that she seemed frightened. But it would take something to scare the Million Dollar Doll! He felt that there was mystery in her look and manner.

"Well? . . . Why don't you speak?" he went on.

"I don't know what to say," confessed Terry.

"Haven't you got any explanations of putting me off a dozen times? What I want is the truth, you know. Don't go to the trouble of inventing pretty lies, pretty lady!"

"I don't tell lies," the girl said shortly. Her chin went up. She looked like a tall child unjustly slapped.

"The devil you don't, my dear!" Phillips could not help laughing at her injured tone.

It was bad enough to hear Father and Julia use rough words which would so shock the nuns! Terry was outraged that a stranger should treat Julia (as he supposed) thus lightly.

It was in her mind that for Julia's sake she ought to protest, and a look of the meek, yet obstinate Mary Desmond suddenly stiffened the young face of Mary's daughter.

"I didn't know people talked about the devil except—except in their families, unless they were very coarse," she said firmly.

COAL STRIKE ON SEPT. 1 FORBIDDEN YESTERDAY BY GOVERNOR PINCHOLT

Had a Long Session With the Union Spokesmen Yesterday and Will Meet the Mine Owners To-Day

RIGHTS OF PUBLIC.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Aug. 28.—(Canadian Press)—Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania served notice on mine operators and miners union officials of the United States yesterday that the threatened suspension of anhracite mining September first, could not be allowed and then proceeded to enter upon what may be a lengthy effort at mediation of the controversy.

In executive session with the union spokesmen, Phillip Murray, vice-president of the United Mine Workers and C. J. Golden, Rinaldo Cappelleni and Thomas Kennedy, its three district presidents in the anthracite region, the governor went over the demands which the union has made for increased wages, "check-off" system of union dues collection and other things. He made no compromise proposition in his own behalf yesterday, but scheduled a session with the coal mine operators representatives for this morning and a second meeting with the union officers for this afternoon.

The governor made his preliminary address to the industrial leaders at a semi-public meeting in his capitol offices. S. D. Warriner, A. B. Jessup, W. J. Richards and W. W. Inglis, all members of the General Policy Committee of the anthracite employers' faced the union chiefs across a table while the governor talked. Both sides received his words without rejoinder except as they acknowledged and accepted his invitation to stay in the city for separate discussion with him.

The anthracite industries quarrel, the governor said, could not be a private one, a public, vitally interested, that wanted to see justice done to both employer and employee was nevertheless losing patience with repeated strikes and suspensions.

The public interest demands that this controversy shall be settled and that suspension of mining shall be avoided," he continued. "The thing is possible and it must be done. Settlement means that neither side can get all it would like to have. But settlement of this dispute is absolutely necessary for the pubic safety and welfare. The public needs and must have coal, and I am entirely confident that the public is going to have it."

The governor's statement of the necessities he saw in the situation elicited little comment from the men he addressed. A request that they keep confidential whatever propositions he might make in executive sessions later concluded his open address. It was entirely repected by the miners' officials at the end of their first meeting though the discussion last three hours.

In dealing with the situation, the governor's speech emphasized the fact that he considered himself a "representative of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania." There was scarcely a mention of the conference held by him previously with President Coolidge, except in the statement that he had been informd he was not "running counter to federal wishes."

Along the officials of the miners' union, directly invited to Harrisburg there assembled in the city almost the full membership of the union's scale committee in the anthracite region, which is made up of actual delegates from the working miners as well as minor union officials. Some of these had the impression that Governor Pinchot would ask the union to recall its suspension order, if the operators would consent to make an immediate increase of five to ten per cent. in wages and negotiate as to other points in the controversy. The union's full wage demand is for $2 a day increase in the pay of those employed by day and a 20 per cent. increase in the piece rates per ton for mining coal. A contract for two years at that scale and installation of "check-off" by which operators would be required to hold out of pay rolls and dues owed by employeees are among other demands. The scale committee suggestion as to the governor's intent found, however, little to justify it in the first day's proceeding.

PRINCE OF INDIA DIED SUDDENLY

Maharaja Gaekwar of Baroda Died in Holland on Journey to England--A Distinguished War Record.

FLUSHING, Holland, August 28 (Canadian Press). — Maharajah Gaekwar of Baroda, said to be the richest prince in India, died here last night on a journey from Berlin

During the Delhi Durbar in 1912 the Maharajah created a tremendous sensation by turning his back on King George at a reception, instead of walking backward, as is customary in the presence of royalty.

During the war, however, he proved among the most loyal of the Indian Princes, giving great assistance to Great Britain.

The Maharajah of Baroda was 60 years old. He was a descendant of the famous Mahratta leader, Gamaji Gaekwar, who obtained from the Shahua of Satara the title of Shamsher Bahadur for bravery at the Battle of Baltapur, fought against the Imperial forces of Delhi at the close of the seventeenth century.

The reign of the dead Maharajah was one of progress and prosperity. His state in India covers 8,182 square miles, and contains a population of 2,126,000 souls.

He was a cultured man, and had written extensively on India. Nor alone was he popular in India, but also in Great Britain, this fact being due to his strong support of British rule in India.

During the Great War, he donated from his own purse and from subscription raised by him several million pounds sterling. From his private purse his donations went for airplanes, motor lorries, and various war relief funds.

Although the Maharajah during his rule introduced throughout his state revisions of old laws which had proved onerous to his subjects, his greatest attention was given to education, including technical training in industrial arts and handicrafts.

Schools were opened for people of low caste and boarding-schools for the lowest and previously neglected classes

He visited the United States twice, once in 1906 and again in 1910.

BANK OF HAMILTON HAS BEEN ABSORBED BY THE BANK OF COMMERCE

Both Institutions Are Financially Sound — Merger Awaits Approval of Governor-in-Council.

GOOD RESERVE.

TORONTO, August 28. Canadian Press. — The amalgamation of the Bank of Hamilton with the Canadian Bank of Commerce, will be effected as a consequence of the consent of Right Hon. W. S. Fielding, Minister of Finance, it was announced last night.

The Bank of Commerce takes over the assets and the liabilities of the Bank of Hamilton, and the latter passes out of existence, after a career of 51 years.

The joint assets of the two banks were $455,643,890, according to the last statement made by each to the Federal Dept. of Finance, the date being June 30. At that time the liabilities of the two banks were $412,519,982.

The Bank of Hamilton shareholders will have their stock exchanged for Canadian Bank of Commerce shares.

From Hamilton comes the statement that the amalgamation of the Bank of Commerce will be on basis of share for share, while a prominent and interested financier of Toronto says it will be on a basis of a valuation of Commerce stock at 195 and of Bank of Hamilton stock at 150. In the latter case the holders of Bank of Hamilton stock would have their shares of Commerce plus $60, for three shares of Bank of Hamilton.

Officials of the Bank of Commerce stated last night that the amalgamation was being made on terms that were extremely favorable to the Bank of Hamilton. There was no question of financial dimculty, it was stated, but a big consideration was the fact that under present keenly competitive conditions banking could be carried on much more economically by larger units

First Official Step.

"This," said Mr. Fielding, "is the first official step in the matter. The agreement, after all details have been settled between the two banks, to be effective, must have the approval of the governor-in-council.

"The merger now proposed is, I am satisfied, one that should, in the public interest, be allowed. The Bank of Hamilton is entirely solvent. Indeed in some respects it is in a strong position. Its paid up capital, ($5,000,000), is unimpaired. Its reserve ($4,850,000) has been almost equal to the capital. Like some of the other banks, it has experienced severe losses which give its management anxiety as to the future. Its directors feel that in these days of large transactions and keen competition the Bank of Hamilton, if continued as an indepndent organization, would have a difficult task. Instead of waiting for events that might possibly impair the bank's prestige, the diretcors feel that in the interests of the shareholders and of all concerned they should avail themselves of the opportunity of amalgamation with one of the larger banks. I concur in this view, and I think that at this moment, when there is considerable anxiety in financial circles, the announcement of the merger will strengthen the banking situation of the Dominion."

The joint assets of the Canadian Bank of Commerce and of the Bank of Hamilton, the merger of which has received preliminary approval by the Minister of Finance, were $455,643,890, according to the last statement made by each to the Department of Finance, the date being June 30 last. At the same time the united liabilities of the two banks were $412,519,482. A later statement from these banks is now due but has not yet been published.

According to the bank statement just quoted the total assets of the Canadian Bank of Commerce were $383,262,078, while the liabilities were $350,459,898. For the Bank of Hamilton, the assets were $72,381,812 and its liabilities $62,059,584.

The deposit with the Minister of Finance for the security of the note circulation was for the Bank of Commerce $772,518, and for the Bank of Hamilton $250,000. The total deposit of all the banks for this purpose, amounting to $6,527,732, is, however, available for meeting the notes of any one bank.

"Bank mergers," said Mr. Fielding, "are not popular with the public, and

PLENTY MEN TO HANDLE CROPS

Over 45,000 Have Taken Advantage of Harvest Excursions—Last Trains Have Arrived in West.

WINNIPEG, August 28. Canadian Press. — A total of 45,842 harvesters have been brought in over all lines to handle this year's crop, according to figures released by the railway officials here yesterday.

Of this number the Canadian National Railways brought in 13,687 from Eastern Canadian points, and 7,155 from Great Britain. The Canadian Pacific Railway handled 20,272 men from Eastern Canada and 4,728 from the British Isles. In addition to this the C. P. R. brought in 2,700 men from British Columbia to various points in Alberta and

QUIET TO DULLNESS IN IRELAND DURING THE ELECTION YESTERDAY

Results Will Not Be Known For Two or Three Days — A Government Victory Expected.

A LIGHT VOTE.

DUBLIN, Aug. 28. — (Canadian Press).—The electorate of the Irish Free State went to the polls yesterday in twenty-nine constituencies for the election of the 150 members of the new Dail Eirreann, and up to the last the elections maintained the unique character of the previous campaign and were quiet and orderly almost to dullness. This was particularly the case in Dublin, while reports from the provinces tell a similar tale, with trifling exceptions in a few cases, where enthusiasm outran discretion and caused slight disturbances.

The universal verdict is that this has been the quietest election in Irish history. There was no excitement, no laughter at the polling booths in Dublin nor in any of the waiting lines of voters. Judging from appearances the public is taking only small interest in the affair, and the polling has not been heavy.

Civil guards and others responsible for keeping order were at their posts, but were not required in this model election, and seemingly there has been only the very smallest amount of intimidation, persona-

FIRE DESTROYS NORWOOD STORE

C. W. Waters Lost Building and Contents in Blaze This Morning.

NORWOOD, August 28 — A fire of unknown origin this morning destroyed the general store owned by C. W. Waters, situated behind the J. E. Roxburgh block.

The fire was noticed about 4.30 a. m., and was promptly attacked by a bucket brigade. All efforts of the volunteers, however, failed to save the building, and only strenuous work suceeded in preventing the destruction of the Roxburgh block, which caught fire. Little damage was done to the larger block.

The conflagration lasted for an hour.

This increase was announced by the St. Lawrence, Canada, and Atlantic refineries.

BLACK MARKETING ALBERTA COAL HERE

United States Fuel Interests Are Looking Forward to Such Action.

TORONTO, Aug. 28.—(Canadian Press.)— A declaration that U. S. fuel interests would do all within their power to prevent the opening of the Ontario market to western Canada coal producers and a charge that local coal dealers were working "hand in glove" with U. S. operators in an effort to prevent Alberta fuel from coming into the province were made at a meeting held last night.

Alberta mine workers who addressed the representatives of the various ratepayers, returned soldiers and labor organizations, called together to consider the fuel shortage were outspoken in their denunciation of the "luke-warm attitude" which they claimed Toronto coal merchants evinced toward the project to develop the distribution of Canadian coal in Ontario. Following a detailed outline of the situation with regard to the possible sale of Alberta fuel in Ontario in large quantities, the meeting passed unanimously a resolution urging Mayor Maguire to call a mass meeting in Massey Hall to interest citizens in the use of Alberta fuel, to consider the advisability of forming the nucleus of a province-wide organization to further the consumption of western coal and to urge upon the Federal government the advisability of the fixing of a permanent freight rate as low as, if not lower, than the experimental rate of $7 a ton which expires on the last day of August.

How to Make Apple or Crabapple Jelly

Remove stem and blossom ends from about 3 lbs. ripe fruit, and cut in small pieces. Add 3 cups water, cover pan and simmer 10 minutes. Crush with masher, cover pan and simmer 5 minutes longer. Place fruit in cheese-cloth bag and squeeze out juice. Measure 7½ level cups (3¾ lbs.) sugar, and 4 cups juice into large saucepan, stir and bring to a boil. At once add ½ bottle (scant ½ cup) Certo, stirring constantly, and bring again to a full boil for ½ minute. Remove from fire, let stand 1 minute, skim and pour quickly.

At the present time there is a great boom in the mining industry. I have had many years experience in practical mining, both in Cobalt and Porcupine, and have a wide connection there. I am therefore in a position to get early and reliable information in both camps. I have made a profit for every one of my clients up to date, and shall be pleased to advise any one interested. There will be a strong market this summer and now is the time to get in.

ADJUTANT BUNTIN'S TASK.

It will be a matter of regret for many Peterborough citizens who have realized the opportunities for social service work that were made possible by the appointment of Adjutant Wallace Buntin of the Salvation Army as a special officer on the local police force, that as matters stand now there is a possibility that Adjutant Buntin's services will be lost to Peterborough.

In the short time that he has been at work the special officer has dealt with numerous cases—thirty-seven in the last couple of weeks—that would ordinarily have been handled in the regular way and would in a number of instances at least have resulted in Police Court cases.

It is not possible to go into the details of these cases further than to say that Adjutant Buntin has been successful in correcting conditions that were an offence to the conscience of the community and has already brought about a higher moral standard in several families and has done excellent work as a mediator and peace-maker, work that calls not only for courage and firmness, but also for tact and diplomacy, qualities that he fortunately possesses.

Of the value of such activities there can be no doubt.

Each case of this kind cleared up is a distinct gain to the community, and there is much of such work to be accomplished.

Citizens who know Adjutant Buntin have confidence in his ability to make good in his important mission, and they would be very sorry to hear that, as a result of a ruling from the heads of the Salvation Army, it may be necessary for him to relinquish the ask that he has so successfully begun.

The Salvation Army Commissioners should be impressed with the fact that there is a large field here for Adjutant Buntin, and that the people of Peterborough would be glad to have him given an opportunity to complete his social service work.

RESEARCH OPPORTUNITIES.

Dr. Banting's speech at the opening of the Canadian National Exhibition as to the desirability of Canada making greater provision for research work is a rebuke that is deserved.

Government after Government at Ottawa has failed to realize that by neglect of this all-important matter the brightest of our young students have been driven out of the country to seek a chance across the line where there is more help offered and there is a greater chance for them to develop.

As Dr. Banting puts it, they have the ideas, the enthusiasm and the imagination, but where in Canada are the facilities?

Canada prides herself on being progressive, modern and wide-awake, and yet her neglect has resulted in this country being literally sapped of her best scientists.

The discoverer of insulin declares that there is not a single institution in Canada where a young man can go to work on his problems free from the routine of a university department.

Is it any wonder that under such conditions men are being driven to seek their opportunity elsewhere?

Indeed the only miracle is that Dr. Banting himself should have made his discovery of insulin in this country, and that he was not forced to do his experimenting in the United States as so many other young Canadians have been forced to do.

It is high time that the absolute necessity of providing research work opportunities impressed itself upon those who are responsible for our government.

A CHANGE NEEDED.

There is a large amount of public sympathy for the efforts being made by the Canadian Mail Contractors' Association to secure better conditions for the rural mail carriers.

Particularly will the majority of people agree with the contention of the association that the present contract system should be wiped out in favour of a salary system.

The Examiner has frequently urged the necessity of paying rural mail carriers a respectable salary and of making their positions permanent so long as they are giving satisfactory service, and the more this question is considered the more firmly convinced are we that the present contract system is inequitable and obsolete.

There is no more reason why a rural mail carrier should have to tender for his position every three years than there is for requiring a city postman to make a similar application.

Indeed the urban carrier would not be so badly off under such a system as he would merely risk losing his job, while his colleague in the country runs the chance of having provided himself needlessly with an outfit and equipment.

Hon. Charles Murphy has a chance to make a much needed transformation in the policy of his department in regard to the remuneration of the rural carriers, and it is to be hoped that the validity of the claim that is being made on behalf of the contractors will impress the Government with the desirability of substituting a fair day's pay for a fair day's work for the present totally inadequate system.

YOUR TROUBLES.

The wisest thing we have read for months, says the Calgary Albertan, appears on a cigar company's calendar: "All sunshine makes a desert."

Socrates would have nodded his head and started talking for a week.

Grass and trees need sunshine, plenty of it. But if they get too much, they become parched and die. Where there's nothing but sunshine, you find a desert.

We grumble at the rain and its clouds, but without it we would soon be living in a desert, without trees, grass, water or crops. And then we, too, would die.

Wise nature works by the law of contrasts—action and reaction. Sunshine and rain alternate. The change of seasons goes on forever. Otherwise there'd be no growth, no life.

This applies to our personal lives, which are inexorably governed by natural laws.

We get an "off day" or a "run of bad luck." That corresponds to rain and clouds. Our sky is overcast. All looks gloomy, hopeless.

At such times, if we'd only pause to think, we'd realize that the clouds eventually will clear and the sun beam down out of a bright sky.

We crave continual happiness. But it's a good thing we don't have it. For constant happiness would soon become monotonous, we'd not be able to appreciate it, because we'd not have any contrast for comparison.

Perfect health would not bring real joy unless you had a sickness or pain to look back to and say: "Gosh, but I feel great today, compared with when I had a headache or the flu."

The psychology of lovers' bliss at "making up" after a quarrel is all a matter of this law of contrasts.

We cannot appreciate and enjoy prosperity unless we have had hard times for comparison. That's why the man who has to fight his way up from poverty gets a thrill and enjoyment never known to the lap-dog of luxury who inherits his fortune.

Providence has a wise purpose in sending troubles to us. If we meet our troubles and annoyances philosophically, we find later that they are preparatory—to make us appreciate and enjoy the sunshine that follows the cloudy day.

"All sunshine makes a desert."

FAITH IN CANADA.

Fortunately for Canada, all the newspapers in this country are not of the same calibre as the Montreal organ which persists in lamenting that this country is going to the dogs, that its public men are all incapable and that there is nothing ahead of us save bankruptcy or annexation to the United States.

There is no reason for such blue ruin talk, and papers from one end of the Dominion to the other have affirmed their faith in Canada, reliance in her possibilities and resources and confidence in the ability of Canadians to bring their country through to greater success and prosperity.

True, our national debt is heavy, yet the per capita debt is but one-third of that in Great Britain.

Our railway problem is a serious one, but there is every reason to believe that it is being solved, that the National Railways are getting on their feet and will soon cease to be a burden.

Few countries in the world have come through the war years in better shape; we have greater national resources awaiting to be developed than all European countries combined.

Vast tracts of fertile land yet remain to be cultivated, great though our mining industry has become, there are bigger things still ahead.

Canada cannot be kept from going ahead—unless the whole population joins in the pessimistic clamour of the Montreal journal and makes such a howl of distress that the world will accept us at our own valuation and believe that the country is really drifting on the rocks.

There is nothing wrong with Canada, no reason for worry as to her future, no need for gloom.

What is required just now is a little Coueism—day by day, in every way, Canada is getting better and better.

PRIVATE EXECUTIONERS OF THE LAW.

The Times publishes despatches from several States, including Ohio, representing the authorities as roused to action by the spread of peculiar types of lawlessness, says the New York Times. From many places reports poured in of citizens kidnapped, called out of their homes and flogged by a masked mob, warned to leave the vicinity, or in some cases brought in imminent peril of their lives. There was no direct connection of these outrages with the Ku Klux Klan, but the methods practiced were suspiciously like those of that highly patriotic organization.

It would be needless, and perhaps unfair, to point out that these whippings and deportations of white men have stirred Southern Governors more than have the lynchings of negroes. The two things go well together. They have a common root in the impulse of individuals to take the law into their own hands. Long ago it was predicted that unchecked execution of vengeance upon colored men would inevitably go further and affect the attitude of whole communities toward law enforcement in general. If it is conceded to be tolerable to take a negro out of a jail and hang him, it will not be long before it is considered the right thing to lash a white offender and drive him out of the county or out of the State. There is no escape from all sorts of extremes and dangers the moment you teach people that it is proper for them to execute the law—in the sense of using physical violence against men and women who have made themselves disliked or dreaded—instead of leaving that duty with the public authorities. So far as the plain speaking and resolute action of the Governors tend to call people back to their senses, and to remind them in a stern way that they must not usurp the functions of the duly appointed officers of justice, their course must be warmly commended. Too many Americans appear today to require the sharpest kind of notification that it is a crime for them to set themselves up as prosecutor, judge, jury and executioner.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

We are now at the season of the year when bad weather, late trains and almost everything else is blamed on the Toronto Exhibition.

The Dominion Government's policy towards the fuel problem is to be the same as last year. That apparently consisted of doing nothing.

It will strike a lot of Ontario people as peculiarly appropriate that a Toronto man should have been elected President of the Gas Association.

Washington advices declare that Canada will very largely have to depend upon soft coal this winter. And if the soft coal miners strike, where does that leave us?

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE!

PRESIDENT COSGRAVE REPORTED RE-ELECTED TO THE DAIL EIREANN

Early Returns From Ireland Also Indicate That Eamonn De Valera Has Been Strongly Supported and May Be Elected

VOTERS ARE MUM

DUBLIN, Aug. 28.— (Special.)—President Cosgrave has been re-elected to the Dail Eireann, according to early returns from the balloting of yesterday. It is reported from County Clare that Eamonn De Valera has been strongly supported. He may have been elected. Rainy weather held down the poll to 60 or 70 per cent. of the registered vote.

LONDON, Aug. 28. —The Dublin correspondents of the London newspapers estimated that between 60 and 70 p.c. of the electorate voted in yesterday's general election, which not only was the first to be held since the establishment of the Irish Free Sttae, but also was the quietest and most peaceful that Ireland has ever seen. Shortly before the polls closed, a tour of Dublin revealed a slow and steady procession of voters to election stations. Among the late comers was President Cosgrave, who motored from Kilkenny to Waterford in the early morning and later toured North Kilkenny and Carlow, returning to Dublin last evening in time to cast his ballot. Countess Markievicz seems to have furnished the only diversion from the dullness of the day's events. The Daily Telegram correspondent tells of last minute Sinn Fein rally at Ratsmines late last night, at which the Countess told her audience that if the Republicans did not win a majority in the Dail there would be a resumption of shooting.

The First Shot.

"If that's your game," replied a voice from the crowd, "here's the first shot." This sally was accompanied by a well directed egg which, the correspondent asserts, found its mark.

The Daily Mail's Dublin representative, says it was almost pathetic to see Countess Markievicz driving about the capitol in taxicab, sides of which were covered with posters and flags. The cab was filled with young children, including the son of Eamonn De Valera.

Reports from the provinces indicate that the pay passed peacefully. Only in Waterford were there old-time election day amusements. In that city the Government and Redmondite brass bands engaged in a musical conflict, four of them playing at once.

GOOD FOR TRADE.

LONDON, Aug. 28. — Although newspaper correspondents who made the rounds of the polling places in Dublin yesterday, found that most of the voters did not care to say to which candidate they had given their ballot, the representative of the Times unearthed one exception. This was a man who announced that he had voted for the Republican nominee, and when asked why, said, "I'm an undertaker and they do most good for me thrade."

CINCHED CLAIM TO THE CHAMPIONSHIP

Trenton Defeated Warkworth in Final Game of the Northumberland League.

COLBORNE, Aug. 28.—Trenton cinched their claim to the championship of the Northumberland League and the Clark, Cup by defeating Warkworth here yesterday in the final game by a score of 20 to 4. With the Veterans it was a case of a baseball team going utterly to pieces and they certainly gave the worst exhibition that they have staged this season, apparently falling down just when their friends were expecting them to make the effort of their career on the diamond. Archie Zufelt pitched a game that at least entitled him to a look in if he had been given any kind of support, but his team-mates seemed unable either to hang onto flies or to stop grounders. Zufelt also made three hits, one of them a double. Mulhall pitched part of the fourth and fifth innings when Zufelt took his regular position again. Only the record by innings is given, the box score being kept out for the sake of baseball. Let the summary tell the story. The line up:

By innings:—

Trenton . . ..026640020—20 14 2
Warkworth 101010010— 4 10 10

Summary

— Two base hits, A. Zufelt, Williams; Curry, Empey. Sacrifice hits, Armour. Base on balls—off Zufelt 2; off Mulhall 1; off Anderson 6. Struck off—by Anderson 7; by Zufelt 10. Double plays—Mulhall, K. Zufelt to Armour. Umpires— Howard and Duncan.

Trenton will now play Tweed, champions of the Trent Valley League, the date and location to be announced later.

INFURIATED BULL CHARGED CHILDREN

Broke Away at Kitchener Abbatoir When Being Led to Slaughter.

KITCHENER, August 28 (Canadian Press). — Infuriated by a sudden fright as it was being led to the slaughter at the Schneider Abbatoir here yesterday, a bull broke the halter and made a successful dash for liberty.

Two hours elapsed before the animal was caught and shot.

In that time the bull travelled over a large section of the city, invading back yards and running on to porches, where it seriously menaced the lives of many small children.

The animal, pursued by abbatoir workers and police and employees of Kitchener Park, finally invaded Victoria Park, where it charged a group of small children enojying the sand at the playground.

Luckily the children escaped injury.

The madrened animal plunged into a small lape in the park, where it was lassoed and dragged out.

BANK OF HAMILTON

the Minister of Finance is naturally disinclined to give his consent to such unless there are urgent reasons for the merger. I discussed this question," Mr. Fielding continued, "in the House of Commons, on the recent revision of the Bank Act. Referring to the contention some times advanced that such mergers are against the public interest, I said:

"I am not able to concur in that view; I think there have been cases in the past where a bank in a fairly good position was on the down grade, and by being taken over by another bank it was saved; every good interest was promoted by the merger. There may be a similar case in the future. I am quite prepared to admit that there may be need in the future of some mergers. I think as a rule they should be discouraged, but circumstances may arise which may render a merger necessary and proper. It has been suggested that a merger should only be made by a special act of parliament. I could not approve of that because the circumstances under which a merger may be deemed necessary may be urgent, and to wait until parliament could convene might be to destroy the possibility of the merger going through and to lead to serious trouble. I am not anxious to promote mergers unnecessarily, but I cannot conceive of any arrangement that could be made which would be better than that which we already have."

PLENTY MEN

Saskatchewan. With the arrival here over the week end of 3,400 men the last of the special harvest help trains over the Canadian Pacific have reached the west.

REGINA, Sask., Aug. 27 Canadian Press—With the arrival of 200 harvesters here yesterday the last of the big harvest excursions have reached their end. A total of approximately 36,000 men have been brought into this province, including nearly 5,000 British immigrants, all of whom have been placed through the provincial employment service offices.

T. M. Molloy, Commisioner of Labor, stated yesterday that they had been able to keep abreast of the demand for harvest help so far.

CALGARY, Alta., Aug. 28. Canadian Press — When the final contingent of 675 harvesters arirve in Alberta from the East during the next two days, the total number of men brought into the province this fall will be 10,029, according to information issued by Walter Smitten, Commissioner of Labor on Monday. Of the total number of harvesters brought into Alberta, aproximately 2,000 were from British Columbia.

In addition to the harvesters now on their way to this province it is estimated that the Alberta farmers will require about 60 more men. "We expect to be able to secure from men now being released from the harvest in Manitoba enough to meet our needs," said Mr. Smitten.

REGINA, Sask., Aug. 28. — Eugene Murphy, aged 85, of Mount Forest, Ont., father in law of the Provincial Deputy Minister of Municipalities, is among those who came west to help harvest the crop. He has gone to Leask, Sask., to help his son, F. N. Murphy, an ex-soldier farmer.

QUIET TO DULLNESS

tion, or attempts at personation, this being due to the heavy penalties provided.

According to some reports last night there has been a poll through out the state of about sixty per cent. of the electors. The only places where any briskness or excitement was shown were Cork, Waterford, and Kilkenny, where the ballotting is said to have been heavy; reports from all other places indicate a certain amount of apathy.

The discharge of fire arms in the early hours of the morning in Dublin led many citizens to wonder whether the Republicans had abandoned their plan of standing as "the law and order" party but there is still no explanation of the firing and military headquarters has made no report.

The returns from the polling booths will be secret for three, possibly four days, but some indications may be forthcoming to-day when the first preferences may be known.

A feature of the elections was the comparative absence of numerous motors and other vehicles usually employed to carry voters to the booths. One exception, however, was an enterprising businessman, who employed a fleet of automoibles to bring his supporters into the city from the seaside suburbs.

Both Government and Republican candidates flew the same flag, the Irish tri-color, and though De Valera's supporters claimed the title of Sinn Feiners, the Free Staters maintain that they are the true inheritors of that tradition. The women voted as freely as the men, and at some of the stations out-numbered them, the younger women especially turning out in force.

No doubt is entertained that General Mulcahy will head the poll for the north city and Kevin O'Higgins is certain of election in Dublin county. Mr. O'Higgins is expected to show the highest poll of any candidate in the Free State, for not only will all the Free Staters put him first, but the Unionists who once carried this constituency in the British parliament, are supporting him as the strongest minister next to President Cosgrave in enforcing obedience to the law.

Mr. Cosgrave is considered a certainty at the head of the poll in Carlow. In government circles the most cautious of the prophets estimate that the candidates pledged to unswerving support of President Cosgrave will win at least seventy seats. This, though less than half the house, would make the ministery's re-appointment sure, as all the big business interest are anxious for its continuance, particularly in view of the floating of a Free State loan and for the purpose of impressing investors with a belief in the government's stability.

Estimates of De Valera victory including his own, vary from twelve to thirty. As the Republicans will boycott the parliament their return will make President Cosgrave's position easier; their absence, he will have a better chance of an absolute majority composed of pledged supporters.

They Say—

Interesting Thoughts of Interesting People

THORSTEIN VEBLEN, in The Freeman: "The country town of the great American farming region is the perfect flower of self-help and cupidity standardized on the American plan. Its name may be Spoon River or Gopher Prairie, or it may be Emporia or Centralia or Columbia. The pattern is substantially the same, and is repeated several thousand times with a faithful perfection which argues that there is no help for it, that it is worked out by uniform circumstances over which there is no control, and that it wholly falls in with the spirit of things and answers to the enduring aspirations of the community. The country town is one of the great American institutions, perhaps the greatest, in the sense that it has had and continues to have a greater part than any other in shaping public sentiment and giving character to American culture."

• • •

UPTON CLOSE, in the Outlook: "There exists in China today a system of local government, based on village communes and city guilds, so solidly founded and so effective in operation that, without attracting notice, it does the real work of government while the spectacular official authority totters on the brink of ruin. This government of the people, not that imposed by the mandarins, is responsible for the stability of Chinese society under conditions which would mean brutal chaos in any other land; it is this that holds in check aberrant impulses."

LUTHER BURBANK, in the International: "The basis of our appreciation of all perfumes is subconscious association of ideas. We prefer the perfume of one flower to another partly because the fragrance of that flower, by awakening memories in our subconscious minds, momentarily gives us a tantalizing recollection of early youth, or because it is associated with a season of the year that once was particularly dear to us."

• • •

W. R. INCE, dean of St. Paul's Cathedral, London, in the London Evening Standard: "And so England has always been a country of eccentrics. Foreigners have thought that the 'mad Englishman' was capable of anything, and that in predicting his actions nothing was certain but the unexpected. When an Englishman by a slip of the tongue ordered a kilometer of sausage instead of a kilogram, the French tradesman gravely prepared an estimate."

• • •

ST. JOHN ERVINE, in London Observer: "The greatest feat an actor can perform is to take an audience beyond the barriers of speech."

• • •

THOMAS F. CADWALADER, in the Baltimore Sun: "It is the duty of the law-abiding citizen to observe all law constitutionally enacted by Congress or general assembly, but it also is his duty to resist unconstitutional tyranny."

• • •

BART KENNEDY, in Bart's Broadsheet (Brighton, England): "It is time the squawking eagle took a rest. High time! We, the common or garden people of England, together with the common or garden people of France and all the other common or garden people of this earth generally, are very tired indeed of this bird. Through 25 of the 24 hours it is on the squawk. And, oh, we are so tired."

LIEUT. GEN. CHANG YING FANG (quoted by the New York World): "The main trouble in China seems to be the habit of procrastination."

EX-KAISER'S SON TURNS TO FARM.

But Eitel Friedrich Keeps His Uniform For Show Days.

(By CARL D. GROAT)

(Copyright in United States and Canada 1923)

BERLIN, Aug. 28 (United Press).—Prince Eitel-Friedrich, the ex-Kaiser's second son, has turned farmer.

He has obtained a small farm in connection with his Potsdam holdings and there daily he may be seen following the plough or strewing seed from a sack bound round him, or performing other tasks of the ordinary farmer.

His farm work is partly intended to reduce a waist-line growing alarmingly large despite his youth—he is only 39. And it is partly due to the fact that the royal prince no longer has plentitude of gold which was his in the days when Germany was a monarchy.

Keeps His Uniform

Besides being farmer, the Prince finds time to conduct the manifold affairs of the Hohenzollern house, its struggles to get a financial settlement with the new republic, and also from time to time put on the field-gray uniform for monarchist's meetings. As guest of many such celebrations, he fires the imaginations of those who hark back to the days of Germany's military splendor.

Such circles like to think of him as soldier and officer, leading his troops, sword in hand, against the foe. He and the aged Hindenburg share honors on the occasions of monarchist reunions in the peaceful village of Potsdam, which has not yet learned that another day has dawned upon the fatherland.

The public hears from time to time that "Eitel-Fritz" and his wife, Princess Sophie Charlotte von Oldenburg, six years older than himself, are having martial difficulties. As a matter of fact, the wedding to the wealthy princess is neither happy nor unhappy, merely conventional.

The Other Sons

The other kaiser sons lead, for the most part, an even less eventful life than Eitel Fritz.

Prince Adalbert—the marine prince—and Prince Oskar, third and fourth sons of the emperor, have a life without much material care. Oskar lives in Potsdam with his wife, the Countess Ina von Bassewitz, former court lady of the kaiserin, who received the title Countess of Ruppin as she was not of equal birth, and who after the revolution, became Princess of Prussia.

Prince Adalbert lives in a beautiful villa in Homburg (correct) vor der Hoehe, near Frankfurt am Main. His wife was the wealthy heiress Princess Adelheid von Sachsen-Meiningen.

Prince August Wilhelm, the fifth son, sometimes called the civil prince, or within the family "Auwi," is a victim of unrequited love. His extremely beautiful wife, the Princess Alexandra Victoria von Schleswig-Hollstein, left him several years ago, divorced him three years ago and wedded Captain Lieutenant Ruemann, with whom she now lives happily in Munich.

"Auwi" has the title of Doctor of Social Science from the University of Strassburg, and after the war he tried his hand at business. He was no great success, so today he lives from the modest sum his father grants him plus the small state pension he obtains as lieutenant colonel.

Last Son Killed Himself

The last of the kaiser's sons, Prince Joachim, deserted by his wife, Princess Marie von Anhalt, ended his life in 1920 at Potsdam at the end of a spree which brought him home penniless.

The princess has led a mad career in the Bavarian resort town Berchtesgaden, though of late her escapades have rather dropped out of sight since she engaged herself to an alleged swindler, whose case is still pending in the courts.

In general, it may be said that the new freedom in Germany has been a blessing to the Hohenzollern princelings, for while they lack for some of the gold and luxuries of the pre-war time they nevertheless enjoy a freedom which was not theirs under the despotic family tyranny of the kaiser.

CURFREW BELL NODS

Inspiration of Grey's Elegy May Disintegrate If Funds Not Forthcoming

(By LYLE C. WILSON)

STOKE POGES, England, Aug. 28 (United Press).—Time threatens to destroy the subject of the most beautiful word picture in the English language.

The curfew which "tolled the knell of parting day" will soon inspire its last evening's meditation, unless the old belfry spire, in which hangs the curfew bell, is repaired against the ravages of old age.

But, unless money is forthcoming to stop their encroachments, industrious suburban home builders will mar that idyllic spot with stucco bungalows. The herd will become a shiny milk cart.

Stoke Poges parish church was the scene of Gray's inspired "Elegy in a Country Churchyard."

After years of benign beauty this treasure spot of English literature must crumble and disappear unless the Vicar's appeal for funds is answered.

The Vicar hopes there are persons, in the world with enough love for the "Elegy" to assist in raising the entire $27,600 needed for the restoration of the country churchyard and its surrounding lea.

The Vicar will accept anything from a penny up as a contribution to his church. America has a stake in the spot. William Penn, of Pennsylvania, was the son of a Stoke Poges parish family. A son of Penn erected a monument to Gray and it stands in a little plot of three acres, which residents of the neighborhood presented to the church.

CENTRAL EUROPE WANTS WATERWAY.

Will Revolutionize Transportations By Joining Danube and Rhine.

BAMBERG, Bavaria, Aug. 28. — (Associated Press).—Charlemagne would come back to life long enough to see how canal-diggers are gashing up the eastern half of his old empire to connect the waters of the Rhine and Danube, and make it possible for ocean-going ships to travel from the North Sea to the Black Sea by inland waters.

The Rhine-Main-Danube Canal, which was begun in 1921, contemplates a revolution in the transportation system of Europe, and indirectly of the entire world. Freight routes will be changed, and cargoes loaded on ocean-going ships of not greater than 1,500 tons capacity will be able to sail from Rotterdam to Galatz, at the mouth of the Danube, touching Cologne, Mayence, Frankfort, Nuremberg, Vienna, Budapest and Belgrade on their way to the Black Sea.

American cotton is promised a through trip from New Orleans to practically all the countries of Central Europe which have no seaports, and new tourist routes are to be opened up for excursion steamers which will rival the Rhine trip in beauty and historic interest and make it possible for visitors to eliminate the annoyances of frequent changes from steamer to trains.

The new waterway will touch the territory of nine states: Holland, Germany, France, Austria, Hungary, Serbia, Bulgaria, Czecho-Slovakia and Roumania. But it is really more than a canal of continental Europe, as it will put all maritime powers in touch with central Europe, and afford a new entry to the Near East by way of the Black Sea.

If the canal attains the success its promoters prophesy it will drain much business through Rotterdam into the heart of Europe which now goes past Gibraltar into the Mediterranean. Much business which now finds its way into the Black Sea through the Turkish straits is also expected to enter the Black Sea through the mouths of the Danube. Odessa, which lies only a short distance east of the Roumanian ports at the Danube's mouths, is expected to be greatly benefitted by the new waterway.

DOCTORS WANTED TO OPERATE

Mrs. Quillon Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Saved Her from an Operation

Muskegon, Michigan.—"After doctoring for eight or nine years with different physicians without any relief at all, they said at last that medicine would not reach my case and I should have an operation. I had heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and often saw it advertised in different papers where some women had suffered just as I did and got well and strong again by taking the Vegetable Compound. I decided to see what it would do for me, and before I had finished the fourth bottle I was much better, the weakness stopped and the severe pains in my sides left me. I am now much stronger and do my own work and work in the factory besides. I am still taking the Vegetable Compound and give it all the praise."—Mrs. NELLIE QUILLON, 17 Morris St., Muskegon, Mich.

Women should heed such warning symptoms as bearing-down pains and weakness, for they indicate some female trouble, and a persistent and faithful use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will seldom fail to help.

MAN OF MYSTERY ON LONELY ISLE.

Lives Like Modern Robinson Crusoe On What He Grows.

USHANT, Finistere, France, Aug. 28.—(Associated Press).—There is one Frenchman to whom the high cost of living, the precarious existence of the Entente Cordiale and the occupation of the Ruhr mean nothing, and that is Bastiat de Kerlivio, who has found perfect peace and quiet on the island Keller, the smallest of the group of islands of which Ushant, 27 miles from Brest, is the largest.

Here M. de Kerlivio lives the life of a modern Robinson Crusoe, growing his own vegetables, living on fish from the sea, and in every way supplying his own needs. The inhabitants of Ushant watch his island for any signal of distress he may make, and occasionally visit him. He has a small library of books and writes a good deal, although no one knows what he writes about, nor will he say. He has been living this lonely life for five years, and declares he has no desire whatever to return to so-called civilization.

SHAKESPEARE DEPICTED NEW PEER'S ANCESTOR

LONDON, Aug. 28 (Associated Press)—England's newest peer is the Baron of Cromwell, who has just been summoned to the House of Lords by order of the King after the title has been in abeyance for 469 years.

The new peer is Robert Godfrey Wolseley Bewicke-Copley de Cromwell, created a baron in 1375. The last baron to hold the title died in 1454. He was the son of the famous Thomas Cromwell, the blacksmith's son who succeeded Cardinal Wolsey in the affections of Henry VIII., and who is made more famous by Shakespeare in his "Henry VIII."

INSULIN

Insulin, the new patent preparation for the treatment of diabetes, is the discovery, if such it may be called, of Dr. Fred G. Banting of Toronto, Canada.

Many efforts have been made during the past 20 years to carry the results of experiments in the use of pancreas extracts into the field of therapeutics. No direct success was attained as the extracts contained some protein matter which rendered hypodermic administration unsafe.

Dr. Banting is the first to arrive at a real logical conclusion. Quite a large number of patients have been under successful treatment during the past six months.

The idea that a properly prepared extract of the pancreas, freed of its digestive action, would be of great benefit in the treatment of diabetes was confirmed. It was experimentally tested in the laboratory and found to show surprising results. First with animals, then with great caution, on real patients.

Insulin seems to have the power of allowing the diabetic organism to burn sugar, thus causing sugar in the urine to disappear and blood sugar to drop to normal.

It has been given to patients to bring them out of diabetic coma, long enough to overcome serious infections. Surgical operations, under its use, may be performed on the severest cases of diabetes. Best of all, it is claimed that it will permit development and growth in children and young adults, where formerly there was no hope.

Insulin is given to the patient, hypodermically, three times a day before meals. It cannot be used without very careful diet control and must be administered by a physician.

To the sufferer from diabetes this new treatment—it is not yet termed a cure—comes as a welcome boon, almost a call to new life and action.

SWEDEN MUST REVISE COSTS FARM PRODUCE

Riksdag Faces Problem of High Wages and Low Returns For Agricultural Products.

EXPERTS CONFER.

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 28.—(Associated Press).—A crucial problem in Sweden has arisen from the failure of agriculture to keep pace with the general recovery from post-war depression. In the effort to help the farmers to fairer profits on their labor and investments, the Riksdag and government have studied the question of restricting the imports of grain, and efficiency experts, following scientific agricultural research, have suggested ways and means of reducing the cost of production. But all this, so far, has been of little help.

The farmers are at an economic disadvantage because, while the general price index in Sweden has come down to 70 percent above the pre-war price level, the selling price for grain has been forced down to 10 percent abov he pre-war level.

A conference of experts has been called by the Minister of Agriculture, and it is rumored that the question of state credit has been taken up with the idea of advancing loans to enable the farmer to hold over his grain for better prices.

HER BABY SUFFERED WITH SUMMER COMPLAINT

A fact mothers must face is that summer complaint with the prostration, often verging on collapse, which sometimes accompanies this disease, makes it one of the most serious and dangerous to contend with during the hot months.

Thousands of infants die annually whose lives could have no doubt been saved by the timely use of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, and it has been the experience of thousands of mothers during the past 78 years this valuable preparation has been on the market, that it is the safest and most effective remedy for use in all cases of looseness of the bowels.

Mrs. S. Lafontaine, Great Desert, Ont., writes:—"My baby, when a year old, was suffering with summer complaint. Two doctors attended him, but nothing would stop the vomiting and diarrhoea. A friend told me to try Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry and after the second dose the baby was better and I can say it saved my baby's life.

I wouldn't be without a bottle of 'Dr. Fowler's' in the house for untold gold.''

Complete cures had been effected in from five to six weeks."

Putting up preserves is a much simpler job when you use an SMP Enameled Ware Preserving Kit—dippers, cullenders, preserving kettles, ladles, cups, funnels and all. No metal can touch the cooking preserves to cause any injurious chemical action. And SMP Enameled vessels wash up in a jiffy—just like china. Ask the hardware merchant for

CANADA'S FINANCES QUITE ENCOURAGING

Sir Edmund Walker, President Bank of Commerce, Makes Statement.

TORONTO, Aug. 28. —(Canadian Press).—An encouraging message regarding the financial situation in Canada, particularly in connection with banks of Ontario, was given yesterday by Sir Edmund Walker, president of the Canadian Bank of Commerce. He could see no reason whatever for expecting that such an occurrence as the Home Bank of Canada suspension should be repeated. This he regarded as extremely unlikely. There had been improvement in Canadian business affairs during the past year, and with ordinary care, conditions would right themselves gradually.

"In Banking, as in other lines of business, provision is made for lean times," said Sir Edmund. "A bank sets aside a reverse fund expressly to meet adverse conditions. That is the purpose for which such fund is held. It is the part of good business to use these reserve to correct a situation which inevitably results from a time of business stress. Such action was taken recently in the case of the Standard Bank of Canada. There was nothing unusual about such action. It was perfectly normal and should be accepted as a matter of course.

"The process of readjustment which has taken place during the past two years has been accompanied by some financial difficulties. In the United States there have been hundreds of failures among the small banks. In Japan the same thing has occurred. It would have been a strange thing if Canada passed through such a time without a single bank failure."

PLEASANT ANNUAL PICNIC AT CHANDOS

Held at Home of Mrs. Philip Tanner — Prizes For Sports.

APSLEY, Aug. 28.—On Wednesday, August 22nd, the annual picnic of Mrs. Philip Tanner's Sunday school was held at her home in Chandos, and in spite of the rather cold weather a very enjoyable time was spent by the pupils and guests.

During the day baseball was the chief attraction, a good game being played, after which a list of races were run off. Very handsome prizes for these were kindly donated by Miss Kate Martyn, and Mrs. W. Miller, of Peterborough and Mrs. Nicholls, of Chatham, who were present.

Dinner and tea were served on the lawn. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered the kind hostess for her hospitality by Mr. J. B. Bonathan (acting for the Rev. C. Spence, who was on his vacation), and was accompanied by three rousing cheers from the happy scholars. The following were successful in the various events:

Gives Five Reasons For Losing First Job.

CHICAGO, Aug. 28. — (Associated Press).—Lack of a sense of responsibility, unwillingness to work hard, lack of thoroughness, false notions about salary and promotion, and lack of principle are the five chief reasons why 90 per cent of the boys and girls of the United States lose their first jobs, according to a report made of the Chicago Association of Commerce by A. D. White, statistician of Swift and Company.

Mr. White's report noted that 90 per cent of the boys and girls lose their first positions. The report also shows that in nine cases out of every ten, the loss of the position can be traced to one of the five reasons noted.

His report continues:

"Lack of a sense of responsibility is shown by neglect of work, failure to put the most important things first, and the expression of a general 'I should worry' attitude.

"Unwillingness to work hard, is shown by being late to work, stretching the lunch hour, and stealing a few minutes at the end of the day, watching the clock, and wasting the time by social conversations and telephone calls during business hours.

"Lack of thoroughness, is indicated most frequently by unwillingness to begin at the bottom and to go through the drudgery of mastering each step before going ahead.

"The real secret of promotion lies in constantly doing more than you are paid to do. Keep yourself under paid. As soon as you are overpaid you are bound to go backward.

EATING YOUR CAKE

The vast national wealth of the United States theoretically belongs to all of us. While most of it has been cornered by a minority of the population, the future probably will bring a more fair division for our descendants of a few generations from now.

So the conservation of our national resources—prevention of needless waste—should interest all of us. The natural wealth (forests, mines, soil fertility, etc.) may belong to individuals other than ourselves, but our cost of living will to considerable extent rise or fall accordingly as national resources are wasted or saved. You realize this when you go to buy some lumber out of the timber supply that's left in the woods.

What we call high cost of living is, to considerable extent, the penalty of squandering our national resources.

Since 1789 the exports from America have totalled 108 billion dollars. And 40 billions of this were exported in the last nine years.

Did it ever occur to you that a large part of this 108 billion dollars worth of exports represents natural resources of the United States that never can be replaced?

In manufacturing, for instance, five-ninths of the final value of product represents cost of raw materials.

On which basis, it seems logical that, since the adoption of the United States Constitution, they have exported natural resources equivalent to a fifth of the present total national wealth.

That's the penalty of big foreign trade.

When it comes to squandering natural resources, the most dangerous leak is in the form of diminishing forests. Depleted fertility of soil, for instance, can be replaced quickly by commercial fertilizers. But large trees take many years to grow, even several generations.

In the use of wood, we Americans are approaching Russian standards of living, warns the N. Y. State College of Forestry. Since 1907, which was the peak year of lumber production, our output has been decreasing three per cent. a year.

Between 1907 and 1920, our population increased 15 per cent., but our lumber output correspondingly dropped from 500 board feet a year for each American to 316 board feet.

Available forests are vanishing so rapidly that, unless we plant trees on a tremendously big scale, wood will be as scarce in America in 1930 as it now is in Russia. If you don't realize what this means, ask a Russian—who will tell you how, in the old country, peasants gather even twigs.

Replanting of trees is a job that belongs to Government and even more so to the timber barons who are leading us toward a treeless nation. As for the rest of us, our chief duty is to back the replanting by Uncle Sam and the States, and to exercise great caution not to start forest fires, especially when camping or taking strolls through the woods.—Exchange.

Germany a Nation of 200,000,000 in 100 Years.

By GUS M. OEHM

BERLIN, Aug. 28 (United Press).—One hundred years from today Germany will either have a population of 200,000,000 or be a Russian province, according to Professor Dr. Grober of Jena university.

Pointing out the rapid strides being made in England, the United States and South American countries in the matter of eugenics, Dr. Grober declares unless Germany wakes up to the need for spreading information on this subject Germany is due to national extinction.

"It will be necessary for us, if we do not wish entirely to withdraw from the battle of peoples, to interest ourselves in the spreading of eugenic knowledge," Dr. Grober said, "otherwise we will either disappear or become a meaningless people. We will either have a population of 200,000,000 or become a Russian province within the next 100 years.

"Nowhere in Germany are the universities and schools of higher education interesting themselves in the matter of maintaining the German racial stock. The example of England and her colonies, North America, the Latin countries of South America and more recently Sweden and the results of their endeavors should awaken Germany. We at Jena are taking an initial step in the right direction—in an effort to purify and lengthen human life. We have established a course in eugenics, which we hope will be the forerunner of similar courses throughout Germany. Our national existence depends upon how we take hold."

A Little Fun

A little fun was injected into the proceedings by two small boys, Kenneth Kidd and Maurice Dunkley, bringing in at the right time, two small chairs, and placing them in front of the embarrassed recipients.

Mr. Neil Porter replied for Miss Oliver and himself, and thanked all for the kindly thoughts that had prompted the gift.

FIXTURES SHOULD BE BEYOND REACH

In Basements and Bathrooms of Houses Mr. H. O. Fisk Advises.

Electrical fixtures in basements and bathrooms should be set in the ceiling with the switches in the wall as a precaution against possible danger, as tragically illustrated by a recent death in Peterborough.

This was the statement of Mr. H. O. Fisk, manager for the Utilities Commission, in a conversataion with the Examiner this afternoon. In the first place electric sockets and other parts should be in good condition. Makeshift articles were likely to prove a false economy. This expression had no reference to the fatality mentioned above: Investigations by the Hydro-Electric Commission had demonstrated that currents of 110 volts had killed some persons, although others had survived shocks of many hundreds of volts. And although serious consequences from the ordinary domestic voltage were uncommon they were known to have happened, and for that reason householders should be reasonably careful in the handling of electrical fixtures, and likewise should not stint their electric installations.

Mr. Fisk's advice was that in basements and bathrooms, especially, electric fixtures should be put out of reach so that a person could not grasp a lighting and plumbing fixture with each hand at the same time.

There was the case of a woman in Toronto who was killed in her bath when standing in the water when she attempted to turn on an electric heater. It may be that the heater was defective, but in any event that act was one to be avoided. Electric fixtures in the ceiling of a cellar with the switch in the wall was a precaution intended to prevent possible "grounding" of the current when a person standing perhaps on a damp cellar floor reached up to an electric lamp socket to turn on the light. The possibility of the current passing through the body to the ground should be guarded against, although in most instances the result might not be serious.

Switches placed near floor radiators on which persons would stand to turn the switch, was another source of danger in the household. Here again most persons would only feel a rather sharp shock, but the muscular contraction extending to the heart in one person might prove deadly.

One sure precaution whenever repairs were to be made to sockets and other fixtures was simply to pull the switch on the wires coming into the house.

Nansen to Speak on League of Nations.

OTTAWA, Aug. 28. — (Canadian Press). — Doctor Fridtjef Nansen, Arctic explorer and High Commissioner of the League of Nations for Refugees, is to visit America in November and will speak in Canada on behalf of the League of Nations, according to a cable message received by H. G. Richardson, general secretary of the League of Nations Society in Canada.

The visit is the result of an invitation issued some time ago by the Canadian Society through Gleaves Doyle, its European representative. Dr. Nansen, who organized relief for a million war refugees and prisoners of war, is now engaged in assisting the Greek Government in repatriating its subjects from the Ottoman Empire. During his Canadian tour he will address meetings in as many cities as possible from coast to coast. Dr. Nansen will be accompanied on his tour by his daughter.

RELIGION IS NEED IN PRESENT CRISIS.

Chief Justice Taft As President of Conference Issues Statement on Unitarianism.

BOSTON, Aug. 28.—The need of religion in the present crisis is stressed by Chief Justice William H. Taft in a statement issued by the Unitarian News Service in connection with announcement of the thirtieth biennial meeting of the General Unitarian Conference, of which the chief justice is president. The meeting is to be held September 11-16 at New Haven, Conn., in the buildings of Yale University, in conjunction with the annual Ministers Institute and chapter convention of the Unitarian Laymen's League.

"Honest doubts in respect to the orthodox creeds," says the statement of the chief justice, "should not be permitted to weaken the influence of religion or to engender inertia in the maintenance of religion and of the church. I feel as if Unitarianism in view of the discussions in our sister church has become more and more important in furnishing a basis for religious inspiration. Such a conference as that the Unitarians will hold in New Haven I doubt not can be made most useful in the present crisis."

Other speakers to participate in the Unitarian meeting are: Bishop Francis J. McConnell of Pittsburgh, of the Methodist Episcopal Church; Miss Grace Abbott, Chief of the United States Children's Bureau, and Dr. William P. Shriver of the Presbyterian Board of Home Missions.

STOCK MARKETS

BALDWIN'S NEW HIGH.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Aug. 28. — (United Press.)— The extension of virtual recognition to Mexico by the United States Government imparted a buoyant tone to the whole list in the early dealing on the stock exchange to-day. Baldwin jumped a point to a new high on the move at 123 1-2, while Gulf States' Steel went into fresh high ground at 84 7-8 and American Sugar at 65 7-8.

Rails, which had the additional impetus of a number of favorable earnings statements, were also strong. New York Central, which scored the remarkable gain of $3,746,724 in net income last month, led the Rails upward, reaching the best levels on recovery.

Stocks continued to move ahead in both the rail and industrial lists through the first hour. Steel, Studebaker, Can, Baldwin and other industrial favorites were in demand at the best levels of the present forward movement, while a number of specialties scored sharp advances. Steel Common's rise to a new high on the recovery at 92 3-4, was followed by gains in Bethlehem, Republic and other leading independents. Practically all the steel companies are expected to make a good showing in the first two months of the current quarter. Net earnings in July and August will not be far below what they were in May and June. September is likely to show some decline due partly to the change from the 12 to 8 hour day and reduced operations. Deliveries of Steel by the Steel Corporation in the third quarter will be on a higher price basis than in the second quarter and the loss in production was not as large as in the case of the independents.

For this reason United States' Steels profits in the third quarter, while showing a loss as compared with the second quarter, will be comparatively better than its competitors.

Rallying tendencies took on a broader aspect in the late morning. Even the oil shares began to participate in the recovery. Gains averaging about a point took place in Sinclair, Marland, Phillips, Petroleum, Cosden, Producers & Refiners and California Petroleum.

DOG'S TESTIMONY

Should It Be Permitted in a Court of Law?

"PETER"

FRANKLIN PARISH, La., Aug. 28.—Should a man be convicted of a crime and sentenced to die on the "testimony" of a dog?

One was!

And then, when the country still was speculating on the unusual twist that had come to courts of justice the decision was reversed.

"A reversion to barbarism," Chief Justice Charles A. O'Neill of Louisiana bitterly called the conviction, as he signed the document that sped the man whom a dog had almost sent to the gallows.

Some time ago this city was shocked by a brutal murder. Bloodhounds were unleashed. In the pack was "Peter," a great dog, wise with the wisdom of many generations of man-hunters before him.

Then followed a trial, the like of which never has been heard of before in this country. Only the dog's mute "testimony" could be offered by the state.

And the jury believed the dog—not the man!

That is what Justice O'Neill called barbarism, as cruel as witchcraft, as foreign to the supposedly inherent desire of man to give a fellow a chance.

The decision was quickly reversed Dog, the justice thought, can play a large part in solving crimes. But unless their judgment can be conclusively proved, that judgment amounts to zero in the eyes of the law.

And those are the eyes through which Man looks.

Meanwhile folks down here are divided on the action of the appeals' court. The controversy as to the accuracy of a bloodhound's testimony is the sole topic of conversation. It probably will be for generation to come.

Crop Conditions Are Excellent in Alberta.

CALGARY, Alta. Aug 28.—(Canadian Press).—In its report on the Alberta crop condition, the Calgary Herald said Saturday:

With ideal weather condition prevailing in the greater part of the province during the past week, crop reports carry a generally optimistic tone. Only a few points mention any damage.

Cutting is general in some parts of the southern country and is expected to be under way in all portions of the province by the end of the month. Showers have occurred in a few points, and have delayed the starting of the harvest, but excellent ripening weather is reported from most sections.

BRINGING RUSSIAN BRIDES.

NEW YORK, August 28 (United Press). — The American Relief Administration here announces that two dozen of Herbert Hoover's famine fighters are bringing Russian brides with them as they are leaving the Soviet Republic.

The A. R. A. states that these workers had no trouble getting their brides out of Russia.

Most of the women speak English, and two princesses and several countesses are among the number.

Hay is being made in some places by means of an electric fan, which dries the grass as fast as it's cut.

CENTRE PARTY AGAIN HINTED

British Politicians May Have to Line Up Anew to Beat Labor Socialists.

LONDON, Aug. 28.—When Bob Smillie, former president of the Miners' Federation, entered the British House of Commons, that historic building welcomed within its walls probably one of the most pronounced rebels against the existing social order that has ever won his way into the legislative chamber.

"I am a rebel; a rebel against the existing system of society," was Smillie's battle cry, and no subterfuge of the party managers would drive him from it in his campaign in the by-election for the Morpeth Division seat. He is called intractable Bob, and he surely has been.

At the same time, it is dangerous to draw an impression of Smillie solely from his utterances. A miner from his early youth till leadership was thrust upon him, he possesses all the traits common to the average of his former colleagues, but he has a big heart in him. Like the bulk of miners he has endured all hardships attaching to the life of these men, but it cannot be said that they have altogether warped his views, or driven him, a fanatic, into the ranks of rabid socialism.

No Violently Red

When Smillie declares himself a rebel, it does not bring him within the category of those who would seek to copy Red Russia and get by force, rather than by constitutional means, their aim—the change of the existing system into the ideal Socialist state.

Whatever Smillie may be, he is not a social rebel of that order. He has too great a regard for constitutional development ever to advocate such a policy. But he is, nevertheless, a rebel, and withal, he will be a living force, an acquisition to the ranks of the Labor Party.

Bob Smillie is one of the most sagacious and astute leaders the members of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain ever had to negotiate their claims. He made eight attempts before he won a seat in the House of Commons.

He relinquished the presidency of the Miners' Federation toward the close of the disastrous strike of 1921. His resignation was declared to be precipitated by failing health and eyesight, and though his abstention from public work has in the meantime worked a deal of good, those who were familiar with events and happenings during that strike, are not prepared in the main to indorse the assumption. And there are clearly sound reasons for their not doing so. Smillie is held "to have fallen foul of the wild men from Wales and north of the Tweed." And he, rather than be driven by the extremists of the Left into a course he regarded as inimical to the interests of the miners as a whole, availed himself of the obvious opportunity the condition of his health at that time afforded him, to quit.

Frank Hodges did the best he could for the miners in difficult circumstances, but it has been urged that had Smillie dominated the situation, not only would the strike have been terminated earlier, but the miners would have emerged better off.

How About Morpeth

What of his victory at Morpeth and the conclusions to be drawn from it? To say that Labor retained the seat won at the general election last November hardly adequately reflects the situation. Before, Labor got the seat on a minority vote in a total poll of 81,078, but not so on this occasion. In a straight fight and with a higher poll recorded, namely, 33,140. Smillie came flying in with an increased majority, and in doing so unquestionably hit up the expectations of the government who were looking for a Labor defeat. It was a triangular contest in November, when the late Labor candidate, John Cairns, polled 15,026 against his Liberal opponent, who also figured in the recent fight, F. C. Thornborough, who got 10,007.

But on that occasion the Conservative nominee, C. S. Short, claimed 6,045 votes, so that the victor, while getting a majority of 5,019, actually had 974 more votes recorded against him than he received. Clearly, the Conservative Party managers in abstaining from nominating a man to contest the seat in the by-election, and in inducing the local Conservatives to give their allegiance to the Liberal candidate, were out to overthrow Labor, and thought they would do so. There was every reason for the deduction, because there was nothing in the declared policy of the Liberal candidate, F. C. Thornborough, to ostracise the Conservative vote, so, unostentatiously backing him with their machinery, they reckoned his chances ace high. But he was defeated, and there is no gainsaying the fact that Smillie had given the governing party a nasty jab. Labor can afford to be jubilant.

But Smillie is not the only man to do the trick. While Smillie was declaring himself a rebel at Morpeth, down in Tiverton, a Devonshire constituency, another by-election was being waged under precisely the same conditions as in the general election when in a triangular contest the Conservative candidate won on a majority of 74. In the by-election the tables were turned, and F. D. Acland went in by a majority of 403. Thus Smillie's victory synchronised with an actual government defeat.

Center Party Coming?

The Conservatives made light of the fact, but the object lesson is clear. Ever since the general election, the government has been steadily losing ground. The seriousness of the situation is being gripped by the party managers who are urging for reorganization of the party machinery, and Lord Birkenhead, with others, who are prone to make much of the "menace of socialism," are not assisting to inspire Conservatives with confidence in the future. Capt. Guest, the Coalition Liberal whip in the former Coalition government is another Birkenhead in ideas, launched a bomb which has Liberals falling over each other to repudiate. Chiding the Liberals up for perpetually squabbling among themselves, "what," he asks, "is the alternative to this policy?" The role of liberalism, he declares, "will in the future be no more than a political expression and an attitude of mind, becoming, as time develops, the left wing of a great national party designed to keep out the Socialists."

The captain is still wedded to the Center Party idea, and events seem to imply that Great Britain is not yet through with coalition.

The Sunday Observer says the Labor Party has in embryo what is coming to be the best political machine in the country. It is this a coalition the character of which will depend on the vagaries of machine which will some day force liberalism.

Car Jumped Off Dock and Into the Harbor.

OWEN SOUND, Aug. 28.—(Canadian Press.)—When William Robinson, of Port Elgin, cranked his Ford car, which was standing on the C.P.R. dock, it was not in gear. No sooner had he stepped from in front of the car than it jumped into gear and ran over the edge of the dock into the harbor, in twenty feet of water. It was very fortunate that Jacob Stone, his companion, was not in the car, or he would have had difficulty in getting out in the short time it required for the car to transfer itself from the dock to the bottom of the harbor. A tug pulled the car out last evening.

HERE AND THERE

SIXTY

The winner of the $100,000 Bok peace prize will present the world with its sixtieth plan for international peace since the Du Bois peace scheme was suggested in the year 1306, over 600 years ago.

Men with acid temperaments may scoff: "Sixty! And world peace not in sight. There'll always be war, as long as we have human nature."

However, for each peace scheme that has been advanced, there have been at least 1000 war schemes. And a peace scheme that will win out is inevitable—an United States of the World. Six hundred years is a very short period in the long history of humanity.

CHAINED

Tomadelli, Italian inventor, who lives in New Jersey, claims he has discovered how to harness the atom and make it, in a bulb, produce 100 candle-power of light for three years without batteries, renewals or any kind of electrical connections.

We are forever hearing of sensational discoveries that never materialize. But what Tomadelli proposes is inevitable, just a matter of time. We live in the midst of scores of terrific forces which when discovered, will relieve humanity of the bulk of its work.

This might not win the $100,000 Bok peace-plan contest. But we have a dogged notion that it would end wars:

Call a world conference and establish an international law by which all legislators or executives who voted for war would have to join the army as privates in the first troops sent to battle.

QUESTION

A German is murdered in England, and Scotland Yard detectives take the trail. The murderer, believed to be an Englishman, will be hanged if caught. Both are ex-soldiers, former enemies.

If he had killed his victim five years ago, when both were in uniform of opposing armies, the law would have commended him.

In other words, killing is an ethical matter in one year and a legal problem in another.

JAVA

In Java, which has a population a third as big as ours, bubonic plague is so common that it kills half of the children before they are five years old. The Javanese take this as a matter of course, reports William Ferguson, globe trotter. He found the people of Java with the viewpoint that if the plague didn't kill half the children the island shortly would be unable to sustain the inhabitants despite its fertility.

Nature is cynical in its harshness. She deals only in cause and effect, action and reaction, and the thing we call emotion is alien to her plans. Civilization is merely a banding together for mutual protection against harsh nature. Most of us have lost sight of this original purpose.

THIEF

The bluejay, long reputed to be an habitual robber of other birds' eggs, is vindicated by the New Jersey Audubon Society. It analyzed the stomachs of 292 bluejays and found traces of eggs in only three of the stomachs. Three transgress and the other 289 are blamed, a rule that is applied by people to other people in all ramifications of life. A minority of drunkards brought prohibition for the temperate majority.

PIN STRIPES.

The use of pin stripes is an interesting feature of many of the early tailor mades.

CLEAN RICE.

Rice should be washed in at least three waters, rubbing the grains between the hands.

Big Families

The Ormsby quadruplets, who became nationally famous as dime museum attractions in 1902, still are living. It is said by authorities that this is the only case of all four members of a quadruple birth surviving into maturity.

She was 26 years old when she married Charles Ormsby, plumber, in 1894. Her children came as follows:

1895—A boy.
1896—Twins.
1897—A girl.
1898—Twins.
1899—Triplets.
1901—Quadruplets.

Fourteen children in seven years! The quadruplets consisted of three sons and a daughter. They packed the dime museums for a couple of years and thereby brought considerable wealth to their mother.

The birth of a baby girl to Mrs. Mary J. Barton of Kellyville, N. H., recently made her the mother of 20 children at the age of 45.

You don't often hear of such big families in our generation. In grandfather's day, a family of 20 children would not have attracted much attention for a perusal of the average family Bible will disclose that five or six children were considered a small family in Civil War times and, while offspring totaled 20 only occasionally, 12 to 17 children were not at all uncommon.

Big families are getting fewer as the years slip by. The mother of 20 children is almost as much of a curiosity in 1923 as the Ormsby quadruplets were in 1901.

There'd be plenty of 20-children families, however, if the economic pinch were not quite so tight, though Lemuel R. Barton, farmer-father of the big New England family, says he finds it as easy to take care of 20 as of 5.

Proudly he points out that if every family had 20 children our communities would have a great increase in population. They certainly would. There are about 20 million families in America, and if each had 20 children our population would be around 440 millions—four times as big as it is now. However, we'll have that population, and more, in time.

GHOSTS LIGHTS OF SWEDEN EXPLAINED

Experts Allay Fears of Farmers at Unusual Appearances

STOCKHOLM, August 28.—The mystery of the "ghost lights" emanating from Lake Lekvattnet ("Playing Water") in Sweden, which has long thrilled the inhabitants of Vaermland, the picturesque home country of Selma Lagerlof, has now been mercilessly dispelled by science as embodied in the Swedish Bureau of Geological Research. Two of the Bureau's investigators have just returned from the locality with a natural explanation, which, however, may not entirely satisfy the more imaginative country folk, and, indeed, the scientific explanation is itself almost a mystery.

The "ghost light," which has often been seen over Lekvattnet, seems to have become particularly active about a year ago.

Farmers driving home on dark winter nights were startled again and again by the appearance of globe-like masses of blue-white light sailing along through the air. Doubting Thomases heard their big-eyed tales, and were taken to the spot to see with their own eyes that the "ghost light" was real. Soon the whole country-side could talk about nothing else. Sophisticated newspaper men made fun of the whole affair. But the "ghost lights" could not be laughed away. Finally two experts were sent out by the Geolorical Bureau to investigate the matter.

Samples Obtained

These scientists obtained numerous samples of the mud of the lake, and have determined by laboratory tests that the mud from Lekvattnet contains an unusually large percentage of phosphorous. From this mud, they infer, luminescent gases escape to the surface of the lake, whence they apparently drift away in more or less compact masses before the wind.

It is even possible, the investigators say, for such gases to rise through cracks and perforations in the ice during the winter. The reasons why these lights were seldom, if ever, seen during the summers, it was explained, was due to the fact that the summer nights in Sweden have only two or three hours of darkness intense enough to make the "ghost lights" visible.

But the geological experts admit that they were not able to capture any specimens of the phosphorescent gases and are talking of making an attempt to do so next year. Meanwhile the quaint phototypes of Selma Lagerlof heroes chuckle knowingly. They had never expected the "professors from Stockholm" to catch the "ghost lights."

MILLBROOK AND CAVAN REUNION WAS BEST YET

Old Boys and Girls Perpetuate Spirit of Romance and Revive Memories of Former School Days.

FROM FAR AND NEAR.

(By Staff Reporter).

MILLBROOK, Aug. 28.—The Financial Post to the contrary notwithstanding, the spirit of romance is not dead in Ontario when it can stage such an Old Boys' and Girls' Re-Union as was held by the people of Cavan and Millbrook for the last three days.

Yesterday morning the most interesting item in the entire programme was given, when school was held in Town Hall, the school being unavailable for the purpose, on account of occupation by workmen engaged in putting in the four new rooms which are being added to the building.

At nine o'clock, the bell in the Town Hall summoned the scholars to school, and in the Council Chamber, they gathered nearly two hundred of them, to renew old schoolday memories, and spend one of the jolliest hours of the re-union together. Some were tardy and paid their excuses to the teacher, ex-Principal P. Hampton, who taught school in the village schoolhouse (the traditional red in color) for over thirty-five years. Three more older teachers were present, Mrs. L. Rae of Millbrook, formerly Miss Lottie Hampton; Miss Emma Fetherington, who taught in the village for a quarter of a century, and the "dean" of them all, Miss Sarah Dean herself, who commenced teaching at the age of fifteen years, and guided the educational destinies of Millbrook's youth for nearly half a century of time. Miss Dean, whose enjoyment of the re-union was marred by the death last week of her brother, Armstrong Dean of Toronto, was greeted with prolonged cheers on her appearance. For Mr. Hampton also, their old principal the "boys and girls" gave three cheers and sang "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

The Roll-Call.

The session commenced with "Auld Lang Syne" and finished with the same old tune, sung with intertwined hands. A happy suggestion of Judge Clarry of Calgary, one of the "old boys," was followed out, and proved one of the most entertaining items of the session, in a roll-call, during which each pupil announced his name, the ladies given their maiden titles. Familiar names were greeted with applause. High spirits and much laughter and a buzz of talk marked the "school," during which reminiscences by the old boys were much enjoyed. Mr. Hampton spoke first, alluding in his brief address to some of the Old Boys, among them Dr. Turner of Millbrook, Judge Vance of Barrie and Judge Clarry of Calgary, George Dean, Jim Edwards of Montreal and his brother Joe of Portland, Maine, both of whom are in the employ of the Canadian National Railways, Walter Allen, a barrister resident in the United States, Will Turner, a ...ggist of Victoria, B.C., Walter ...ns, a bank manager in Western ...o, Tom Stinson, crown at- ... of Lindsay, the Pickup family, the Walsh boys, the Clarry ...ller girls, A. Mulligan of ... Dr. Fred Mulligan of Pe... Kelly, George Fitzgerald ...a, Bruce White, the Burn... and Leachs, and Campbells, Duncan and Allie Payne, and Hetherington boys, the Clark ...mily, Reg Given, and W. Leggott, superintendent of education in Saskatchewan.

The chairman, Rev. Canon Allen, followed, asking Sam Hunter, an old boy who has made a name for himself as cartoonist for the Toronto Globe, to speak, describing him as a man of three worlds, as having belonged at different times to The World, The Globe and The Moon.

Mr. Hunter spoke briefly, in the humorous vein which characterized the utterances of all the speakers. Referring to the beginnings of his own career as a cartoonist, he mentioned the invaluable aid afforded by the geography in shielding the attempts of his early school-day along that line, and alluded to the policy of "speed" and "safety first" after one of his endeavors had been published which he still found a safe one to pursue.

Oldest Members.

The two oldest members at the reunion were John Duncan of Collingwood and George Hetherington of Millbrook. Mr. Duncan spoke for himself and his confrere in his remembrances of early days, and his allusion to the "force and power" with which early education was meted out to the pupils of Millbrook school.

Cotton pants and single braces to hold them up, with pink sunbonnets for the girls and cotton frocks were among Mr. Duncan's memories, and his reference to a certain schoolteacher named Dinsdale brought from Canon Allen a remembrance of that gentleman's habit of sending his unruly scholars to "China."

Judge George Vance of Barrie, a tall gentleman who requested his old mates to call him "Shorty" again, remembered Joe Fallis as the "prince of vandals" of those early days, and Judge Clarry of Calgary, following him, referred to the occasion when "Shorty" Vance and Joe Redmond had a great fight, and the prowess of one Maggie Williamson, an adept in pin-sticking.

Judge Vance moved, seconded by Judge Clarry, a resolution of sympathy to Miss Dean on the death of her brother.

George Fitzgerald of Regina recalled the day when he and his old school-mate, now Dr. Mulligan, stole their teacher's rawhide and hid it safely, as they thought, to find that it had been resurrected the day following, in a mysterious manner.

A telegram of regret at inability to be present was read from Arthur and Don Vance of Winnipeg, and the morning session ended with the taking of a panoramic photograph of the entire group in front of the Town Hall.

Plenty of Music.

The band made an early start yesterday morning in its good work, serenading the citizens at half-past six o'clock with a variety of tunes. A favorite, oft repeated by this very melodious and hard-working organization, was the somewhat pathetically played melody "Nobody Knows How Dry I Am," and they specialized also on "Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here."

The infection of "Home Sweet Home" was felt in vocal and instrumental music alike. Two passing mouth-organ performers on Sunday morning centred on the old tune with its wistful cadences.

A re-union such as this brings with it times, and none the least of these were stories of the renowned Cavan "Blazers." Of the occasion that gave them their name, it is said that they rode through the village one day, while feeling in gay mood, on a pile of blazing straw, and an observer said "There go the Cavan Blazers." Talk also was of the old times, and the people who lived in them, like the old gentleman who was exceptionally fond of fowl, who used to entice ducks from the pond by baiting a rod with meat, and whose thirst led him to the inn with a handful of rats in his pockets to let loose on the premises if his plea went unsatisfied. Those were the times, too, when the villagers used to walk to Port Hope, or Smith's Creek, on a pleasant afternoon, taking the soft dirt road through the forest, and when it was said of a workman in York, (now Toronto) visiting his home over the week-end, that he would walk the eighty miles and more in the space of a twelve-hour jaunt.

Family Gathering.

Yesterday, the Swain family held a separate gathering for dinner and supper on the Mansion grounds, between fifty and sixty of the connections of old John Swain, whose down-town picture was inscribed as "Born 1788. Settled in Cavan, 1820. Died when 89 years old. First reeve of Cavan township," being present for the occasion. They came from the district, and from Peterboro, Ingersoll and Toronto.

A warm and sunny day smiled on Millbrook yesterday, and a monster crowd, numbering well over two thousand, assembled in the afternoon at the Agricultural Grounds to watch a couple of ball games and a lacrosse match the last played between the Old Boys and Millbrook.

Parade of Cars.

Preceding the meeting, a parade of decorated cars was held, led by the band, prizes going to (1) F. C. Letts of Toronto. Mr. Letts, who, with his brother, a multi-millionaire at the time of his death, came out from England and worked on a farm near Millbrook many years ago, had a gaily-decorated car which attracted much attention for the three days of the re-union. The second prize went to Miss Kathleen Thorndyke of Millbrook, the third to W. G. Rowland of Millbrook and the fourth to H. Strong, of Peterboro.

On the grounds, where a string of cars numbering nearly three hundred rested in orderly rows, and a busy, jovial crowd gathered about the refreshment booths and the roped-off enclosure devoted to sports, the population of the village took advantage of a splendid opportunity to renew old acquaintances and exchange reminiscence. The east met west earlier in the re-union when Tom Campbell of Regina and Joe Edwards of Portland, Maine, shook hands, but yesterday people who were unable to come on Sunday foregathered from many miles away. On the grassy plain surrounded by its fringe of low hills and green shrubbery, the old boys played lacrosse. It was a wonderful and mighty game, with plenty of vim and vigor in its hard-won goals. A free for all scrimmage resulted on more than one occasion, and the spectators side-stepped in lively fashion as the charging old boys bore down upon them, intent on one thing and one thing only; the ball.

The lacrosse match was preceded by a baseball game between the U.F.O. team of South Monaghan and the Milbrook players. The score resulted in 7-4, in favor of Millbrook. Some of the fielding was sensational; and three casualties were suffered by onlookers during its progress. An unnamed young lady was slightly injured by the impact of a heavy and unexpected ball on her head; Wilbur Barnard of South Monaghan had his eye cut in the same manner, and little Gordon Blue, a small boy watcher, sustained a broken arm by getting in the way of a hard-thrown ball during the early stages of the encounter.

South Monaghan U.F.O. — W., Lord, c; R. Hutchinson, p; H. Dawson, 1b; S. Hutchinson, lf; L. Dawson, 3b; R. Deyell, 2b; F. Fisher, rf; Ray, Hutchinson, ss; W. Johnson, cf.

Millbrook— C. Larmer, ss; B. Price, 2b; E. Richards, c; A. McCurry, p; W. Sayles, 1b; R. Edmund, 3b; H. Lancashire, lf; H. Nattrass, cf; B. Richards, rf; J. Cathcart of Cavan acted as umpire.

A busy man who rendered splendid service during the re-union should not be forgotten. Ex-Principal Hampton did good work as registrator. He was unique in the performance of the duties of a travelling registrar, his arm emblazoned with a sign "Register Here", as he made his way about the grounds on all occasions, with a book wherein visitors signed their names in their own brand of hand-writing, thus forming an invaluable record in more ways than one.

The Roll-Call

Among the Peterborough people noticed during the re-union were several old boys and girls: Dr. N. Greer, Mr. and Mrs. S. T. Medd, Robt. Fair, Mrs. D. C. King, Mrs. M. A. Morrison, a grand-daughter of John Deyell, N. Staples, George McCartney, E. Burnham, T. Burnham.

The Bull and The Bear
Discuss The Business Situation

Explanatory Note:—While this article is intended for business men, it takes for the names of its characters the well-known "Bull" and "Bear" of the Stock Exchange. On the Stock Exchange the man who takes a bright outlook and declares stocks are going up is called a "Bull." The one who takes a gloomy view and says stocks are going down is known as a "Bear."

IT was a bright, sunny day and Bull was whistling cheerily as he turned a corner quickly and almost bumped into an old acquaintance, Mr. Bear.

'It will take more than a bit of sunshine to make me forget how bad things are in this country," growled Mr. Bear.

"Oh, come now. You'll feel better after a good meal," said Bull, with a smile. "Let's drop into the Blueberry Inn."

"Rot," snorted Bull. And taking the protesting Bear by the arm he led him to the Blueberry Inn.

Lunch ordered and the soup on the table, Mr. Bull genially inquired:—

"What's upsetting you, Bear? Your business hasn't gone to the wall, has it?"

"Well, no," grudgingly admitted Bear. "But things will never be any good in this country. We are swamped with debt." And a tear dropped out of Bear's eye into his soup.

"Nonsense, Bear. Canada's national debt is only $267.77 per head—and a large part of it is excellently invested in national railroads and public works. The National Railways are getting on their feet. The Dominion Net Debt was reduced $6,000,000 during July. Our debt is now only about one-third per head of that of Great Britain. Do you mean to tell me a Canadian cannot carry a third as much debt on his shoulders as an Englishman?"

"But we are so poor," whined Bear.

"Don't be ridiculous. We are not poor." And by way of emphasis Bull brought his fist down on the table with such a bang that the salt and pepper shakers danced a fox trot! "At the present time," continued Mr. Bull, "Canadians have one and three-quarter billions of dollars invested in Dominion of Canada Bonds. In 1913, Canadians only held 12 per cent. of Canadian Government Bonds. Now we own 68.7 per cent. of them. A wonderful sign of financial strength. We also have one and a quarter billions in the Savings Banks and half a billion in demand deposits in the Banks."

"But the individual Canadian, Bull. He has no money. He's up against it. It's pretty tough."

"Beg pardon," broke in the solicitous waiter. "Did you say the lamb was tough? I thought it was very tender and juicy!"

"No, it's all right," Bear replied.

"You were saying the individual Canadian has no money," said Bull. "Well, he has savings in the banks equal to $800 per family. During the past three years he has increased his per capita investment in Canadian Government bonds no less than 35 per cent. Experts declare that the wealth of Canada figures out at $2,000 per head, not counting undeveloped water power, farm land and mineral fields."

"Is that so, Bull? That's surprising. I hadn't any idea we were that well off. But if all you say is true, what makes business so rotten?" And Bear was so overcome with emotion he choked on a piece of carrot!

"Easy there, Bear. Business isn't rotten. In fact, our international trade is very large, and our exports exceed our imports which is a very healthy sign. Our foreign trade per head of population stands among the highest of commercial nations, being $192 per capita in 1922-23 as compared with $135 in 1913-14, the "peak" year before the war.

"Furthermore, Bear, just look at the number of new residences that have been built in Canada—one hundred million dollars worth of them during the past twelve months. People can't build all these houses unless they have money.

"May be so, Bull," half-heartedly admitted Mr. Bear.

"There's every probability business will be better. Canada is going to have good crops. The wheat crop in the west is a very satisfactory one. That should make a pessimist like you give three rousing cheers."

Mr. Bear smiled for the first time at this remark, which encouraged Bull to continue:

"Canada cannot help but go ahead, Bear. Not even the pessimists can stop her, though they can hold her back.

"Canada has greater natural resources than all the countries of Europe combined. No other country has as large an area of rich virgin lands open for settlement. There are only 50,000,000 acres under cultivation out of a total of 350,000,000 fit for tillage.

"Right here along Canada's sea coasts and in her lakes and rivers are the world's most extensive and best stocked fishing waters. In our vast forests is the greatest supply of pulpwood in the world. And Canada takes the lead in furs, too."

"That's most interesting, Bull," broke in Mr. Bear, and would have continued, but Bull silenced him with a wave of the hand.

"Wait 'till I finish, Bear. Do you know that 85 per cent of the world's production of Asbestos and Asbestic is produced in Canada? 85 per cent of the world's supply of nickel is mined here. We are now one of the greatest silver and gold producing countries of the world. Our riches are almost unbelievable, Bear. Why, man alive, if there is any country in the world that is certain to enjoy good times it is Canada."

"It might be better if it's Boss wasn't so pessimistic."

"What do you mean, Bull?" Mr. Bear didn't know whether to be angry or curious.

"Just this, Bear. If you go around talking blue ruin, if you keep feeding your travellers a line of sad, depressing, pessimistic talk, they, being only human, will take their cue from you and feed the same kind of dope to the trade. The trade will think your line is a slow seller and will buy sparingly or not at all."

"Hum. May be some truth in what you say," said Bear, thoughtfully stroking his chin.

"There's a whole lot, Bear. The trade and the public want to buy best sellers. By the way, what have you done to push sales?"

"Push sales! Why I've made life miserable for my Sales Manager and hounded my travellers. I've reduced salaries, fired three travellers and divided their territories among the other fellows, and given them more work to do. I cut our advertising in two at the beginning of the year. Later on I cut it out altogether. But things don't seem to improve. What have you done, Bull?"

"Well, I planned to go after business harder than ever. I added an Assistant Sales Manager, a real live wire! I sent my Sales Manager out a couple of days a week to help the boys tackle the hard nuts or go after the big fellows. And I went on some road trips myself, just to get into intimate touch with the situation. Then I got out a couple of bright window trim ideas for the retailers' use. And I increased my national advertising by a third."

"Well, you had your nerve, Bull?"

"Better call it Faith, Bear. I, also, instructed our travellers to talk faith in Canada, to be optimistic, to carry a message of courage, good cheer and confidence into every store they entered.

"Boys," I said:

"Have Faith in Canada

have faith in yourself, have faith in your goods, have faith in your Company, have faith in the advertising, and we will surely put things over."

"How are things going, Bull?"

"Fine! We are selling goods. Our men are full of pep and confidence. The dealers like our optimistic talk. Our increased advertising shows them we really have faith in Canada and are after business hard. They're responding with good orders and are behind our goods. When the tide of good times sweeps across the country, as it surely will, we are well-organized to cash in big. In fact, the tide is already rising. The Savings Bank deposits are $33,000,000 greater now than a year ago, which indicates a big increase in the buying power of Canadians."

"Well, I must be going now, Bull. I certainly enjoyed such a good lunch. And your talk about faith in Canada has given me food for thought. I think I'll go out and buy some new clothes and don the mantle of optimism. It's hard for a Bear to become a Bull, but I'll do my best to show my faith in Canada. You know I'm really proud I'm a Canadian even if I do growl and grouch. And in my heart I believe you've got the right dope, Bull."

INATTENTIVE TO DRY LEGISLATION

NEW YORK—Aug. 28 (Associated Press).—Of 11 States in the eastern part of the United States, six took action through their legislatures last winter toward more stringent prohibition enforcement. Notable among these was Pensylvania. In four others no action was taken, while in New York the existing enforcement measure was repealed. A summary of the situation follows:

Delaware—An effort to amend the Klair prohibition enforcement law at the last session of the Delaware legislature was defeated in the closing hours of the session when a bill introduced by Representative Joseph M. Brogan, Democrat, died in committee. The measure was drafted by the Delaware State Medical Society and endorsed by the State Dental Society. It provided for a modification of the law to make it possible for druggists to fill prescriptions of physicians for medicinal purposes where the use of alcoholic stumulants was deemed necessary.

Opponents of the bill and many of those in favor of modification of the Klair law expressed the opinion that the measure was too drastic, and that it practically would nullify the law.

New York—Repeal of the Mullan-Gate state prohibition enforcement statute, adoption of a memorial to Congress requesting modification of the Volstead Act so as to legalize the traffic in beer and wine, and passage of a bill preventing search and seizure by peace officers of the state without a warrant, were the chief contributions of the New York Legislature to the wet and dry controversy.

The bill repealing the enforcement statute was the center of the storm. Introduced on the opening day of the session, it several times failed to muster a majority of votes in the Assembly after a successful trip through the Senate, but finally was passed by a margin of one vote a few hours before final adjournment, nearly fifteen weeks after its introduction. Its subsequent approval by Governor Smith and the memorandum in which he set forth the reasons for his action are now political history.

The governor, in his annual message to the Legislature, recommended adoption of the memorial to Congress. The search and seizure gill amended the Civil Rights Law by making mandatory instead of permissive that section providing that the right of the people to be secure against unreasonable search and seizure should not be violated. The purpose of this amendment, it was generally understood, was to preveht search, by state officials without warrants, of automobiles and other vehicles on the highways.

West Virginia—The West Virginia 1923 legislature, at its recent session, amended the present prohibition law fixing heavier penalties for violations. An added section provided a sentence of from one to three years for any person found to have firearms or other weapons on his person or in a vehicle at or within 100 yards of the place where intoxicating liquors are being unlawfully manufactured, transported or sold.

Connecticut—During the last session of the Connecticut legislature there were introduced bills to repeal the present state enforcement laws and to increase the lawful alcoholic content of liquors, as well as a resolution to mealize the Congress of the Unitedmor States to change the Volstead Law so as to allow light wines and beer.

An effort towards ratification of the Eighteenth Amendment was stopped by a ruling that refusal to ratify by a previous session ended the matter.

The bills to repeal the liquor laws and to alter the alcoholic content in liquors were rejected on unfavorable committee reports with little contest. The proposed memorial to Congress received much verbal attention, but few votes.

Maine—New acts require a federal permit to transport liquor, with fine of $500 and $600, and jail sentence of three to six months; provide penalty of not more than $1,000 or imprisonment for nos more than three years for conspiracy to sell liquor in the state; penalty $500 to $1,000 and jail sentence of six months to two years for drivers of liquor cars not having owner's permission in writing to use them, thus providing for forfeiture of automobiles and preventing evasion of responsibility through the plea that owners lack knowledge of the use made of cars. Conforming to the national act, the Maine statute which formerly read "sale within the state" now relates to liquor "intended for sale," and is designed to prohibit shipments from Canada to other states through Maine.

New Hampshire—No prohibition discussion. Penalties for driving automobile while under influence of liquor made more severe.

Vermont—Penalty for persons manufacturing, selling or transporting liquor fixed at $300 to $1,000 fine and imprisonment three to twelve months. Other prohibition enforcement acts were passed at session two years ago.

Massachusetts—State laws amended to authorize state or local officers to proceed against those manufacturing, transporting or selling liquors containing more alcoholic content than that prescribed by law. Papars are now in circulation to make this statute the subject of referendum at the next state election, in November, 1924, and if the necessary 15,000 signatures are obtained before the 90 days allowed have expired, the effect will be to hold up the operation of the act until it has been acted upon by the people.

Rhode Island—No change made in state enforcement act passed two years ago. A bill to submit to the people the question of repeal of the act passed the House this year but died later in committee.

Pennsylvania—A prohibition en-force ment act, sponsored by Governor Gifford Pinchot, was enacted by the 1923 Pennsylvania legislature. It repealed an enforcement law passed by the 1921 legislature, which provided a system of licenses for hotels, saloons and similar places, permitting them to sell beverages which came within the legal requirements fixed by Congress. It also provided more stringent search and seizure and burden of proof sections than the old law.

The 1923 legislature defeated administration measures designed to license and regulate breweries and to control the manufacture and sale of alcohol for commercial, scientific and medicinal purposes and refused to grant $250,000 asked by the governor for "law enforcement" under his personal direction. The $250,000 was carried in the general appropriation bill, providing funds for the ordinary expenses of the state government, and was entirely independent of the prohibition enforcement act itself. The manner in which it was to be used was not disclosed, other than that it was intended for prohibition enforcement particularly.

THE NEW MOTOR BUS

Mister Daddy Long Legs had an idea.

So he went to a sign painter in Pee Wee Land and had a sign painted and then he hung it up and then he waited.

This is what the sign said:

Take the Bus and See the Sights
All points of Pee Wee Land
Price One Cent

By 'n' by along came Nancy and Nick in their little magic shoes.

"Where's the bus" asked Nick.

"I'm it," said Daddy Long Legs.

"Humph!" remarked Nancy. "You're a nice bus. Why you could only carry one passenger on your back and he'd have to be a little one at that."

"Oh, go on!" said Daddy Long Legs crossly. "I can take nine. One on each of my eight legs and one on my back."

"Oh, come along, Nancy!" said Nick. "Let's take a ride. I'll go on one of his legs and you can sit on his back. I think Daddy's a fine motor bus."

This put everybody in a good humor, so up hopped Nancy, and up crawled Nick, and just then some other little Pee Wee Landers came along and saw the sign and rushed home for pennies and pretty soon old Daddy had a good load for his trip.

And away he started.

"Please take us to the barnyard first," asked Tommy Tumble "I never was so far away from home and I do want to see a rooster."

"Oh, no, no!" shivered Daddy. "I can't do that. This bus doesn't go to the chicken yard."

"Then,' said Winky Wank, "please take us up a tree to see a bird's nest. I never saw one."

Daddy shivered harder than ever. "Oh, no, I couldn't," he replied. "This bus doesn't go to birds' nests."

"Then take us over to the frog pond. I want to see what it looks like,' piper up Dary Dumpy.

All the little Pee Wee Landers as well as the Twins scrambled down. "Give us back our pennies," they all cried. "Your old bus isn't any good at all."

Your Health
By DR. CLIFFORD C. ROBINSON
(How's Your Heart ?)

The engine of a great ocean liner gets a rest after driving the ship 4000 miles across the ocean. The human heart, a more wonderful engine, never gets a rest until it stops for good. Its weight is only about three-quarters of a pound. Day after day and year after year it throbs away at the average speed of 72 beats a minute. It drives the blood throughout the body to repair waste and build up new tissues.

If an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure, what can we do to prevent this wonderful little engine from getting out of order? Medical science knows more about the heart to-day, and the means of combatting its diseases, so there is always hope for you, if your heart has gone wrong. The layman must take heed and learn to know the precautionary preventive means to apply when the first dist.. a signals appear. The heart is strong in recuperative powers so take courage if you find your heart is a little out of kilter.

Health is Priceless.

The most trivial defects should be checked up at once. Examination by a physician once or twice year is not too great a price to pay for priceless health. To wait until you have to reform or live the hygienic life is like a drowning man grasping at straws.

Early heart defects may have been caused by the toxins of scarlet fever, diphtheria, pneumonia or acute rheumatism, which is frequently a children's disease and a heart disturber. Be careful of your children, and guard against all diseases of the nose and throat. A healthy throat will go a long way toward staving off any beginning heart murmurs or endocarditis.

Sometimes weak heart has been caused by early athletic excesses, when the heart has been severely overtaxed and its muscles stretched. This may mean leaky heart and the end of athletics for the patient. At the period of puberty, both boys and girls are liable to have some increased arterial tension and heart action. If fathers and mothers are sensible and correct hygienic laws are explained to them serious heart and blood troubles may be avoided in later years

Sanitation Necessary.

Do not under any circumstances wear the same clothing at night as you have during the day . This habit if kept up may cause poisons which have been thrown off by the pores of the skin to be reabsorbed by the blood and injure the heart action. This may apply to country people more than to city folks. It may be good heart advice to say that in the country or on the farm a bath tub is just as important as a telephone, and perhaps more so.

Over-indulgence in eats, especially heavy meals at night, or continued high living are responsible for about one half of the poor wornout hearts. Many of you who dress in a hurry, gulp down your breakfast, rush for a train, or dash up the elevated stairs like a wild man and wear that serious expresion on your face, are living like an army with all its reserves in action. It's bad business for a weak heart or a strong one either.

Stimulants Dangerous.

Avoid all alcoholic stimulants when any heart trouble appears. Don't let the insurance man tell you that he will have to turn you down on account of a tobacco heart. If you are in doubt of what your body thinks of smoking, remember what happened to you when you smoked your first cigar.

Chronic nephritis leaky heart,long continued high blood pressure, apoplexy, or angina pectoris, in fact any serious menace to the heart action is not for you to try to remedy execpt under a physician's care. It can not be conclusively shown at present to just what causes the increase of heart disease in our country is due. Outside of the general reasons indicated it may be ascribed to our lack of fitting into our rapidly changing civilization.

Holds Wilhelm Chained to Island Home in Holland

Von Oldenburg Has Told The Crown Prince To Wait in the Interest Of His Son.

(By CARL D. GROAT)

BERLIN, Aug. 28 (United Press).—The advice of one man is the sole thing that keeps former Crown Prince Wilhelm chained to his desert island off the Dutch coast, instead of returning to his homeland.

Not cowardice, as some say, not lack of affection for his fatherland or his family, nor the opposition of certain of his country—men are continuing him in his exile.

The man whose counsels keep him there is the 68-year-old castle lord of Januschau in Ostelbien Elard von Oldenburg. This man, known even before the war in the Reichstag as the betenoir of the radical parties, has told Wilhelm to bide his time. Rather live a few years more in the pitiable isolation of Oesterland, on the isle of Wieringen, in the Zuidersee, Oldenburg has told him, than seek now to come back to his wife, his children, his beautiful castle Caecilienhof, near Potsdam, to his horses and his sports. Some Germans say the Crown Prince is a coward, but his friends who know his daring in peace and in war say that is a lie.

The Time Not Yet

But Oldenburg, from his little-known castle beyond the Elbe, has told the Crown Prince that he must let time run its course in his own interest and in the interest of his 17-year-old son, who is living with the Crown Princess Caecilie in Potsdam.

And Oldenburg, has made it clear to him a return now—it could not be hindered—would mean the unchaining of internal troubles which could lead to desperate consequences for the fatherland. Oldenburg knows and he convinced the Crown Prince that many of the young hotspurs among the former officer corps would take his return as a signal for many ill-considered deeds, which, in turn, would be answered by communist attempts to proclaim a Bolshevik terror in Germany.

Oldenburg has been a friend of the Kaiser's family throughout his life. He is owner of a castle and a large estate in Ostelbien and is one of the leaders in the monarchistic movement, which has its breeding ground among the Junker estates of East Prussia and Pommerania.

Objected to Marriage

Oldenburg is counted as one of the sharpest opponents of the ex-Kaiser's marriage to Princess Hermine, but the fact that he disliked the father's action only served to bind him closer to the Kaiser's son. Even before the war, Oldenburg was in the position to counsel the Crown Prince and his weird influence—an influence surpassing even the ordinary influence of friendship—makes it possible for him to keep the youthful Hohenzollern patiently in exile.

Meantime while many monarchists wait for the return of the Crown Prince, others are setting their hopes in the prince's oldest son Wilhelm, a boy 17, who is being educated by his mother, the former crown princess of Potsdam. His well-bred manner, and other good qualities inherited from his mother make him an especially popular figure for many who want to see the Hohenzollern regime restored.

RADIO HOTEL IS DETROIT'S LATEST.

Receiving Set In Each of Its 1,215 Guest Rooms.

DETROIT, Aug. 28. — (United Press). — The radio hotel is the latest.

With a radio receiving set in each of its 1,215 guest rooms, the Book-Cadillac Hotel, under construction here, will be completed October 1, 1924.

A radio broadcasting station, with maximum power, will be installed on the roof of the 30-storey hotel, and special telephone installations will allow use of the telephones for radio receiving, while not being used for local conversations. An order to the switchboard operator will be all that is necessary to have the 'phone connected with the radio set.

The hotel is being erected on the downtown site formerly occupied by the historic Cadillac Hotel, which, at one time, was considered as the finest hostelry in the middle-west.

With its 30 stories, the hotel will be the tallest transient hotel in the world, and will be Detroit's tallest building. It is being erected and furnished at a cost of $14,000,000.

ITALY SEEKS GEM FROM EX-EMPRESS.

The "Florentine" Is One of World's Famous Jewels—Long History.

GENEVA, Aug. 28. — (United Press.)— Rome messages indicate that the Italian government will try to prevent ex-Empress Zita disposing of the famous diamond known as the "Florentine," which formerly adorned the family jewel chest of the Hapsburgs.

The stone was pledged, with other jewels, by the ex-Emperor Karl, to a Swiss bank, to finance his last ill-fated dash for the Austrian throne, but as Zita needs money urgently, she is understood to be selling her rights of redemption of these jewels.

The "Florentine" is one of the world's most famous diamonds and weights 139 1-2 carats. It is valued to-day at 30,000,000 Italian lire. Its early history is tragic. Four and a half centuries ago a peasant, looting the dead outside the walls of Nancy (France) during the siege of that city by Charles the Bold Duke of Burgundy, discovered the jewel on the finger of a body which had been half eaten by wolves. The body was that of the Bold Burgundian.

The peasant sold the ring to a Jew for a few silver coins, and through various channels, and at every increasing prices, the "Florentine" found its way to the coffers of the famous Borgia family. Thence in the course of years, and by methods which have always been regarded as of doubtful legality, it reached the Hapsburgs.

At the downfall of the Austro-Hungarian empire, the Italian government claimed the "Florentine" among its share of the Austrian crown jewels handed over under the Versailles treaty but the Emperor Karl had other views and took it with him when he left Austria hurriedly. Karl used it to raise money, but the Italian government never admitted the legality of his possession of the jewel, and now that Zita is reported to be selling it, the Rome authorities are taking action to prevent the sale.

Spanish Battleship Aground Off Melilla.

LONDON, Aug. 28.—(Canadian Press)—The Spanish battleship Espana is aground off Melilla, Morocco, according to a Central News despatch from Gibraltar. Assistance has been sent from Gibraltar.

The Spanish dreadnought Espana about a week ago received orders to sail to the North African coast and a few days later came news from the scene of the fighting between the Spaniards and the Moroccan tribesmen that the battleship had silenced the rebel guns at Alhucemas. In the operations against the Moors in the summer of 1921 the Espana also had a large part. The maximum displacement of the Espana, which was launched in 1912, is 15,700 tons.

WOMEN WON FIGHT ON ASPHALT PLANT

It Blackened Homes and Spoiled Washings So Women Moved It.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 28.—(United Press).—Most cities are accustomed to offering bonuses and other inducements for factories and the like, but not so with McKeesport, a hustling community near here.

McKeesport has just won a long fight, mainly carried on by women, to rid the city of an asphalt plant, which the women claimed blackened their homes, spoiled washings, curtains and carpets and was likely to kill the babies.

The women living in the neighborhood of the asphalt plant appeared before the McKeesport City Council and angrily demanded action, holding in their arms blackened faces of their babies and soiled pieces of washing and household goods.

The City Council said "Wait." But the women refused to wait and that night tore up a gas line running into the asphalt plant. The plant got its gas some other way and continued to pour clouds of evil smelling smoke over the city.

Then the city of McKeesport obtained an injunction but the plant continued making asphalt, because the president of the asphalt company could not be found. The city sued employees of the firm and still work continued. Finally the president of the asphalt plant got tired eluding detectives and entered into an agreement whereby the plant is to be moved to a distance some miles from the city's homes.

To make sure, however, the city of McKeesport, at the insistance of the women, placed a guard at the plant and demanded a bond of $2,000.

UNIQUE WALKING RACE IN ENGLAND

Middle-Aged Members of Parliament Walked 23 Miles With Full Military Pack.

LONDON, Aug. 28. — (Canadian Press).—More notice on the sport pages of the English newspapers was given yesterday to the ancient and honorable exercise of walking than to golf, horse-riding, tennis and cricket put together.

Much of the ambulatory interest was focused on a couple of middle-aged members of Parliament who engaged in a challenge walk from Banbury Cross to Exford, a distance of 23½ miles, each stepping with a full military pack flung over his shoulders. The remaining columns printed about tramping concerned the veteran pedestrian, George Cummings, who strode off from London in an attempt to walk the 200 miles to York in faster time than that recently required by an Arabian horse named "The Sheik." The horse negotiated the trip in 104 hours, of which 39 were actual riding time.

The Parliamentary pedestrians were Frank Gray, aged 43, Liberal for Oxford City, and Captain Charles Ainsworth, aged 49, Conservative for Bury. Captain Ainsworth lost the lead a few miles from the finish when he stopped to change his shoes and a short while later he abandoned his effort within a mile and a half of his goal because of a cramp in his leg.

Gray completed the course in six hours and one minute, falling to the ground in a dead faint after his wife had kissed him as he stepped over the finish line. Captain Ainsworth was taken to a hospital for medical attention.

MORE SHIPS NOW THAN BEFORE WAR.

Marked Increase in World's Total Tonnage Since 1914 Revealed.

(By P. M. SARL)

LONDON, Aug. 28 (United Press).—A marked increase in the world's total tonnage since June, 1914, is revealed by the latest edition of "Lloyd's Register," which shows how the world has made up for the ravages of war.

The total tonnage of sea-going iron and steel steamers and motor vessels owned by the principal maritime countries of the world in June, 1923, was 57,939,000 tons compared with 42,504,000 tons in June, 1914.

The largest contributor to this in Italy, 1,330,000; France, 1,347,000, and Holland, 1,135,000, are next in order. Great Britain's share of the increase is almost negligible for a country with such a shipbuilding record, amounting to but 200,000 gross.

England Falling Off

The percentage of world shipping owned by Great Britain has fallen from 44½ per cent in 1914 to 33 per cent, while the United States, in pre-war days, almost a negligible factor, has jumped into second place, with 21.4 per cent of the world's total (or 12,416,000 tons).

Despite prevailing economic conditions in Germany, that country has made remarkable strides since 1920. Germany's pre-war maritime fleet had a tonnage of 5,459,296 tons, but this has fallen to 672,671 tons in 1920. Today, however, the figure is given as 2,590,073 tons, indicative of the tremendous effort put forth by Germany to regain lost maritime prestige.

Among the interesting mass of information listed by Lloyd's the gradual supercession of coal by oil fuel is indicated. In 1914, 88.44 per cent of the world's shipping relied exclusively on coal, but in 1923 the figure had dropped to 68.87 per cent. Oil fuel for boilers in the same period rose from 2.65 to 24.23 per cent, while oil, etc., for internal combustion engines rose from 0.45 to 2.56 per cent. Ships relying on sail-power only now muster but 4.34 per cent of the world's shipping, compared with 8.06 in 1914.

Great Britain still occupies pride of place for ship-construction, more than half the tonnage now building in the yards of the world being in British hands. America and Germany naturally have the most new tonnage, the United States figure being 57.3 and Germany's 52.6. It is noteworthy that of the world's shipping, only 14 per cent consists of vessels 25 years old—which may be considered almost ready for the shipbreaker—whereas 35 per cent of existing tonnage is less than five years old.

FOLLOWING WIND HELPS FLIGHT WEST TO EAST

Average Weather Over 12-Month Period Shows 7-Mile Breeze

TRIPS COMPLETED

Efficiency of Air Mail Service Demonstrated by Actual Test

WASHINGTON, August 27.—In his daylight-saving, between-suns flight across the continent, Lieut. Russell L. Maughan, U. S. Army Air Service, scored strongly on the West wind, meteorological analysis of thousands of flights by Air Mail Service pilots show. In going from East to West the weather odds against speed achievement were much greater than they would have been against a plane travelling the west to east course.

Light winds made conditions favorable for Lieut. Maughan's success. But as a day in and day out proposition, in going from east to west the aviator on the route taken by the mail planes from New York to San Francisco, and probably also on the route taken by the Army's pilot, faces a speed-reducing head wind which averages seven miles an hour throughout the year.

This velocity of seven miles is not constant, and the wind does not blow all the time from the west, an analysis by U. S. Weather Bureau experts shows. At the average height above ground which the mail planes maintained, 1,500 feet, the velocity might vary from practically nothing to that of a fierce gale so strong as to make flying impossible. The winds might also come from any point of the compass, due east or north as well as west. But over the whole period of twelve months and over the whole route of 2,680 miles between New York and San Francisco the average force and direction of the wind, according to the experience of the aviators, was as given.

Can Beat Wind

As a result of the careful studies made by the government experts, flying schedules have been drawn up for planes having a cruising speed between 50 and 150 miles an hour which the planes can be guaranteed to fulfill for at least 90 per cent of the time they are flying between these two cities, so far as obstruction from wind and weather are concerned. For five per cent of their time, according to observations made by the Weather Bureau, they may expect to encounter head winds of 36 miles an hour, or more in flying westward and of 20 miles or more in flying eastward.

When such winds are met the planes may be delayed, but can complete their scheduled trips. But for another five per cent of a year's flying in both directions they are in danger of running into rain, snow, fog, or very high winds which would make the completion of the flight questionable or quite impossible. The minimum that can be guaranteed therefore is placed at 90 per cent, although a much greater efficiency may be achieved. In fact, during the calender year 1922 the planes of the air mail service attained an efficiency mark of 95.5 per cent.

During the twelve months for which the records have been studied the mail planes travelled from San Francisco to New York at an average speed of 100 miles an hour and from New York to San Francisco at the rate of 86 miles per hour. For the eastbound planes the best flying time was in the winter months, when they made an average of 104.2 miles per hour, and the slowest flying was done in the summer, when the rate averaged only 93 miles. Westbound planes, on the other hand, made practically the same time in summer and winter, about 85 miles an hour, falling off in the autumn months to 83.6 miles, and in the spring rising to 90 miles. West winds are more prevalent in winter than in summer, and winds from all directions are strongest in the winter months.

POSTAL METER

paving the way for a wider use of the mails, but is providing for an extension of postal activities at an actual saving to the mailer in operating expenses.

The only preliminary steps necessary in the case of firms wishing to adopt the new system is an application to the Postmaster - General, through the local postmaster, for a license to use the meter under control of the Department.

Teach Lovemaking In Secluded Nook Of Every Church

KALAMAZOO, Mich., Aug. 28.—(United Press).—Love-making is a science and should be taught as other sciences—in church, if not in regular schools.

This was the declaration of Dr. Henry Tralle, New York Sunday School authority, speaking before the Michigan Baptist assembly and training school here.

"Every church should be equipped with a secluded nook in which the young people could do their courting," Dr. Tralle said.

"Girls in the adolescent age should be given sex instruction in church, and should have a wholesome association with the opposite sex. If the church would take more interest in the love affairs of the young people there would be more happy homes."

Damage Suit Against Knights of Macabees.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 28.—(Canadian Press.)—Suit claiming $102,000 damages was begun Saturday by L. A. Seipp, counsel for Dr. Herbert Rosenburg, when a writ was filed in the court of King's Bench. The writ names $2,000 special damages and $100,000 general damages. The Maccabees a fraternal organization; W. J. Gault, and R. P. Kuntz, officials, are named as defendants in the action. The damage is the aftermath of a recent prosecution of Dr. Rosenburg, former secretary of the Knights here by officials of the organization, on a charge of theft. Rosenburg chose a speedy trial and was acquitted last month.

CINDERELLA AT GRAND SEPT. 7 AND 8

The production of musical phantasy has always been attended with a considerable measure of success most likely because their appeal is to all classes and to all age.. Old people never forget the fairy tales of their childhood and the weird stories that they believed at the beginning still posseses power to charm them when near the end. In the production of "Cinderella" which will be presented here shortly, every effort has been made to retain the romantic charm of the original story and to avoid any suggestion of modernization. Thus the characters are limited to these of the original tale and the settings, which are of an unusually picturesque and brilliant character, are designed to illustrate the events in the romance of Cinderella herself. There are in all, seventeen scenes, excluding the prologue, and special mechanical devices arranged for almost instantaneous changes from one to the other. The music, which is from the pen of Stanley T. Vermilyea, is unusually lilting and melodious and the dialogue and liberetto is written in true fairy tale style. This is an All-Canadian production from beginning to end, and in the Star of the cast, Miss Theo Macfarlane, there will be seen a Cinderella who realizes the ideal, both in personality and in art.

DISCOVERY OF OIL IS CELEBRATED, TITUSVILLE

TITUSVILLE, Pa., Aug. 28. — (United Press.) — To-day marked the passing of 64 years since the striking of oil in the well drilled by Col. E. L. Drake, at Titusville, Pa., formally ushered in what has since become the great petroleum industry.

In recent years celebration of "Drake Day" has been held locally but with increasing interest at Titusville, Bradford, Pleasantville, Oil City, Warren and Butler in Pennsylvania, and at Tulsa, Okla., this year the celebration was national, both in character and regional representation.

There was no drafting of political sectional or competitive lines in the shaping of the programme, which in addition to its re-union and social features, brought practical messages from leaders in the business, with A. C. Bedford, chairman of the Board of managers of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey as the chief speaker.

LIES IN FIGURES.

GENEVA, August 28 (United Press). — For the purpose of keeping statistics from lying so much in the future as they have in the past, the International Labour Bureau has just summoned an international conference of statistics to be held at Geneva on 29th October.

Some 60 odd nations, constituting virtually every nation in the world that is sufficiently advanced in its systems of administration as to keep statistics, are expected to have delegations present.

The fundamental purpose of the conference is to arrive at a common basis of labour statistics for all countries. The International Labour Bureau has found that this is necessary if there is ever to be established any effective basis for scientific international study of labour and social problems.

FOUNDS A HOSPITAL FOR AILING STORIES

By MARIAN HALE.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28. — Though officially known as a literary adviser, Mathilde Weil is really a "surgeon for stories," and the literary workshop she has just opened in New York is just a hospital for sick and ailing manuscripts.

You send her the precious novel or play that 17 boneheaded editors have unanimously rejected, and if there is any life in it she will remove superflous growths, prescribe tonics, inject new glands and probably it won't need the return postage when it goes out on its eighteenth journey.

"Sometimes I believe 99 per cent. of the world today is trying to write," she says. "And the same fault prevails in most of the manuscripts—they don't ring true.

"Instead of going to life and getting impressions fresh for themselves, the average author writes a weak imitation of some story that he particularly likes.

"What magazines especially want, and have a hard time finding, are stories of romance founded on commonplace sort of incidents that might happen in the lives of the least pretentious of us."

Miss Weil really does know what publishers want. For years she has selected manuscripts and done editorial work for the leading publishing houses of the country. She decided to open an advistory shop when she found out how much need there was for such a place.

"There are just as many women competing for literary honors today as men," she says, "but on the average the work of the men is apt to be better. The reason for this is because women have more time and they take up creative work more as a fad than men, many of whom must make sacrifices to have the time for it."

MOOR RUM PALACE OUTSIDE HARBOR.

High Class Liquors Will Be Sold on Boat at Pre-War Prices.

HOUSTON, Texas, Aug. 28.—A floating "rum palace," accommodating 1,000 persons and on which the finest liquors will be sold, will be anchored off Galveston harbor, just beyond the four mile limit within three weeks, according to an announcement made here Monday.

The resort will be located on the four-masted schooner Atlantico, and will be operated by Captain N. S. Copeland, of Galveston, and Tom Turner, of League City, Captain Copeland said Monday.

Three carloads of 6 percent beer are en route from Germany to stock the ship, in addition to a large cargo of whiskeys, champagne, gin and other liquors. All drinks will be sold at pre-war prices.

The Atlantico, which is in Gelveston harbor at present, will fly no flag, being under the status of an American ship out of commission. A picked crew of 20 men will man the boat. Machine guns will be mounted on the fore and after decks.

Arrangements are being made by Captain Copeland and Turner to run an excursion boat from Houston to the slip.

No liquors will be allowed to leave the boat, which will act as a depot for supplies before entering American territorial waters.

CREDIT FOR PRODUCTION OF "MERRY-GO-ROUND" GOES TO RUPERT JULIAN

By JACK JUNGMEYER

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 28.—Rupert Julian made "Merry Go Round."

As it is now being shown, this Universal feature, one of the best of recent productions, contains only about 600 feet of film shot by Erich von Stroheim before he and Carl Laemmle parted company.

These facts are here adduced to set at rest widespread conjecture which has tended to rob Julian of plaudits due him for an outstanding screen success—conjecture based largely on the guesses of critics regarding the contributions of the two directors to a spliced product.

Excepting the introduction of Norman Kerry, Dorothy Wallace and Sidney Bracey, the groom; one scene of Kerry in the carriage; the banquet scene and the elopment of countess and equerry, the picture is Julian's.

* * *

In collaboration with Harvey Gates, scenarist, Julian devised the love story of "Merry Go Round" as it reached the theater. All scenes carrying the story thread are his. All scenes of crowds. He shot every episode in which Mary Philbin, George Seigmann, George Hackathorne and Dale Fuller appear.

Julian's statement to this effect, supported by Universal records is not made controversially but merely to correct or forestall any erroneous impression. Between Julian and Von Stroheim there is no dispute.

There is considerable kinship in the viewpoints and directing methods of the two. Impressions upon audiences of Julian's technique has undoubtedly become somewhat blurred during the past three years in which he was in retirement. It may not be generally remembered that Rupert Julian directed and played the role of the "Kaiser" in "The Beast of Berlin." I find that there is in the popular mind considerable overlap between his work in that picture and Von Stroheim's creation of the Prussian officer in the latter's "Heart of Humanity." This and other not dissimilar works of the two quite naturally provoked speculation regarding their contributions to "Merry Go Round," especially since Universal was rather vague in apportioning credit.

This phase of "Merry Go Round's" discussion has served to draw attention anew to Julian, one of the oldest directors in pictures. The play restores him to the front rank of the profession from which he withdrew three years ago. Laemmle persuaded him to do "Merry Go Round" when, after some five weeks' work by Von Stroheim, the latter was ousted.

Scoring so decidedly with this comeback, Julian has determined to remain in the field, having already received many flattering offers.

A New Zealander by birth, with 12 years of spoken drama experience and seven years of movie directing for Universal, he brings to pictures the acuman of a world traveler, seasoned actor and successful playwright. Sixty of his stories have been produced on the screen. Among his more pretentious filmings were "Mother of Mine," "The Bugler of Algiers," "The Fire Flingers" and "The Beast of Berlin," which he made for Universal for considerably less than $40,000 and which returned in the neighborhood of $2,000,000.

Mrs. Julian, the former Elsie Jane Wilson of stage fame, has been his "silent" co-director on all pictures since their marriage. To her promptings he ascribes the fine shadings in feminine psychology and vivid characterizations brought out in his best pictures, notably in "Merry Go Round," which has some unique woman angles.

MOVIE-STRUCK GIRLS NOW BEHIND STORE COUNTERS

Tide of Potential Mary Pickfords no Longer Surging Against The Walls of Hollywood — Problem is Easier.

(By ROBERT A. DONALDSON)

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 28 (United Press).—The department stores of Los Angeles are filled with pretty girl clerk who thought they were potenial Mary Pickfords. Many a "second Gloria Swanson" is now chewing gum and punching a typewriter, as a stenographer in the office of a studio where she first went hoping to win her way to fame and fortune on the silver screen.

Fortunately, however, the tide of screen-struck girls who come from all parts of the country to Hollywood has been checked.

Despite reports from tourists that everywhere girl bikers are "on their way to Hollywood," less of them are arriving than ever before in the history of the movie game.

Apparently the recent widespread publicity given to the small chance that a girl has to win fame in the movies and the starvation facts which usually confront her on arriving in Hollywood, have taken effect.

Swamped With Girls

During the war and after the war up to the big movie slump of 1920, Hollywood and Los Angeles were literally swamped with would-be movie queens. New Companies were springing up like mushrooms, and many of these aspirants to film fame actually found places where they obtained some degree of recognition. In some cases they became stars.

But the "roaring twenties" have gone, and the movies are now on a different and very much more efficient basis.

Casting directors and welfare workers are unanimous in declaring that, with the greatest talent and the best of looks and the rarest of luck, no unknown girl nowadays can hope to make even a small reputation in Hollywood inside of two years.

The Y. W. C. A. the city police mothers, and similar organizations obtained many of them jobs in department stores, in stores and offices, or, if they knew typing, as stenographers. Others were rescued by friends or parents who sent the price of a return ticket back home.

Since that time producers have aimed to spread the truth over the country that the average, unknown girl has only about one chance in a thousand to make a living in the movies.

"Our problems have greatly decreased in the last two years," said one police mother. "Before that morals were more lax in the movies, and besides, so many girls came who, unable to make a living in the movies, took in desperation what they believed to be an easier way. Now movie morals have improved somewhat, and the girls are arriving in smaller numbers and I believe are of a better type."

Underthings in Silk

(By HEDDA HOYT)

NEW YORK, N. Y., Aug. 28 (United Press).—

Little girlie at the ball
Don't you wear no stays at all?
Don't you wear no chemise-skirt?
Don't you wear no petti-skirt?
Ain't you cold?

Women wear fewer undergarments today than ever before and the only reason that the manufacturers of undergarments have not gone out of business is because "quality rather than quantity' is their slogan. The little department store girl today wears better underwear than Queen Elizabeth wore, garments of the softest silks, which were unheard of by the ladies of Elizabeth's day.

True, the undergarments of the department store girl are not many, but the whole idea for underapparel seems to be to wear as little as possible and have that little as beautiful as possible. Present day fashion calls for scant underclothing hence the exit of the heavy corset, the old-fashioned petticoat, and the nainsook chemise.

The little Miss of today wears a little silk vest, a brassiere and step-in combination, round garters and a frock and Viola she is ready for the street.

The brassiere and step-in combination that has recently been introduced is becoming extremely popular with the girl of today, as it does away with the necessity of a corset cover and its additional waistband and at the same time offers a solution for holding the brassiere at a waist-line instead of letting it bind in under the bust. A brassiere that doesn't extend to the waist is bound to be uncomfortable.

The brassiere portion of such a combination is darted in to fit the figure and is attached to the stepins by a beading so that what fullness there is about the waist can be pulled in by a tiny ribbon with ties in the back. The brassiere hooks at the back and the stepins accordingly have a back placket which permits the garment to be put on easily.

Heavy radium silk is ideal for a garment of this sort though almost any fabric may be used. During the warm summer months women prefer to wear only the undergarments that are absolutely necessary and since the brassiere and the stepins are the two most essential garments, the combination of the two is particularly attractive.

Fifteen years ago almost every woman looked plump. Today the svelte figure is almost universal. The change can not be entirely attributed to diet and exercise. Scant underwear has accomplished a great deal toward the seeming change in the size of women. Anyone would look plump in a starched petticoat trimmed with ruffles and tucks.

Even the corset has a tendency to give one pronounced and mature lines. A slender girl looks more slender without a corset than with one. Just as long as it remains fashionable to be "lank and lean," women will insist upon as little underwear as is absolutely necessary.

MAKE ELEPHANT MOVIES

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28 (United Press).—At last a fitting test of the noble, American movie hero's lion heart.

"The Pursuit of the Pachyderms" is a scenario suggested by the Department of Commerce, in announcing today that elephant catching operations on a colossal scale will begin in Bengal in November and will continue through January, and that motion picture rights for this remarkable hunt are open to American offers.

The Department is prepared to transmit bids for any American producers. A bag of not less than 30 of the big beasts is expected, according to a cable just received from Calcutta. It is hoped to apprehend and execute a number of rogue elephants who have been terrorizing the peaceful population of Bengal.

HIKERS WED

Romance of Modern Highwaymen in California

FRESNO, Cal., Aug. 24.—A romance that budded along Pacific coast highways when two men met two girls while hiking to southern California, blossomed at Fresno, Cal., when a double wedding was performed by Justice Washington Smith.

Ray Ellison, twenty-three years old, and Eugene Fulton, twenty-one of Hollister, Mass., were married to Lula Durgan, twenty, of Everett, Wash., and Mary Nelson, nineteen, of Seattle, respectively. They met for the first time when the youths offered to carry the girl's packs not far from the Canadian border and when they reached Fresno the decision to wed was made.

After the wedding they continued on the journey to Los Angeles from where they are hiking to Hollister, where they will make their home.

THE OBSERVER

FAST

A speed of 1000 miles an hour is the goal of flying machine men. That would be more than half as fast as the bullet from the United States army rifle, which travels 30 miles a minute.

Aviators will travel their 1000 miles an hour, and before many more years. Then they'll aspire to 2000.

The speed craze seems to be an obsession with the airplane industry in general. And it's holding back popularization of the airplane, for what we need instead of speed is a safe, foolproof plane at Ford prices. We need a machine that will fly across the continent in safety, rather than one that can make the trip in a few hours.

SNAILS

Frank Hussey ran 100 yards at a speed of about a third of a mile a minute. It's not uncommon for an airplane to go 10 times as fast—and keep it up for hours.

Our bodies are weak and slow. We reinforce them by mechanical devices, our brains bridging the gap.

Radium can laugh pityingly at our mechanical speed. It constantly throws off particles of itself which shoot into space at a speed of 750,000 miles a minute. That's the fastest thing in the line of moving matter, but it's slow alongside light and other ether vibrations.

DOUBLED

Our country's foreign trade has doubled in 10 years, gloats the economist of a big New York bank.

It hasn't. What's happened is that prices have doubled in 10 years. Measured in bushels, tons, bales and the like, our foreign trade has been plugging along about the same as usual, year in, year out. When most of us think we're witnessing great industrial growths, we're really seeing only the inflation of an elastic dollar.

SAVED

Ten million lives were saved in Russia by the American Relief Administration which is withdrawing from the Red country. Famine and disease are under control over there.

This saving of more lives than were lost in the World War was accomplished by an organization of 200 Americans. And the 10 million lives were saved at a cost of only $6.20 apiece. It cost 300 times as much to kill a man in the World War.

TIP

When your electric light bulbs burn out, try tapping them sharply while they are still in the socket with the current turned on. The tapping makes the filament quiver. If the broken ends hit each other, they may fuse together again. We have known incandescent bulbs to be "renewed" this way as many as six times.

WHOSE?

In 1874 Ferdinand W. Snydam was legally declared unable to care for his property, then worth $500,000. A accounting in a New York court shows that the estate now is worth over a million.

Time works wonders for the pocketbook. If you had banked $500,000 at compound interest in 1874, it would have grown to four million dollars by now. The same magic holds good for shorter times and smaller amounts.

THEATRES

"Three Wise Fools," is a big production and an interesting one. The picture that has been adapted from the stage play of the same name commenced a three-day showing at the Capitol Monday matinee, before an attentive audience that seemed to appreciate the fine points of the big production. It is a picture that features the ways and characters of three old men, the three Guardsmen; Findley, Teddy and Judge Trumbull, the Porthos, Athos and Aramis whose motto is "one for all and all for one."

They live in a house on Riverside Drive, New York, and they are three crusty old creatures until Sidney comes along, and they adopt her as their daughter. It is a whimsical story, with a good deal of heart interest aobut it and plenty of exciting situations also. A thread of mystery, in the unidentified character, John Crawshay, runs through the tale, and an element of romance in the attachment of Sidney and Gordon the young and handsome youth of the picture, who takes a second place, however, in interest when compared with the three wise fools."

The thrill of the production is supplied by a sensational prison escape, when two convicts, "Benny and Dick," and Crawshay, one a burglar the other an embezzling bank manager take to the river and elude pursuing guards. An aeroplane figures in this senational episode. Then "Benny" goes after the old Judge, one of the trio, the man who sentenced him to prison, and is intercepted by Sidney. A final episode is the confession of "Benny" that clears up the mystery, and a happy ending to an interesting and worth-while picture. Eleanor Boardman is very good as Sidney, the heroine. Those who have seen the stage play of the same name will enjoy "Three Wise Fools." To the spoken drama, with its whimsical characterizations, has been added the element of thrilling suspense and rapid action, with a result that makes a very worth-while picture.

AT THE GRAND.

THE "ORIGINALS" IN "RAPID FIRE."

"The Originals," that unique band of Canadian overseas entertainers who started first behind the lines in France as the Third Divisional C.E.F. Concert Party, and for the past four years have left the memories of fun and music and thrill upon tens of thousands of theatregoers throughout Canad, are coming to the Grand theatre as the opening attraction of the season, September 3 and 4 with their brand new 1924 revue "Rapid Fire."

When the Originals decided to call their new revue "Rapid Fire" they picked the right name for there are few theatrical entertainments that have the vim and spontaneity of this new and brilliant production. From the opening number, a magnificent Egyptian scene of King Tut's day, right through the entire programme of twenty five numbers, the Originals register hit after hit with their rollicking and most unusual buffoonery. "Red" Newman's newest songs are better than ever. "Are you working" and "The Stoker" are sure fire hits while his appearance in the skits and concerted numbers are always the vehicle for screams of laughter and outbursts of enthusiasm. Jimmie Goode in his original blackface characterizations is a riot. Arthur Holland, who spent last summer in London and Paris, has a small fortune in costumes one of which he brought from Paris and costing several hundred dollars, it is made entirely of gold sequins. Many other elaborate costumes displayed by the female impersonators are outstanding features of the show. Gene Pearson, the glorious new soprano, is said by critics to be the greatest "discovery" of the year. The famous Original quartette with Bill Tennent, Tom Young, Jerry Brayford and Bertram Langley produce their usual fine harmony in three of the famous Indian Love Lyrics and selected Scottish numbers. In fact every member of the Company is offering better and stronger material than ever before and the finest of all Soldier revues is assured in the new revue "Rapid Fire."

AT THE ROYAL.

"SHADOWS," A REMARKABLY FINE STORY, WONDERFULLY ACTED AT THE ROYAL.

The acting of Lou Chaney, who assumes the role of a Chinaman in "Shadows," now playing at the Royal, is remarkable. We have always admired Chaney's work, but we doubt whether he has ever done any better bit of character work than this portrayal. The story is really out of the ordinary and decidedly worth while, and the supporting cast includes many favorites, including Harrison Ford, Buddy Messinger and Marguerite De La Mott. The balance of the programme has been chosen with care.

"THE SPORTING EARL"—BIG ENGLISH PRODUCTION.

The Royal Theatre will next week show the big English Drury Lane melodrama, "The Sporting Earl." "The Sporting Earl" is one of the most popular English pictures that ever came over to Canada. It is somewhat on the style of the former American successes, "Mickey" and "The Whip," having all the delightful comedy of the one and the hurricane of the other.

The story of "The Sporting Earl" concerns Sir Horace Pilkington, Baronet, who leaves an eccentric will by virtue of which one of his nephews inherits his entire fortune and the other nephew, afterwards known as "The Sporting Earl" is left the baronet's racing stable. The "Sporting Earl," without a single ha'penny to his name, is the possessor of a stable of horses which includes Cheerio-Arf-a-Mo, known throughout English sporting circles as the fastest and gamest horse that ever went over the Ascot water jump. The picture is full of laughs, thrills, fights, steeplechases, includes a big fire, and centres around the story of the baronet's will, which is nothing short of whizz-bang.

The cast includes Victor Herbert as "The Sporting Earl," and Lillian Hall-Davis as the girl in the case. Lillian Hall-Davis is a noted English actress and will be remembered for the remarkable success she scored in the big English pictures "The Game of Life," and "A Royal Divorce." She is rated in England as one of the most promising stars of the film world over there.

CITIZENS AND KLAN IN MIDNIGHT CLASH

One Killed, One Expected to Die and Many Injured During Demonstration of Ku Klux Klan.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 28.—(Canadian Press)—One man was killed another was probably fatally wounded and an unknown number of others were injured at midnight Saturday night when citizens of Carnegie, a suburb and robed members of the Ku Klux Klan clashed at the Glendale bridge over Chartiers Creek.

Chief Braun of the Allegheny county detective force, immediately dispatched a deputy to the hill with orders to notify the klan leaders that a demonstration in the village would not be permitted, and unless they dispersed before nightfall he would "not be responsible for what might happen."

TRUNKS PROTEST OSHAWA HURLER

Matter of Harold Dainty's Residence Forms Basis For Protest Entered By Belleville.

OSHAWA, Aug. 28.—(Special)—Secretary Nott of the Central Ontario Amateur Baseball League yesterday morning received official protests, accompanied by a cheque for $25 from the Secretary of Belleville Baseball Club on the residence qualification of Harold Dainty of Oshawa. The notice of protest reads as follows: "As advised the management of the Oshawa Baseball Club and yourself personally before the game we hereby make formal protest against the pitching of one, Harold Dainty, in the game August 25, 1923, for the championship of the Central Ontario League. After consideration with yourself and with M. B. Dulmage, Secretary of the O.B.A.A., also with the management of the Oshawa team we are convinced that Mr. Dainty is not eligible to play against Belleville team in a Central League playoff due to the fact that he does not qualify under the residence rule as set forth in the rules and regulations of constitution governing A and B sections of the Central League for the season of 1923, particularly that section which reads 'all players must be bonafide residents of the town they represent on or before January 1, 1923 and continuous resident after January 1, of each year, except students etc.'"

C. M. Anderson of Oshawa accepted personal service of protest at noon and at 3.30 Secretary of Oshawa Baseball Club filed notice protest would be defended and cheque covering same was handed in. The sub committee of the League will meet in the Quinte Hotel, Belleville at seven o'clock Wednesday evening, directly after the game in the afternoon to hear the protest. The playoff of the third game if necessary will be played at Peterboro on Thursday afternoon.

Alex. Kay Trophy For Public Schools

The football games for the Alex Kay Trophy, which has been offered for school pupils will be played in the very near future and the Peterboro and District Football Association is desirous that every Public and Separate School should enter a team. The series will be run on the knock out principle, each team going out as it is defeated. Principals of the various schools have been asked to send their entries in to W. Nicholls, 473 King street, the secretary of the local association. It is important that these entries should be in as soon as possible as the draw must be made almost immediately if the series is to be run with any degree of success.

Umpire—a necessary Devil in a game known as baseball; he is always in the wrong one way or another; he has no heart like other people; his favorite pastime is stealing baseballs after matches; usually male; never plural, but often gives singular decisions; under the surface is usually found to be a good fellow with a rotten job.

By scoring in every inning, members of the St. Paul American Association Club Sunday equalled the world's record, according to available statistics.

The Saints defeated Louisville 24 to 6, getting a least one run in each inning. Records showed it equalled only five times previously. The teams turning the trick were Cleveland, Washington, Chicago Nationals, Pittsburg and Boston Americans.

The British yacht Colia defeated the U. S. boat Lea in the first of a series of five races for the Scawanhaka Cup Saturday, which the British won in United States waters last September. The Lea's mast snapped during the race and she withdrew.

The big amateur ball surprise outside of Toronto was the defeat of Galt Terriers at home by Brantford in the first of home-and-home O.B.A.A. play-offs by 2 to 1. Smith held the Terriers in check and got splendid support. Galt made a great attempt to pull the game out in the ninth but Raynor, pinch-hitter, failed to come through. The return game will be Wednesday at Brantford.

Most of them, you remember, prophesied that Jack would knock out Tommy Gibbons. He didn't. It was the prophets that got knocked out. Now the prophets have already planned the obsequies for Louis Firpo and handed Dempsey a victory by the knockout route.

ROSS DOBBIN HEADS RUGBY ASSOCIATION FOR COMING SEASON

Big Year Planned For Local Organization—City League of Four Teams — O.R.F.A. Team Will Be Entered.

OTHER OFFICERS.

Officers were elected and plans formulated for the coming season at an enthusiastic meeting of the local rugby organization, held last evening in the Chamber of Commerce rooms. The officers are:

Honorary President: Dr. A. W. McPherson.

Patrons: Mayor W. H. Taylor, G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P., W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P., W. R. Breyfogle, R. Denne, Lieut-Col. F. L. Bradburn, J. Picard, Chris. Graham, G. A. Macdonald, R. Dobie.

President—R. L. Dobbin.

Vice-President—Dr. E. H. Wood.

Secretary-Treasurer — Carl McLean.

Coach—Carl Brown.

Each team will also appoint one member of the executive committee. league this season simliar to that of last year with at least four teams entered. Representatives from the Belmonts and Excelsiors were present last evening and it was intimated that the Crescents, of last year, and the C.G.E. would also have a team entered.

Practices will start almost immediately and if arrangements can be made for the necessary grounds, double-header games will be played every Saturday afternoon, beginning on Setpember 22.

An intermediate O. R. F. U. team will be entered, but owing to the lack of intermediate teams in the cities and towns of the district, it is expected that the locals will draw a bye for the first round as they did last year. This will allow plenty of time for the city league to be played off before the O.R.F.U. games have to be played. It was pointed out that though the local O.R.F.U. team did not go very far last year it was the first season for Peterborough to have such a team entered and some excellent material was brought out. The players, together with several new ones, will be available this season and Peterborough can be counted upon to have a strong team in the field.

Rugby is essentially a team game demanding the greatest co-ordination and co-operation among the players, and the development of both high mental and physical qaulities. The Peterborough team last season displayed the necessary qaulifications but lacked the practice which gives the necessary finish to their game. With last season's work behind them they will be in a better position to make their presence felt in O.R.F.U. circles this year.

In addition to the City League and O.R.F.U. games it was planned last evening to arrange for an exhibition game on Thanksgiving day with one of the Toronto teams

The next meeting will be held on Wednesday, September 5, at which representatives of all teams should be present and prepared to pay the entrance fee of $5. The meeting will be held in the Chamber of Comberce rooms at 8 o'clock.

RACE CALLED OFF BECAUSE OF FOG

Fishermen's Race For the Lipton Cup Was Postponed Until Thursday.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Aug. 28. —Canadian Press).—Thick fog that blanketed the coast, through the forenoon yesterday forced the committee in charge of the open fishermen's race for the Lipton and Prentiss Cups, to postpone the event, the feature of Gloucester's 300th anniversary program, until Thursday. Thousands of spectators gathered along the shore and thousands more on excursion boats, fishing craft and launches in the harbor had waited weary hours for the bank of fog to clear away to be disappointed in the end. The postponement cast a damper over the opening day of Gloucester's gala week. From 9 o'clock, the hour scheduled for the start, the race was postponed hourly until noon. When it became apparent that in the prevailing light breezes the contest could not be started and completed in daylight the coast gaurd cutter Modoc, acting as committee boat called in the three contenders, cruising about like spectres in the mist and the disappointed flotilla moved port-ward. The only approach to a race all day was in homeward journey when in a pretty piece of windward work, the Elizabeth Howard of New York overhauled the New Shamrock of Boston, and led the way inside.

The one bright spot in the gloom caused by yesterday's postponement appeared to be hope that by Thursday another racing schooner would be at the starting line. Captain J. Henry Larkin did not arrive from the fishing banks with the Mayflower of Boston yesterday to carry out his expressed intention of getting into the race. The Mayflower twic debarred from international competitions because of her lines and sail spread, may be on hand by Thursday. According to the race committee any bona fide fishing schooner from all the world may start if she turns up in line before the gun is fired.

Rumors in Gloucester that United States vessel might refuse to participate in future international fishermen's series as a result of incidents during last year's series here were stilled yesterday when it became known that Captain Clayton Morrisey would take the Henry Ford to Halifax to race the Blue Nose if no other United States Schooner is selected as challenger. It also became known that if the new Columbia aspires to race for international honors she will first have to beat the Henry Ford in an elimination series.

Re-arranged Football Schedule

The local association has re-arranged the football schedule to allow of two games being payed on Saturday afternoons. This action was necessitated by the growing shortness of the evenings. The new schedule is:

BIG SPORTS EVENTS ENDED THE REUNION

Community Singing Led by Oshawa Band and Two Dances Featured Last Day of Millbrook's Home Gathering.

HOME SWEET HOME

MILLBROOK, Aug. 28.—Probably the most popular event of the sports' program at the Re-union in Millbrook on Monday afternoon was the lacrosse game between the local Old Boys and a team from Peterboro. Some of those who played with Millbrook had not handled a stick in twenty years or more, but the knack was not forgotten as the score showed when time was up, 5-4, in favor of the home players, being considered a good record. The line-up was:—

Peterobro

Millbrook

N. Dunford, goal; R. Foster, point; S. Sloan, cover point; H. Lancashire 1st defence; H. Nattrass, 2nd defence; D. Miller, centre; P. Hendley, 1st home; E. C. Richards, 2nd home; J. Nattrass, inside; L. C. Russell, outside.

Basket Ball Game

The basket-ball game between the "Reds" and "Blacks" drew a large number of spectators Rev. G. S. Gervan being the umpire, and Miss Anna Russell score-keeper. The final score 13-2 favor of the "Blacks", showed a decided superiority over their opponents, and brought the suggestion that the teams might be rechosen and the sides more evenly divided. The players were:

"Reds"

Muriel Matchett, Thelma Ball, defence; Helen Syer, Loretta Barnard, forwards; Hilda Spencer, K. Lancashire, centre.

"Blacks"

Helen Larmer, Florence Fallis, defence; Dorothy Armstrong, Gertie Gray, forwards; A. Johnston, Francis Turner, centre.

Horse Race

The horse race was an unexpected feature of the program and aroused considerable enthusiasm. W. Lunn's "Spinks Orra," won first money, H. A. Fallis' "Sadie Page," came second, and "Lady Hicks," owned by Hicks of Pontypool, had third place.

Baseball Game.

Owing to the lateness of the hour when they began to play the game between Janetville and Keene was somewhat handicapped as far as light to play by was concerned, while the number of onlookers was smaller than had watched the other games earlier in the afternoon, many having to leave for home about the time the game began. The score was 5-3 in favor of Janetville, and the line-up as follows:

Janetville—P. Walker p, W. Walker c, N. W. McGill 1b, R. J. Burn 2b, F. Philp 3b, E. Stinson cf, C. McGill ss, P. Philp lf, L. E. McGill rf.

Keene—Audette p, Hawkins c, C. Robinson 1b, A. Fletcher 2b, C. Nelson 3b, M. McCarthy cf, M. Robinson ss, Ivan Fletcher lf, M. Renwick rf.

Umpire—J. Cathcart, Cavan.

The score when Millbrook played against Janetville earlier in the afternoon was 3-1 in favor of the home team.

Community Singing.

A most appropriate conclusion to the day's sports was the community singing, led by the Oshawa Regimental Band, which furnished an hour's thorough enjoyment at the Agricultural Grounds from 7 to 8 p.m. The crowd then adjourned down town, and an extension of the street carnival of Saturday evening was held, the band playing a number of selections, some of the members being in costume and adding to the merriment of the occasion with their pranks. The "policeman" especially created a lot of fun by his ludicrous attempts at directing the traffic, the number of cars lining the street on both sides, three deep in places, and the number moving through the narrow space left open, giving him plenty of scope for activity. The clever dancing of the "lady" member of the band who appeared at intervals and was apparently specially gifted in this line, won the approval of the large crowd of onlookers as their repeated demands for an encore gave evidence. The band concert closed at 9.30 p.m. to give opportunity for the two dances which were held, one in the Armouries, Gliddon's orchestra, of Peterborough, furnishing the music, and the other in the Town Hall, violin and piano giving satisfactory music for the square dances, waltzes, etc., which were most popular with those in attendance at the latter place. Both dances were very largely attended, and proved a pleasant ending to the Re-union, for the younger element at least.

The gate receipts in the afternoon, and the amount taken in at the two booths, which were under the auspices of the local booth committee, reached an amount which, with the money already on hand from the sale of badges, Sunday offerings and Saturday night's dance, will fully clear off the rather large amount of indebtedness the Executive Committee has been under in carrying the Re-union to a successful conclusion.

The Oshawa band, which furnished the music during the three days of the Re-union, remaining in Millbrook for the entire time, won golden opinions for themselves by the generosity of the programme provided, and also by the very capable manner in which their music was rendered.

Memories Will Remain.

On every hand one heard expressions of delight from the many "Old Boys and Girls" who had come from the Pacific coast on the West, and Portland, Maine, on the East, from St. John's, Newfoundland, from Kentucky, from the north of the province, and intervening points, to meet once again in the home town and renew friendships of former years. The playing of "Home, Sweet Home," by the band more than once each day seemed to strike a responsive chord in the hearts of the listeners and frequently brought to their lips expressions of appreciation and pleasure in having the opportunity which the Re-union afforded for bringing them once more to the home of their childhood days. Apparently the Re-union of August, 1923, will long remain a pleasant memory and often be talked of, not only in Cavan and Millbrook, but in homes and business places at distant points as well, by those who were fortunate enough to be present, and enjoy the three days of social good-fellowship together. The honor of entertaining the home-coming guests of township and village was also a feature of the occasion, which will be looked back upon with pleasure as the event is recalled in the days and years to come.

LOUIS FIRPO HAD A FAST WORKOUT

Took on Three Sparring Partners Yesterday — Would Like to Work Out With Billy Miske.

ATLANTIC CITY., Aug. 28.—(Canadian Press).—Using the same 16 ounce mitts that failed to soften the punches he landed in Joe Downey, Indianapolis, several weeks ago, Luis Angel Firpo, challenger for the heavyweight boxing title took on three sparring mates yesterday in his daily workout. Jeff Clark, Joplin "Ghost" and Young Frank Koebele, Brooklyn provided fast work-outs for the challenger while Joe McCann, Newark heavyweight, was thumped in the other.

Koebele under instructions from Horace Lavalle, the trainer, worked quickly and well, and took his lacing like a real punch catcher. McCann was easy to strike but hard to hurt and though he was shaking near the end of the workout he was still going strong.

Lavalle announced that the services of Billy Miske, the St. Paul heavy weight were being sought for sparring work. The trainer also is seeking several light men, but would not name them.

Firpo had a good work-out on the road this morning and spent a quarter of an hour in the garage of the home in Chelsea whaling away at the heavy sand bag.

LAST PLAYER OF A FAMOUS TEAM

Passing of Frank Schulte Will See End of Famous Championship Team.

CHICAGO, Aug. 28.—(Associated Press)—With Frank Schulte dropping out of the professional baseball ranks this season, the last of the two great Chicago teams that battled for the world's championship in 1906 have quit active participation in the game. True, Frank Chance, of "Peerless Leader" fame and Pat Moran, of the Reds, are very much in the spotlight of the sport today yet neither cavort on the diamond in actual play.

Up to the time that Schulte resigned from the Oakland club of the Coast league, seven of the former stars of the two 1906 teams still had something to do with baseball. Schulte was the only one actually playing, however. The other were: Cubs: Chance and Moran, who are managers and John Evers, who was with the White Sox last year. Nick Altrock, now with Washington but who is on the coaching line and never plays; Frank Isbell, owner and manager of the Wichita club of the Western league and Ed Walsh, who is now scout and pitchers' coach for the White Sox.

Picking the Winner of Greb-Wilson Fight.

By HENRY L. FARRELL

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—(United Press)—Harry Greb, the "windmill" from Pittsburgh, is going after the middleweight championship here Friday night when he meets Johnny Wilson, the alleged champion.

Like the bird in Shelby, who won a yacht in a raffle, the question arises: "What will Greb do with the title when he gets it?"

All there is to the title that is now possessed by Wilson is some glory that might be attached to any kind of a championship, and after the disrepute that Wilson dragged the class into, there is darned little of that attached to the crown.

Wilson has made little more than the proverbial dime out of the championship, and he acted so in restraint of trade that it will take a new firm years to build up business again.

Despite the insistence with which he maintains that he can make the weight, Greb is no middleweight, and if he is called upon or required to do much in defense of the title he will be sure to go the way of Joe Gans.

Greb is none too rugged, even as a light-heavyweight. He has been in bad health and he has drained his resources by much fighting and hard fighting. He has also failed to adhere strictly to a life of training.

So far, this sounds as if Greb already had won the championship from Wilson. He is not yet in possession of the title and perhaps he is a very great distance from it.

Wilson was made a favorite in the early betting, for reason that might be hard to explain, considering the form he has shown as a fighter, and most of the experts believe that he has more than an even chance to retain his title.

There was a story printed several weeks ago that the fight had been fixed, that Greb was to take a flop and then alibi that he was weakened too much by making the weight.

Such stories, although granting the fact that fights have been fixed in the past and that they may be fixed now, are entitled to little consideration.

MARQUARD STARS WITH TAILENDERS

John McGraw Would Have Pennant Cinched If He Had His Old Port-Sider Back.

BY BILLY EVANS.

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—There is a strong demand for pitching in both major leagues this season.

John J. McGraw says he is staggering along with an uncertain staff, Pat Moran has been claiming waivers, while Bill McKechnie has announced that with one more star hurler he would nose out the Giants.

And while all of this is going on, "Rube" 'Marquard is pitching as brilliantly as at any time in his career for a tail-end club.

Marquard's pitching this season, his fifteenth in the National League, is as remarkable as any time since he became a big leaguer.

His career is known by all followers of the National League. He arrived at the Polo Grounds in the fall of 1908 as an $11,000 prize.

McGraw, with that price, had set a record purchase for a minor Leaguer and Marquard immediately became the center of attraction. However, the Rube was not fully developed and for more than a year he was regarded as one of the biggest lemons that ever hit Big Broadway.

Developed Into a Star.

Through a slow and careful process McGraw eventually developed the lean and lanky southpaw. There was a sharp turn in affairs and finally Marquard became a pitching sensation.

That record of 19 successive victories attained in 1912 remains the best performance of any big league pitcher during these modern times.

But the southpaw phenom did not live long — anyway in McGraw's opinion, and during the 1915 season the Rube was passed along to the Brooklyn Superbas as a fading veteran. He lasted five years and a half with Wilbert Robinson when there was another shift in his journey, the Rube going over to the Cincinnati Reds in exchange for Walter Reuther.

Marquard lived but one season with the Reds and he was traded along with Larry Kopf to the Boston Braves for Pitcher John Scott.

One of Marquard's most recent games was a shut-out against the St. Louis Cardinals in which he did not pass a single batter.

Praise for Marquard.

"It was one of the prettiest pitched games I have seen all summer," remarked Fred Mitchell. "That fellow's a wonder, let me tell you. While they have been talking about new phenoms and old stars this season, there isn't a pitcher in the league who has pitched better ball than Marquard. With a tail end club he has practically broke even.

"You don't hear much about his work—of course you don't, because we're down in the cellar, but right now he would win the pennant for the Giants, Reds or Pirates. McGraw could use him. Don't think he couldn't. The same goes for Moran and McKechnie.

"Marquard has as much speed today as when he broke in as a kid. His control for a left hander is remarkable."

The life of a left-handed pitcher in the majors is usually a short one. "Rube" Marquard, like Eddie Plank, is one of the decided exceptions.

Dempsey Lays Off For Next Three Days.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y., Aug. 28.—(Canadian Press).—The door was locked at Jack Dempsey's training camp on the shores of Saratoga Lake yesterday. The world's heavyweight champion, starting a three day's layoff, passed the afternoon trying to pick winners at the race track, accompanied by Jack Kearns, his manager, and a party of friends.

After hitting the roads for a five mile run Dempsey motored to Albany, forty miles south, to meet a friend, and returned there after the races, reaching camp about 8 o'clock.

Dempsey plans to go on a day's fishing trip to-day but will return to camp before night. He plans to resume boxing on Thursday.

Young Pitcher Sold to New York Giants.

WICHITA, Kansas, Aug. 27.—(Canadian Press).—Ernie Maun, pitching ace of the Wichita Western League club, has been sold to the New York Giants, Frank Isbell, owner of the local club has announced. Maun will report next spring. It was said unofficially that the price was between $10,000 and $15,000.

Maun, who is only 23 years old, has won 21 games and lost seven this season He has been with Wichita three years.

DANNY CLARKE SOLD.

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 27.—(Canadian Press).—Danny Clarke, second baseman of the Atlanta Southern Association club, has been sold to the Boston Americans for $7,500, according to an official announcement made here. Clarke will report next spring. He is leading the home run hitters with sixteen circuit hits.

RACING DRIVER KILLED

MILAN, Italy, Aug. 28.—(Canadian Press)—Giaccone, a racing motor driver, was killed and Bordino, his companion, seriously injured yesterday while trying out a car at Monsea in preparation for the Italian Grand Prix, to be run over the Monsea track next month. The accident was caused by the breaking of the rear axle.

In 1921, 197 French fortunes paid 3,000,000 francs each in income taxes, which French writers say proves that wealth's becoming more concentrated.

JUVENILE REGATTA OF CHEMONG PARK

The annual juvenile regatta of Chemong Park was held Saturday afternoon off Patte's wharf. Unfortunately weather conditions were unfavorable. All the races were keenly contested, and the excitement ran high. The sailing race and the pillow fight were probably the most spectacular events two upsets occurring in the former, and many spills in the latter. The money for the prizes was contributed by cottagers. In the evening a marshmallow roast was held, and the following received prizes.

MOST FASCINATING MOTION PICTURES

(By Jack Jungmeyer.)

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 23.—Three of the most fascinating motion pictures ever made, and soon to be shown, haven't a human being in them. Not a performer is over an inch long; some of them could stand comfortably on a needle point. A man's football can crush a whole world of these pygmies, and yet, under the camera, the drama of their life primordial has many human analogies.

These movies, the "Secrets of Life" series of one reelers made by Sol Lesser of Principal Pictures by Louis H. Tolhurst, noted microscopist, probe the intimacies of bee, ant and spider life.

Beautifully photographed under the "cold light" of Tolhurst's new co-ordination of cinema and microscopic processes, the life of these creatures is presented in nature's unbridled play of war, love, motherhood, stratagem, loyalty and villainy.

Lens power magnifies the ant and the bee to the size of a man on the screen. They are beautiful or terrible monsters of the infinite jungles beyond the ken of the average myopic mortal, a new realm just beginning to be explored by the micro-movie. And only the dullard will fail to respond to their fascinations.

* * *

Tolhurst microscopically invades the hive home of 50,000 bees, where the busy insect housewife, often praised but fortunately seldom emulated, works herself to death in six weeks as reward for her industry. There is a close-up of the hive queen, magnificent siren whom it is fatal to court and who rears her sleek children by the million.

A SPIDER'S HEAD—"ACTOR" IN SECRETS OF LIFE."

Eggs magnified to the size of a balloon; the larva afloat in its jelly case; babies gnawing their way out of wax cells; nurse bees sedulously guarding the virgin queen; honey bearers gathering sweets which they may never eat; drone dandies imprisoned for a day of fate; the royal matron, with a sting like a curved scimiter, killing her potetnial celled rivals—these vital processes and social phases of the bee colony, as here pictured, are indeed "The Secrets of Life" garnered from its very matrix.

The same intimate details of the ant's being are also divulged—a life still more advanced in the entomological scale than that of the bee, according to Tolhurst, who has studied insects with the lens for 24 years.

* * *

A cross-section of an ant hill, cunningly secured, illuminates the text "Go to the ant, thou sluggard." Here occur prodigious feats of strength and energy. Here again, as with the bee, romance is for the select few while toil and travail is for the many. Black, armored giants fearless knights of the lesser world, go forth to battle or, on the bridal morn, go homesteading on gossamer wings.

Women and children first is the slogan in the ant hill, and Tolhurst, with the patience of the scientist and the feeling of the artist, has put its implications on the screen in striking fashion.

The spider and the fly enact their immemorial drama in the third picture, and it is gripping conflict when the two are magnified to human size.

Walter Anthony's deft titling of "The Secrets of Life," conveying the necessary explanations with poetic pith and delicacy, adds the final measure of excellence to a series of films which for novelty, information and entertainment I rate 100 per cent.

Some Big Yields Are Reported in the West.

SASKATOON, Sask., Aug. 28.—(Canadian Press.)—The Melfort and Carrot River districts are now in the midst of the cutting operations. Naisbury, reports wheat threshing 26 bushels to the acre.

Ridgedale claims an early threshing record for that district of Club wheat, the grain was sown May 1 and yielded 25 bushels to the acre.

Crops between Birdview and Gledhow are being threshed and will give 30 to 40 bushels to the acre, several farmers estimated.

Viking, Alberta, looks for the biggest crop in the history, cutting is well under way there.

STOLEN CAR WRECKED.

HAMILTON, Ont., Aug. 28.—(Canadian Press).—A car, thought to have been stolen, was wrecked early yesterday morning when, coming along Delaware Avenue, it failed to make the turn onto Sherman Ave., crashed into a tree and was hurled back into the roadway. Two men jumped from the car and made off, pursued by motor-cycle officers, who fired shots after them, which, it is said, were returned by the fugitives.

Bulgarian Minister Victim of Assassin.

PRAGUE, Aug. 28.—(Canadian Press)—Three shots were fired at M. Daskaloff, the Bulgarian ambassador at noon Monday and he died a short time later on the operating table. His assailant Atanas Nikoff, a twenty-six year old Bulgarian was arrested.

M. Daskaloff was appointed ambassador to Czecho Slovakia under the regime of former Premier Stamboulisky. When Stamboulisky was overthrown by the Bulgarian army in June of this year, the new Sofia government requested the Czech authorities to extradite Daskaloff, but the request was never compiled with.

In December last when M. Daskaloof was Minister of Interior, a bomb was thrown at his automobile just as he was leaving the parliament building after attending a session. No one was hurt and no damage was done.

PROFESSING CONFIDENCE OF AVERTING A STRIKE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—(Canadian Press)—Government officials to-day were watching with professed confidence, in outcome of the efforts of Governor Pinchot, in his conference with miners and operators representatives at Harrisburg to find a basis of settlement in their dispute, that will aver the threatened shutdown of the Anthracite Coal Mines on September first.

VOL. LIII. No. 99 PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 29, 1923 PRICE THREE CENTS

MYSTERY DEATH MAN OF WEALTH PUZZLES POLICE

Found Dead on Couch in His Apartment With Three Other Guests Asleep.

INHERITED $300,000

Origin in Breslau.

Journalist Sentenced.

Lived at Rate of $20,000 a Year.

Mr. Wilson said that it was proved that Sutphen had been living at the rate of about $20,000 a year and that this was far in excess of his income as secretary to George V. Helme, who is in the tobacco and snuff business in the Empire Building, Broadway and Twenty-Third Street. Sutphen, he said, also was the secretary of a company owning a patent called the rollometer, an automobile attachment.

"We have not completed our investigation," Mr. Wilson added. "We intend to question more witnesses before we can say how the poison was administered. It would appear from what we have learned thus far that Sutphen had overstepped himself in the matter of money, but we have to obtain more information on this point. We are not ready to reveal the names of the persons whom we have questioned in the apartment. To do so at this time, we feel, would be to defeat the ends of justice."

Mr. Wilson added that it had been established that Sutphen, about an hour and a half after his return to his apartment early Sunday morning, called up Ernest A. Dunlea, who is in business at 175 Fifth Avenue, and was understood to be interested in an enterprise with Sutphen. Sutphen was reported to have told Dunlea that he was very ill, and asked him to call on him at his apartment as soon as possible. It was said that Dunlea was one of the three witnesses examined by Assistant District Attorney Wilson and the police officials and that the other witnesses were Captain Robert C. Spohn, a war veteran, of 575 Riverside Drive, and Florence Janist, an actress, formerly of Buffalo.

Others Asleep When Body Found.

Captain Spohn and Miss Janiesto were said to have been in the apartment when Dunlea called shortly after 9 o'clock and discovered that Sutphen had died on a couch some time before. Dunlea was said to have tried to arouse the occupants of the apartment through the telephone operator. Miss Elizabeth Moore, of 127 West Ninety-Sixth Street. No meeting with success, it was said, that he obtained a pass key to the apartment from a servant and, entering, discovered that Sutphen was dead, and found Captain Spohn and Miss Janiesto and [illegible] on different rooms.

Dunlea, it was said, then called Dr. Edward Hoke, of 100 Madison Avenue, who pronounced Sutphen dead. Dr. Hoke, it was said, then notified the police.

Sutphen, it was said, lived at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel for a time after coming to New York from Chicago, where he was born. He was married twice, it was said, and was divorced from his first wife. He is survived by his second wife and a son by his first marriage.

An educational film in connection with Peterborough interests should be interesting to Peterborough citizens when it is shown at the Royal Theatre for the first time to-night. This picture shows the action of Dustless Sweep Cleaning Machines, manufactured in Peterborough, in operation on the street in Winnipeg. It is a most interesting picture and on account of the machine being made here is considerable interest.

The Million Dollar Doll

By C. N. and A. M. Williamson

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY

Teresa Desmond (Terry), lovely and unbelievably innocent, has left her father.

Terrence Desmond, a selfish, unreliable man, the proprietor of the Blue Moon, a road-house, and has gone to

Juliet Divine, her beautiful half-sister—known as the Million Dollar Doll—whose sketchy career is unknown to Terry. No one knows of the girls' relationship and 'Julia' is careful to keep Terry, who is an exquisite counterpart of herself hidden from her (Julia's) fiance,

Eustace Nazlo, is a wealthy Greek whose unwelcome advances caused Terry to run away from her father.

Miles Sheridan, Terry's 'Dream Prince,' furnished the money for her convent education when she was a child, partly to atone for a past rudeness of

Hartley Phillips, acting as Sheridans' medium, has offered Julia twenty thousand dollars to take a yacht trip with Sheridan in order to facilitate Betty's obtaining a divorce. Unable to go herself, Julia persuades Terry to go in her place, posing as the Million Dollar Doll. Terry does this because of her desire to repay 'the Prince' for his generosity.

Suspicious of Julia's long silence, Phillips calls at her apartment and Terry, assuming her new role, informs him that she finds him coarse.

CHAPTER XXVII

A Neglected Young Wife in Lavender

Hartley Phillips was somewhat taken aback. The rebuke was so quaintly put and so unexpected that he wanted to laugh again, but he didn't quite dare.

He felt that the tables had been turned upon him. He had come to scold, and was being scolded.

But no doubt that was precisely the little cat's game. She had balanced a chip on her shoulder, and was edging him on to knock it off.

Very likely she really did want an excuse to wriggle out of the bargain she hadn't been keen to accept; but if so she wouldn't get it from him.

Though he'd threatened to find some one else for the yachting trip, if Miss Divine didn't toe the mark, he knew no one who would fill the bill as she filled it.

"I'm sorry " he said, scarcely letting his eyes twinkle. "I eat my own words —including the devil. But you must admit I have a grievance. For all I could tell, you might have left New York, and turned us down cold for some other business."

"Oh, I wouldn't do such a thing I wouldn't, even if I—" Terry caught back her words. The blush that flooded her face seemed to Phillips an achievement. There couldn't be much paint and powder after all, for that color to come through.

"I used always to believe you were a good little sport," he apologized. "I'm glad I was right. But all those excuses —those naps—those headaches.

"You don't look as if you'd been out of sorts. On the contrary, you look about ten years younger than when I saw you last."

"Oh, I hope not " cried Terry, then blushed, more than ever. The blood that streamed to her forehead forced tears to her eyes.

This time Phillips could not keep back his laughter. "I see your point," he said. "As you looked only about twenty-one before, going back ten years would make a child of eleven I seem rather clumsy today.

"But never mind, as you mean to play fair, we'll let bygones be bygones. I had to find out for certain if you were prepared to keep your contract; and I came to say, too, that I shall call for you myself, about two hours before 'Silverwood' is due to sail, and march you on board. Mr. Sheridan is unable to do this. I hope you don't mind?"

"I—never supposed he would come for me," said Terry.

The Million Dollar Doll humble Phillips was getting a bewildering number of new lights upon her character. But, after each shock, he told himself that it was part of the game.

She was merely practising upon him, to see what success she might hope to make with Sheridan later on, in the role of ingenue. He decided to warn Miles, whose treatment of Betty proved how soft he was towards women, in some ways.

"That'sall right, then," Phillips replied cheerfully; and went on to give Miss Divine her instructions. She must be ready early in the morning, day after tommorrow.

He would call for her at ten o'clock, in a taxi, as his own car was laid up (Julia would have known that this was not true; that he didn't wish his act of friendship for Sheridan to be too conspicuous); there would be a second taxi for luggage, within reason it might be as much as she liked—and the yacht would sail at twelve.

The girl thanked him quietly for everything. Not a single pert speech, not a single new extortion This new game was really deep.

Phillips began to enjoy it more than he would have thought possible at first, for the creature's skill and ingenuity pleased him. His own sharpness pleased him also, for he told himself that he wasn't in the least taken in.

As his motor was forced to give him a rest-cure, with traffic held up at Fifth Avenue and 34th Street a miniature purple limousine sneaked into a cranny of space close to his car. Phillips recognized it in a flash, and stole a glance at the occupant; Betty Sheridan.

Miles was the one human being the elder man devotedly loved, and his attachment to his friend caused him to detest Betty. As he sat in his big car, scowling at her in a dainty small one, he sent active waves of dislike towards the charming figure, exquisitely dressed in mauve that toned with the automobile.

He would have been glad to see the car smashed to matchwood, with Betty in it

If she were dead, Miles wouldn't need to go through this dreary farce on board "Silverwood," in order to take his wife's guilt on his own shoulders. Phillips could not think calmly of the pleasant future prepared for Betty Sheridan, by Miles' sacrifice; her divorce from him; the big sum in alimony she would get—big enough to make marriage possible with the man who had infatuated her—Prince di Salvano. Phillips wished he hadn't run across the woman this morning

As if those hate-waves had reached, and given her an electric shock, Betty turned her head and stared straight at Hartley Phillips before he could avert his eyes and pretend not to see her.

Outwardly the two were on quite good terms. Although Betty was aware that Phillips' eyes had seen, his ears heard her secret, he was like all the world—supposed to ignore the tension between husband and wife. Betty was staying with a friend in Greenwich, and the New York house was in the decorators' hands; the alleged reason why Miles lived at the studio.

The legend was that the world knew nothing, because there was nothing to know, until "the truth" about the yachting trip should leak out. Meanwhile, Mrs. Sheridan was a neglected young wife, whose pensiveness became her in shades of lavender.

She turned a face that had not changed much in feature or coloring in the seven years since Terry Desmond had peeped from an upper window of the Blue Moon to watch her. It had changed in outline, however, for Betty had been in dreadful danger of growing overplump, and she had dieted and drugged herself so violently that her cheeks were thin instead of round.

This made her look almost, if not quite, her twenty-eight years, but it made her also more interesting, less of the Christmas-card, chocolate-box type. Her golden hair was as golden as ever, perhaps more golden, and her turquoise blue eyes had gained expression from an artistic darkening of brows and lashes.

When the improvement came, a celebrated lady in FifthAvenue could have told. In fact, Betty was on her way to the lady at that moment; had come to New York from Greenwich on purpose—at least, that was the purpose alleged to her friend.

WHEAT YIELD WAS LOW IN MANITOBA

Saw Fly and Rust Cut the Yield to 8 to 15 Bushels An Acre—Yield of Oats Will Be Much Better.

WINNIPEG, Man., Aug. 29. Canadian Press. — According to the Canadian National Railway crop report for the week ending August 25, issued here last night, threshing is nearly completed in Southern Manitoba, where the wheat, affected by rust and saw-fly, and extremely hot weather in July, is yielding from 8 to 15 bushels to the acre. Reports indicate that oats will average from 30 to 40 bushels. Wheat has not been affected much by rust in northern Manitoba and should yield from 20 to 25 bushels. No threshing has started in the north.

Rye is yielding exceptionally well in many localities of southern Saskatchewan, the report states, yields averaging 25 to 35 bushels. From 35 to 40 per cent. of the wheat has been cut, the yields varying from 15 to 22 bushels to the acre. A much greater yield is predicted in the middle portions, where the yield at present is estimated at from 25 to 35 bushels. The same yields are expected in northern Saskatchewan, where the wheat cutting has been general.

The wheat yield expected in southern Alberta is from 25 to 40 bushels to the acre. Wheat cutting has been fairly general, although rain has delayed operations slightly. Damage from hail is reported from several districts. In the northern part of Alberta haying has been practically completed and wheat cutting has commenced in many localities and should be general by the end of the week. Crops in some places have lodged. Warm, dry weather is badly needed as the crop in northern Alberta is very heavy, and much later than the other provinces.

TRAINS CRASH IN ROCK CUT TWO MEN DEAD

Only One Member of Two Crews Escape Injury in Head-on Collision Yesterday.

IN COBALT DISTRICT.

COBALT, Ont., Aug. 29.—(Canadian Press.)—Two men are dead, a third is seriously injured and may not survive, and several others received minor injuries when two trains met in a head-on collision in a rock-cut at Mileage 158 on the T. & N. O. Railway yesterday morning.

Only one member of the two crews involved escaped injury. Brakemen Fowkey and Kirwood were scalded to death and T. Woolingson one of the engineers, is in a critical condition from severe scalds he received when the trains met.

Without Warning

The north-bound way-freight and a south-bound train of empty coaches met in a rock cut with terrific force and without warning. The crews had but little time to jump. Both engines were locked together tracks were completely blocked and and cars piled up like an accordion. it will be some time to-day before traffic can be resumed. Meantime passengers are being transferred around the wreck.

Dr. Edis, Swastika, assisted by passengers on the southbound morning train, rendered medical aid and a special train carried Doctors Cooper and Wilson from Englehart to the wreck. The roof of one of the passenger cars was thrown on top of the rock cut.

Mineral Production Shows Big Increase.

BRITISH STATESMEN VERY DISAPPOINTED IN LAST BELGIAN NOTE

Offers Little Or No Advancement Toward a Solution of the Reparations Problems.

FRENCH VIEW.

LONDON, August 29. Canadian Press. — Belgium's latest reparation note made public yesterday in Paris, is considered by the British Government officials, to whom it is addressed as offering little or no advance toward a solution of the Ruhr impasse.

While appreciating the generous language and the marked amity of the document, the British foreign office experts, were regretfully forced to admit that its functional proposals fall far short of Great Britain's expectations. The actuarial formulae with which the note abounds, will be examined by the British treasury authorities with an open an sympathetic mind in the hope of finding even some slight basis of accommodation to the British reparations plan. But a cursory examination of the French text of the Belgian note they said revealed only slight signs of agreement.

British officials admitted that they were frankly disappointed that the Brussels cabinet failed to offer anything new or any concrete or workable solution of its own conception. They professed to see in the note some evidence of composition by Premier Poincare of France.

Some surprise was expressed over the firm re-statement of Belgium's claims to priority. British experts reaffirmed their view that Belgium was showing herself too exacting in this respect in view of the allies generous action in wiping out the $1,500,000,000 owed them by Belgium and the further fact that the Belgians have already received about $360,000,00 of the total of $500,000,000 reparations due them from Germany.

The suggestion by the Brussels government that the percentages agreed upon at the Spa conference be revised received scant sympathy from the British who see in such a plan a curtailment of both the British and Italian shares of the indemnity.

Broadly therefore it is held in governmental circles that a reparation solution is no nearer to-day than a year ago, and that whatever slender hope there is for the future rests with the personal meeting of Prime Minister Baldwin and Premier Poincare before the former returns from his vacation in France.

PARIS, Aug. 29. Canadian Press. —The impression in official circles yesterday after reading Belgium's reply to the recent British reparation note is that the field is now clear for a new start toward negotiating a settlement of the problems between the allies.

Each of the most interested powers has stated its attitude clearly, and the difference between them in actual money figures is regarded as not so great as to preclude an agreement when their statesmen take an opportunity to talk the situation over.

The question now is, who will make the first move towards such conversations. Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin is looked upon here as the one from whom the initiative would most properly come, since he has the best occasion to take the step before leaving France, where he is now spending a short vacation.

He is expected to call on Premier Poincare at any event while passing through Paris for London, and it is pointed out that he could find no better opportunity for a heart to heart talk with the French premier.

WEDDING BELLS

DICKSON—STEELE.

On the evening of August 21, a very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Steele, Villiers, when their daughter, Edyth Annie, was united in marriage to John Rendle Dickson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Dickson, Westwood. The wedding ceremony was performed by Rev. Archibald of Keene, in the presence of a gathering of friends and relatives.

To the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march played by Lena Dickson, sister of the groom, the bridal party entered the parlour and took their places under an arch of evergreens, decorated with pink and white ribbon. The bride, who was given away by her father, looked charming in a gown of white satin and radium lace, with veil of tulle banded with orange blossoms, wearing the groom's gift, a gold wrist watch, and carrying a bouquet of Ophelia and Bridal roses.

The flower-girl, little Mary Steele niece of the bride was dressed in white embroidered Swiss trimmed with lace and blue ribbon. The groom's gift to the flower-girl was a pearl necklace, and to the pianist an onyx ring.

After the ceremony a dainty buffet luncheon was served in the dining-room, which was prettily decorated with evergreens and pink and white streamers, pink and white asters forming the table decoration.

Following the luncheon a pleasant hour passed, after which the happy couple, showered with confetti and good wishes, left on a honeymoon trip to Syracuse, N.Y.

On their return Mr. and Mrs. Dickson will reside in Otonabee.

TURKISH GOVERNMENT SEEK END OF TANGLE

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 29.—(Associated Press)—Principles of the future relationship between the Oecumenical Patriarchate and the Turkish government have been set down by the governing body of the Orthodox Church in Constantinople in a decree.

The principles of the decree are that the Patriarchate abandons its former political and administrative activities and remains purely a religious institution of pan-Orthodox character retaining its jurisdiction over marriage and cognate questions. Educational and charitable institutions will be administered by popularly chosen boards and the existing Mixed Council of the Patriarchate will be disbanded. The election of future patriarchs will be held in accordance with canon law.

FEW FRIVOLITIES FOR FORMER COEDS

Dances, Movies and Gymnasiums Were Unknown to the Women Students of Fifty Years Ago.

MINAKI, Ont., August 29 (Canadian Press). — No dance, no movies, and no gymnasium was the fate of the University co-eds of fifty years ago, according to reminiscences of many of Canada's seventy-two pioneer university women compiled by Mrs. Digby Wheeler, archivest of the Federation of University Women in Canada, and presented by her at yesterday afternoon's session of the Triennial meeting of the Federation. As a rule in the 80's undergraduate women met the men students at occasional receptions, and a drive with a horse and carriage once in six months was considered a great luxury, one early graduate wrote.

Another recounted the awful moment when she accepted the challenge of a "bold freshette" and attended lectures wearing a gown like the men, while the thunderstruck faculty legislated at a special meeting that she should not don the gown for the bacca-laureate sermon three weeks later.

At the same time, these early women graduates were exceptional students, Mrs. Wheeler said, taking very high standing in their examinations, and many of them doing valuable post-graduate work now. All these reminiscences record courteous treatment from their faculties, and students and all reflect public opinion of the time on higher education for women.

One Queen's University graduate writes:

"At one time it was claimed that college education operated against matrimony. Again it was held co-educational colleges were nothing more than matrimonial bureaus. The general impression was that it was inadvisable and a useless expense."

Mrs. Wheeler reviewed the history of women graduates in Canada. Details of the publication of the Federation Chronicle were reported by Miss Kennethe Haig, chairman of the publication's committee.

The delegates were the guests of the Minaki Inn last night.

REPUBLICAN STRENGTH IS GREATER THAN WAS AT FIRST ANTICIPATED

President Cosgrave and Most of His Ministers Have Been Elected, According to Early Returns.

VERY LIGHT POLL.

DUBLIN, Aug. 29. — (Canadian Press.)— With the exception of the National University contest no election results or figures have yet been officially declared in the general polling for members of the Dail Eireann throughout the Irish Free State. It is therefore still impossible to make any estimate of the eventual strength of the respective parties in the Dail.

Nevertheless there are indications of the possibility of the opposing parties being returned in more equally balanced strength than had been expected and it may be said that the Republicans are to-day showing greater confidence in the results than the government party.

For the National University the government candidates secured all three seats. They were Professor John MacNeill, Minister of Education; Professor Michael Hayes, Speaker of the last Dail, and Professor McGennis.

According to the first preference votes, which became known yesterday, President William T. Cosgrave in Kilkenny and Carlow headed the poll and secured election. Under the proportional representation system no actual polling figures are announced for several days, but in certain cases the votes on first preference sufficient to insure election are known and are announced in that way.

President Cosgrave's brother, Philip Cosgrave, Governor of Mount Joy Prison, is elected for Dublin city south. General Richard Mulcahy, Minister of Defence, on the first poll in the north city secured a quota and a surplus large enough when distributed, to carry the other government candidates with him.

Alderman Alfred Byrne, at present acting as Deputy Lord Mayor of Dublin, standing as an independent, secured a quota in the same division. In the south city contests Countess Markievicz reversed her last year's defeat, while Frank Aiken, the much wanted chief of staff of the Republicans, who for a long time has been "on the run," also won a seat in the Dail. It is considered remarkable that he stood third on the poll as he was mainly responsible for the irregulars' decision to dump, instead of surrendering, their arms.

Another feature of the elections was the small poll throughout the country which the Republicans count as extremely favorable to their cause as they claim to have polled practically their full strength. It is everywhere admitted that the poll has not averaged 70 per cent. for the whole country, and the Free Staters certainly expected heavier balloting. In Cork 80 per cent. of the vote was polled, but in Galway barely 50.

The government party last night put their claim modestly at 50 seats, and they fear the Republicans won 30. The Republicans themselves claim 47, and their chief organizers are in high spirits. They admit disappointment, however, with what they allege to be the small Labor poll.

In the county of Dublin, Kevin O'Higgins, Minister of Home Affairs, was far ahead of all the candidates on the first count, and is elected. No doubt is felt concerning the return of all the ministers. The election of Aiken also in a way is an advantage to the government, as it is said to involve the defeat of the Laborite Cathal O'Shannon, who was an unsparing critic of the government in the Dail, while Aiken under the Republican boycott, will not take his seat.

The proportional system was designed to secure representation for all substantial minorities and both in Dublin and the county the Republicans admitted they have a minority large enough to count. In the National University contest the only one in which official figures are available, the Republicans made a poor showing, Professor Hugh Ryan obtaining only 93 votes, while Professor MacNeill received 418. Ryan did not improve on subsequent counts, getting no second preference. Eamon De Valrea, is still Chancellor of the university and the statute provides no means of removing him from that position.

Ernest Blythe, Minister for Local Government, was returned at the top of the poll in Monaghan county. He is the fifth minister elected thus far.

The results of the general elections officially and semi-officially announced up to 11 o'clock last night give the government 76 seats and the Republicans 4. The farmers party is credited with 2, the Independents with 3 and Labor 1.

THOUSAND DOLLARS FOUND IN OLD BOOK

LONDON, Aug. 29.—(Associated Press)—The widow of the late John Troutbeck, for many years coroner for Westminster, had such a surprise when a box, shaped like a book, containing 200 pounds ($1,000), was returned to her, that she fainted. It appears that the "book" was among a number which Mrs. Troutbeck sold for three pounds ($15), thinking they were old medical works of her late husband, and of little value. The bookseller on examining them discovered one had a lock, and on opening it found a five-pound note and 190 one-p und notes, which he promptly returned to the widow.

VETERINARIES HAVE BRIGHTER OUTLOOK

Convention at Montreal Told of Unprecedented Prosperity in Spite of Gloomy Predictions.

MONTREAL, Aug. 29. Canadian Press. — Recalling a time in the past when depression in the American Veterinary world had given way to unprecedented prosperity, despite gloomy predictions on every side, Dr David S. White, Dean of the Veterinary College of Ohio State University, pictured a silver lining behind the present clouds obscuring the veterinary profession on this continent, in his address before the American Veterinary Medical Association in their 60th annual convention held here yesterday.

Dr. White dwelt on the educational problems of the profession and urged that veterinarians should not support any lowering of the present standards, but rather should aim for an elevation of the professional requirements.

Speaking before the French section of the convention, Dr. A. T. Charron of St. Hyacinthe, while admitting that the pasteurization of milk removed vitamines from the product during the process of killing the germs, held that the process was necessary until a better method was found.

Sir Arnold Thieler, from Pretoria, South Africa, spoke in French, and stated that glanders in South Africa had been practically eliminated.

Dr. S. Langevin, of Cookstown, Minn, said that he was visiting his alma mater for the last time. It is 43 years since Dr. Langevin was located in Montreal.

Very Sudden Death of Mrs. Jas. Thompson.

LINDSAY, Aug. 29. — Tourists and other visitors to Bobcaygeon will regret to learn of the sudden death in Toronto recently of Mrs. James Thompson, a former proprietor of the Rockland House. The remains were taken to Bobcaygeon on Friday last, and after service in Knox church, were interred in Verulam cemetery. She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Hirons and Mrs. Davis of Toronto.

Courtship of Long Ago Is Ended Happily.

WINDSOR, Ont., Aug. 29. — (Canadian Press.)—A courtship begun and later broken off more than a quarter of a century ago was ended happily yesterday when Benjamin Scott, aged 63, of Newbury, and Mrs. Mary Johnson, aged 65, a widow of Essex, were granted a marriage license at City Hall. The couple were to have been married at Essex in 1884, but a lovers' quarrel broke off the match a few days before the date set for the wedding. Miss Mary Mills was the name of the bride-to-be at that time. Later she married, but became a widow.

U.S. FARMERS WANT WHEAT PRICE SET

Farmers From the North-Western States Want Congress to Stabilize the Wheat Prices to Allow a Profit.

WHEATON Minn., Aug. 29.—(Canadian Press). — Twelve hundred farmers and farmers' representatives from the Northwestern States late yesterday adopted resolutions calling upon president Coolidge to convene congress immediately in extra session for the purpose of stabilizing the price of wheat. The farmers, mostly wheat growers, are not clear just how the government can legitimately aid them, but they demand that the aid be given, even if it is necessary for the government to take over the present crop.

The farmers voted that all other suggested remedies are ineffectual holding that congress of "buy more wheat," "diversified farming," "buy one thousand bushels of wheat," and other slogans to be without effect and that setting up of the United States grain corporation similar to that established during the war is the only means of relief for the farmer.

The three basic contentions arrived at by the delegates were: That an indefensible disparity exists between the prices of farm products and the prices of commodities which the farmers must purchase. That all agriculture requires is a permanent board for its assistance.

That a special emergency exists with the wheat growers at this time which will not await attention by the regular session of congress.

The convention formed itself into a permanent organization to be known as the Price Stabilization Committee, with representatives from each State serving on the executive committee.

This executive committee was authorized to take such action as it seems fit in maintaining an organization at Washington to further their plans.

CANADA'S FISH CATCH.

OTTAWA, August 28. — Canada's sea fish catch in 1922 amounted in value to $20,963,234.

YOUTH STUDIES HERE FOR WORK IN LITHUANIA

DANVILLE, Ills., Aug. 29.—(Associated Press)—In the little village of Westville, near here, lives Bruce Stulginskis, who appears destined some day to sit in the government councils of Lithuania, one of the new nations of Europe.

Stulginskis is the nephew of Aleksandros Stulginskis, who was elected president of the far away Baltic republic in June. He lives in the Lithuanian colony of Danville, is studying at the University of Illinois, and is preparing himself for a public career when he is graduated from college.

Bruce Stulginskis is the son of a Westville merchant, and since his father's death the Lithunian president has been directing the boy's education. According to the plan, Bruce will go from the University of eBrlin for a graduate course.

ACCIDENTAL DEATH INQUEST JURY SAYS

Wawa Fire Called Forth Recommendations For Safety Measures in Hotels.

HUNTSVILLE, Ont., Aug. 29.—(Canadian Press.)— The following verdict was reached on Wednesday morning by the jurors empanelled to inquire into the death of Miss Annie Leigh, one of the victims of the fire at Wa-wa hotel.

"That Annie Leigh came to her death accidentally at the Wa-Wa hotel, Muskoka, on August 19 while endeavouring to escape from the burning building."

The jury deprecated the absence of systematic inspection of public buildings for the purpose of testing the fire fighting appliances and also made a number of recommendations.

Enforce Inspection.

The jury found that "there being at present no proper system of government supervision, inspection be enforced to provide for adequate fire escapes, efficient fire fighting equipment, organization of a watchman service and for a general alarm system within buildings.

It further recommended that all elevator or hoist shafts in such buildings be of fireproof construction and that in the building of new hotels or lodging houses construction of a fire retarding nature be used within reason and that where possible segregated units be erected instead of one large building."

GOVERNOR PINCHOT TO ADVANCE PROPOSALS TO HALT THE COAL STRIKE

Representatives of Both Sides Will Remain at Harrisburg Until His Plans Are Announced.

MINES IN DANGER.

HARRISBURG, Pa. Aug. 29—(Canadian Press).—Sufficiently informed as to the issues on which a suspenion of anthracite mining has been ordered for Sept. 1, Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania yesterday broke off the series of conferences which he had been conducting with operators' representatives and officials of the miners' union and went to work drafting a settlement suggestion of his own. Both groups of men, who have been separately closeted with him for prolonged intervals during the two days since he intervened to prevent a break, agreed to await the proposal he will make but professed entire ignorance as to its terms.

"I have conferred with both sides and told them I hoped they would remain in Harrisburg to-morrow," the Governor said in a brief announcement of his purpose "within reach for consultation, and that I desire at the earliest possible moment before to-morrow night, if I can manage it —to have ready a suggestion for settlement of the strike. Both sides have courteously acceded to my request."

Meantime, with barely 72 hours to elapse before the men abandon their working places, the operators and miners took a step in anticipation of the struggle, to provide for the employment of engineers, pump operators and maintenance men underground while the miners are idle. Unless this work goes on, the mines will flood and cave in, suffering perhaps irreparable damage, and in past anthracite strikes and suspensions the union and the mine operators have agreed to a truce insofar as employment of the kind has been concerned. In the present controversy the union order for a suspension requires these men to stop work when the coal miners go out.

Phillip Murray, international vice-president of the United Mine Workers and C. J. Golden, Rinaldo Cappelleni, and Thomas Kennedy, the three anthracite district presidents called in James A. Gorman, secretary of the Joint Anthracite Conciliation Board and the usual intermediary between the union and the mining companies after leaving the governor's office yesterday. A communication to S. D. Warriner, chairman of the Operators' Policy Committee proposing negotiation on maintenance work was drafted. Governor Pinchot, asking adjustment of the entire suspension, did not concern himself with the detail, important as it has been considered by the parties to the controversy. Mr. Warriner's response to the union suggestion was not given out but it was considered likely that opportunity would be taken during the night to settle the points about four thousand men will

"WE ARE FROM CHATHAM."

Doubtless many Peterborough citizens noticed a motor car on the street yesterday with the words, "We are from Chatham, the Maple City," written in chalk upon the top.

To the Examiner at least that hastily scrawled sign stood for something that is an asset to any community, i. e., love for and pride in one's home town.

That motorist was not flying any false colours—he was from Chatham, and proud enough of it to want the world to know.

There isn't a town or a city in Ontario that would not be a better place in which to live if all its citizens showed a similar spirit.

Unfortunately, however, the reverse is the case with too many people.

Far from boosting about their home town when away from it, they go to the other extreme and abuse the community in which they are earning a living.

Which is the more desirable citizen—the man who when he goes on a motor trip wants everybody to know his home town, or the fellow who has only a sneer for the place in which he lives when he is among strangers?

Surely there need be no hesitation in answering that question.

The "We-are-from-Chatham" spirit will make a good town out of any community.

There is need of a lot of the same kind of stuff right here in Peterborough, and most of us can take a lesson from those few scrawls of chalk.

A FUSS OVER NOTHING.

Considerable fuss is being made over the fact that a Cuban warship which is visiting the Toronto Exhibition has a quantity of liquor on board and her officers have extended hospitality to some of Toronto's citizens who were their guests.

To press the question as to whether this hospitality was a breach of the Ontario Temperance Act is to merely make themselves ridiculous in the eyes of the world.

These foreign sailors are here for a few days, they consider their warship to be Cuban territory and therefore exempt from the regulations of this Province, and the moral standard of Ontario is not likely to be lowered because a few glasses of champagne may be consumed on the Cuban ship during her short sojourn in Canadian waters.

There are people, of course, who would like to make an issue of an incident of this kind, but fortunately for the reputation enjoyed by the people of Ontario as possessing a fair share of common-sense, their number represents but a small percentage of the population.

Why Toronto newspapers should "play up" the matter and do their best to impeach their home city as being guilty of provincialism is a mystery.

The Canadian National Exhibition has a world-wide fame, and it was not achieved by any narrow-minded, parochial attitude on the part of the men at the head of its affairs.

It would be a pity to mar that record by an unnecessary stir over an affair that is not even of passing importance.

PREPARING FOR THE WORST.

Across the line they are not regarding the coal situation with the same complacency with which it is being viewed by most of our Canadian authorities.

Over there where they might reasonably expect to secure a larger allotment of anthracite in the event of a shortage than would be supplied to Ontario, they are seriously concerning themselves with ways and means of meeting the crisis.

Only yesterday a conference of the Governors of the New England States was held at New York for the purpose of taking united action towards protecting their people against the effects of an inadequate supply of hard coal, and especially for arranging, if possible, for a reserve of substitutes that would prevent serious consequences.

Here in Canada we have so far done little or nothing to mitigate the effects of the shortage that seems certain to eventuate.

Every now and then an official shakes his head sagely and declares that the situation is better than last year.

And occasionally some one wakes up long enough to murmur, "Buy your coal now," and then lapses into slumber again.

That seems to be the sum total of the official effort to deal with an emergency.

Meanwhile those who are closer to the supply than we are in Canada are leaving no stone unturned to put themselves in a position to be able to meet a shortage with the minimum amount of distress and inconvenience.

SUBSTITUTES FOR ANTHRACITE.

President Coolidge's people down in New England, true to the traditions of their sturdy Puritan ancestors, are taking very definite steps to help themselves in this matter of coal; and we on this side of the line, similarly situated, will watch their efforts with genuine sympathy, says the Ottawa Journal. Some time ago, despairing of effective help from Washington, and convinced that these annual conferences between miners and mine operators were in the nature of subterfuge, they appointed the Joint Special Coal Investigation Committee of Massachusetts. As a rule, commissions and committees are duds; but this particular committee seems to have got in earnest, and in a hopefully constructive way. It has resolved to stop buying anthracite altogether and substitute bituminous coal.

The people of Massachusetts are going into this scheme of substitution with their eyes wide open. They clearly realize that bituminous coal is inferior to anthracite as a domestic fuel. It is dirty, smoky and smelly. It needs frequent firing. But it has all the necessary properties to produce heat, and that is the sole object in using any kind of fuel. Success is wholly a matter of skillful adaptation of the heating apparatus, and the obstacles in that regard are not insuperable. Thousands of people have been compelled to use bituminous coal in parts of the country where the hard variety is not obtainable, and they have got along with it very well. Convenience and preference must always bow to necessity. At all events, the New Englanders are making a brave show of sincerity, and they are a determined and resourceful people.

Canadians will watch this experiment with more than academic interest. In this country, as in the Eastern States, there is an abundance of soft coal. Every instinct of independence and self-containment rebels against our position as respects our supply of anthracite.

Of course, as has been said before in these columns, the logical way out of the anthracite difficulty is for the American people to put the entire coal industry under rigid control. Not the faintest trace of a sound reason can be put forward to the contrary. Politics is the chief obstacle; but when the self-interest of a suffering people reaches the point of assertion the schemes of politicians are certain to be thrust into the background. There is ground for hope in that direction, especially if President Coolidge reveals himself as a man of courageous leadership; but, in the meantime, we should do all in our power to help ourselves with such fuel as we have available in undoubted sufficiency.

WHEN WINTER COMES.

My memory chest for winter is full to overflowing
With lavish gifts that summer but lately was bestowing;
Green fields, blue skies and dancing rills;
The lark's sweet song from o'er the hills.
These treasures I will cherish while winter winds are blowing,
Till spring returns.

I'll delve into my chest for a bluebird's song of cheer;
The leafy treetops 'gainst the sky,
The violets blue, the fern near by,
And clover smells—and roses—they're safely hoarded here
Till spring returns.

All priceless wares that summer upon her shelves displayed
Are crammed into this chest, from valley, hill and glade.
I've wondrous sunsets 'neath the lid;
Here fragrant, moonlit nights are hid.
If skies are drab this winter, I'll face them undismayed.
Till spring returns.

WESTERN FARMING.

It is the opinion of the Edmonton Bulletin that altogether too much "blue ruin" talk has been indulged in regarding conditions in the West; and it must be admitted that many valid arguments are provided in support of this contention. Such depreciation, it is claimed, is not helpful to Western interests, and it is high time someone struck the opposite key. If there have been failures among the prairie farmers, as, of course, there have, they were not always due to conditions, but often to the farmers themselves. Those who were unfitted for the work have attempted more than they could accomplish; others, like the city folk, have been caught in "booms." There have been poor crops, grasshoppers, speculation, to which the widest publicity has been given; but "the West is as good a country as it ever was, and the only one that can be found where good land is within the reach of the man with a thin purse."

If farming does not pay in the West, asks the Bulletin, how comes it that thousands of men have gone into the business with little or nothing, and at the end of twenty years or so find themselves comfortably established for life? If even wheat-growing is the money-losing proposition that it is claimed to be, how is it that the majority of those who are now operating wheat farms of a section or more, and who have been in that branch of farming all along, had little or nothing to begin with? "Pencil and paper experts to the contrary, the fact remains that the average Western farmer is getting a little better off every year. Perhaps his bank account is not always larger, but his farm is being better equipped, more land added to it, and conditions created which mean permanent well-being for his family."

Examples are given of men who have become very prosperous from the smallest beginnings, and such instances might be multiplied indefinitely. "Such men have not been getting the notice of late years that would have been for the good of the country," declares the Bulletin. "Attention has been too exclusively fixed upon the misfortunes which have overtaken other farmers, some of their own making. Not all Western farmers have made a failure of the business, got into debt, and are shouting for the Governments to pull them out of the whole. But enough of them have suffered reverses, and so much publicity has been given to their troubles, that it has come to be almost questioned whether farming in the West is practically possible." The article proceeds:

"Farming is the safest and sanest occupation in the West. It is the fountain of all other business enterprise in the country. If it were not normally profitable, the wheels of trade would long ago have stopped over the whole Western region; alike the farms and towns would have been 'sold up' by the sheriff, and the prairie would again be the 'great lone land.' . . . While some have failed, thousands have succeeded, and in the long run the prairie farm has proven to be a solid foundation for the fortune of the man who tills it and for the business of the country which depends upon it. It is time to bring this incontrovertible evidence into prominence, and to keep it prominent alike at home and abroad."—Hamilton Spectator.

TORONTO MARKETS.

TORONTO, Aug. 29.—Stock receipts at the stock yards yesterday morning were just average. 44 carloads in all. Cattle, 379; Calves 317; hogs, 1,460; sheep, 425.

The exporters report a very quiet trade; the quality of cattle being offered they considered poor grade. The trade in general seemed slow after Monday's heavy run.

In addition to yesterday morning's cattle run there are still 2,000 cattle in the yards from Monday. Small lots of butcher's steers sold from $5.50 to $6.50 with a few good cows at $4.50 to $5.25. There are too many unfinished cattle on the market, dealers claim. Buyers are looking for good butcher stock but are not bidding on common steers and cows. Store cattle trade is still dull. Market in calves opened a shade stronger with tops at $12.

Lambs are a half a dollar higher with ewes and wethers at $12.50 to $13.25 and bucks at $11 to $11.25. Sheep are steady.

Packers are bidding half a dollar lower on hogs but no settlements were made up until noon.

OAT SHEAF COMPETITION.

Editor Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Allow me to make it clear that the oats grown for the decorated sheaf special prize competition at the Peterborough Exhibition need not necessarily be grown from "Growmore" seed. The contest is open to any brand of oats and to any lady.

I am glad to see our city ladies interesting themselves in this exhibit and trust a goodly number will get sheaves from their rural friends for decorating

It should be every citizen's aim to cooperate in making our fair bigger and better every year.

Yours, etc.
W. HOUNSELL.

QUIT THE JOB.

The Mail and Empire of Toronto wants to know the sign of wild ducks flying to the south. Nothing in it. The only sign I can give, is that they are flying south. But there is a man in the city a few points ahead of me. Perhaps he would be able to tell us the real sign of ducks going south. That's W. P. I think he gets pay, and I don't. All I get is abuse if I make a slight mistake. But if I hit it right no one would thank me.

You know, sometimes a thank you is as good as quarter. Last Saturday I told some of them that I was going to quit the job altogether.

AGAINST ILLEGIBLE WRITING.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—(Associated Press)—Postmaster General New, who is working on a new chapter in the great drama, "Why Mails Goes Wrong," has announced that a special campaign is being conducted to direct the attention of postal workers and the public to the frequent miscarriage of letters because of the similarity in the names of towns in various states.

Mail addressed, for instance, to Summerton, South Carolina; Summerton, Georgia; Summerville, South Carolina, and Lumberton, frequently is sent to the wrong place due to illegible writing. Dover, North Carolina and Milford, Texas, also have considerable trouble getting some of their mail because the addresses fail to make clear the state in which the town is situated.

A SERIOUS CASE OF NERVOUS BREAKDOWN

Benefited by WINCARNIS

"Some time ago I had a very serious nervous breakdown. I was in such a debilitated condition that an infection of my blood followed an attack of ulcerative sore throat, and I began to lose weight and strength at an alarming rate. As my condition grew worse, it became impossible for me to get a full night's sleep.

When my nervousness and weakness became almost unbearable I began taking Wincarnis, and the improvement was very noticeable before I had finished the first bottle. I am now myself again, and both my father and my son are taking Wincarnis because they have seen how wonderfully it acted in my case. Wincarnis is certainly a remarkable tonic for those suffering from nervous exhaustion, thin blood, sleeplessness or great debility."

STORY A WEEK FOR 17 YEARS

20 Million Words About Frank Merriwell Written By Former Detroiter.

BOSTON, Aug. 29.—A story a week for 17 years is the writing record of Gilbert Patten. A total of more than 20,000,000 words—more than 22,000 words a week.

Patten wrote under the name of Burt Standish. He was creator of Frank Merriwell,- that dauntless and versatile young man of nickel weekly fame who differed from the mighty Casey of Muddville chiefly in that he never whiffed with the bases full, when the game depended on his efforts. Then, too, to list only a few of Frank's many accomplishments and extraordinary virtues, he could run like a deer, make a touchdown almost any time it was needed to win the game, row, swim, outshoot the boldest of bad men, fight and foil plotters; he never smoked, drank, told lies or did anything else that could possibly be out of keeping with the highest standards of gentlemanly conduct.

Frank is Now Resting

Recently Patten decided to give Frank a rest, doubtlessly needed after Frank's 17 years of Herculean endeavor, and is now devoting his time to writing short stories and motion picture scenarios.

"I haven't written a Merriwell storfor some time," he said recently at his summer home in Maine. "I never felt that it was my life's work, never was particularly proud of it. In fact, many of my acquaintances never knew that Patten and Standish were one."

Patten was born in Maine, near Dexter. At 16 years old he ran away from home and obtained employment in a machine shop. In a short time he discovered that there was a great difference between home and machine shop. He went back home, and started to write.

First Story Brought $3

"When I was 17," he said, "I sold two short stories to a magazine for $3 each. About a year later I sold another for $75. I decided that perhaps I could write and have been at it ever since."

At 19 he started a newspaper in Detroit and gained considerable experience, in addition to piling up debt. He managed to sell at a price which lifted the debt and enabled him to take a trip out West. Later he capitalized his western experiences in several books, "The Boy from the West," "The Boy Cattle King" and "Don Kirk's Mine." The two latter have been reprinted several times and are still selling.

Then came the invincible Frank Merriwell. Patten wrote the first story at the request of a publisher. It was called "Frank Merriwell of Fardale." The publisher accepted and offered Patten a contract for one story a week for three years. This arrangement was continued for 17 years, in which Patten turned out about 22,000,000 words.

NOT SURE WHICH IS HIS OWN SON.

And So New Orleans Father Adopts Two Boys.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Aug. 29.—Pasquale Interranti's son has come home again.

An amazed father has found his boy a second time. Now there are two sons called Peter in the Interranti home to which only one was ever born.

Not confident which is his, Interranti has adopted both and embraced each with equal love. For love, he opines, is the greatest curative for hurts of heart. And Interranti's heart has been hurt much.

Fate Invokes Tragedy

Woven through the story is a strange mixture of fate mingled with unpublished tragedy.

Twenty years ago when his wife's health started failing Interranti placed his only son, Peter, in an orphanage here. When the mother died five years later he went back for the bambino and received without questioning a lad of six who asylum officials said was his.

The father went away, married again and raised the boy to manhood with never a thought entering his mind that the child was other than the original baby, Peter.

Recently he received the shock of his life when a crowd of young men entered his soft drink parlor and after purchasing some pop and near beer suggested that the bill be charged to Peter Interranti.

"You can't do that," Interranti interrupted. "Peter Interranti is my son, and besides we carry no charge accounts."

"Well, you won't have to charge it, spoke up one of the youths. "I'm Peter Interranti, and here's your money."

"Peter Interranti You? Let me see what you have to prove it by," exclaimed the bewildered man behind the counter.

Spurns Blood Tests

In answer the youth who had made the claim produced papers from the same orphanage in which Interranti had placed his son years before.

Likewise he let the storekeeper inspect a baptismal certificate which gave Interranti's name and that of his dead wife as parents of the child duly authenticated by the family's parish priest.

More meetings followed and in the end Interranti decided that adopting the newcomer would be best.

"I had but one son," he says. "But it is evident that some mistake has been made. However, I wish to be sure. Love is all in this world and I am capable of loving them both, one as much as the other."

Blood tests have been suggested to the father, but he spurns the idea.

"Bah," says he. "We've all got blood in here," and with mighty hand he thumps his chest above his heart.

If you are a constipation victim you need Bran that is ALL BRAN

Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumbled, is so delicious and inviting that thousands of families use it constantly to make enticing bakery batches, such as bran muffins, pancakes, raisin bread, etc.; they eat it as a cereal, and many sprinkle it on their favorite cereal, its nut-like flavor having a fine appeal.

Many more thousands of people eat Kellogg's Bran every day of their lives because it has permanently relieved them of constipation and the dangers of dreaded diseases that constipation leads to. If you are suffering with constipation you need ALL BRAN — Kellogg's Bran — with its permanent corrective qualities. Foods that are part bran can never give the desired relief because they do not contain sufficient of the elements that Kellogg's Bran naturally contains.

When you know that constipation heads directly to Bright's disease and other ailments, there is no time to be lost in experimenting. Kellogg's Bran, delicious in its patented cooked and krumbled form, becomes an immediate necessity. If it is eaten regularly (two tablespoonfuls daily; in chronic cases with each meal)—it will relieve constipation permanently! Your physician will recommend Kellogg's Bran. It will free you from proprietary pills and cathartics which are as system-racking and almost as dangerous to health as constipation itself!

Serve Kellogg's Bran regularly. Watch the health of your entire family improve. It is wonderful for children. Kellogg recipes are printed on each package. All grocers sell Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumbled.

Treatment of Cuts

Don't neglect a cut, no matter how trifling. Infection frequently has resulted in loss of a finger or toe. Blood poisoning may result in weeks of sickness. The whole system may feel the effects of careless treatment.

"Clean cuts" are made by a sharp blade passing through the cuticle, or outer skin, into the vascular, or true skin. If only the capillaries or a small vein is injured, the bleeding soon stops. If deep, an artery may be severed or muscles, tendons and ligaments injured.

If the instrument is dull, laceration, a jagged wound, may result. Such must be carefully treated to remove dirt or foreign matter. The flesh and cuticle must be bound together to avoid scars.

In slight cuts, wash the wound with pure water, boiled if possible. Peroxide of hydrogen is also excellent. When properly cleansed, apply iodine and alcohol in equal parts (tincture of iodine) with a small brush or swab of absorbent cotton. Put a piece of sterilized gauze or clean white cotton over the wound and bandage.

In deeper cuts, where an artery has been injured, it may be necessary to use a ligature, to tie or bind the ends of the severed artery. In severe cases a tourniquet may be needed to prevent bleeding to death. In such a case, bind the wound between the cut and the body with a small rope, a strip of cotton or rubber bands. Insert a stick under the binder, and twist until the bleeding stops.

LOST 2 HORSES IN PECULIAR ACCIDENT

Fell Nine Feet From Rear Entrance of Barn and Were Killed.

CAMPBELLFORD, August 29. — George S. Little, who lives on a farm on the gravel road between Hilton and Brighton lost two horses yesterday in a peculiar manner.

Mr. Little drove into his bank barn with a load of grain, and the horses, which were running at large in the yard, ran into the building, both doors of which were open, and crowding past the load of grain, headed for the other door There is no platform to the entrance to that side and the horses fell to the ground, a distance of nine feet. Both were killed, the neck of one and the back of the other being broken.

The team attached to the waggon took fright and it was with the utmost difficulty that Mr. Little prevented them from following the other horses to their death. One of the dead horses was the favorite family driver, and as it had not been used for farm work had seldom been in the barn.

Mr. Little, whose loss will be heavy, is a brother in law and neighbor of S. A. Thompson who broke his hip when he fell from a scaffold while unloading grain in his barn last Monday. Mr. Thompson's condition yesterday was regarded as as grave and preparations were being made to remove him to a hospital in Belleville.

ENGLISH PAPERS VOICE PLEASURE.

Irish Elections Show De Valera Has Failed at Ballot as Completely as in Field.

LONDON, Aug. 29.—(Canadian Press)).—The English Press generally refrains from comment on the Irish elections until more returns are in, but the Daily Express already characterizes the polling as a republican rout and in an editorial under the caption "Exit de Valera" says the Republican Leader, has failed at the ballot box as completely as he failed in the field. The counting continues to-day and it is expected that by evening, there will be a more precise indication of the strength the various parties will have in the new parliament.

The morning Post says the Government party is naturally pleased with the return of President William T. Gosgrave and nearly all of his ministers on the first count. On the other hand, the Republican organizers are contending that the small poll has been unfavorable to the government.

Kevin O'Higgins, minister of home affairs who has been elected in County Dublin, told a representative of the Daily Express "The Republicans have been swamped throughout the country. I shall be surprised if twenty of them are returned."

GOVERNMENT PARTY HAD BIG SUPPORT

Newspapers Regard the Results of Irish Election As Endorsement to the Cosgrave Government.

DUBLIN, August 29 (Canadian Press). — Some days must elapse before the complete results of Monday's election can be published, says the Irish Times, adding that President Cosgrave and his colleagues have no reason to be dissatisfied with the returns already announced.

The Freeman's Journal asserts that the Government party has done better than even the most optimistic of its supporters believed would be possible, while the Daily Independent declares that the outstanding feature of the first returns is the enormous total polled by the ministers.

This, the newspaper adds, discloses a desire to give unqualified endorsement to the Government programme.

NO MORE BANKS TO CLOSE DOORS.

Financier Says Canadian Banks Have Passed Crisis—Merger Recommended.

OTTAWA, August 29 (Canadian Press). — That he had definite assurance from a very reliable source that no other Canadian bank would close its doors during the present period of uncertainty, was the statement made here last night by Hume Cronyn, ex-M.P. for London, and a well-known Canadian financier.

Mr. Cronyn said that the Home Bank's suspension was most unfortunate, but that the merger of the Bank of Hamilton by the Canadian Bank of Commerce was a matter of great satisfaction

"All the smaller banks are feeling the stress of hard times," he remarked.

Mr. Cronyn asserted that there are many scare mongers at present who spread rumours of impending disaster to the banks and financial houses without foundation.

Mr. Cronyn felt that the crisis had been passed by Canadian banks.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

King Snookums is Lost

Mister Codger came rushing out of the royal palace of Pee Wee Land crying out:

King Snookums is lost! His bed hasn't been slept in and he hasn't come to get his breakfast. His soft boiled eggs are stony cold and everything's spoiled."

"My goodness!" cried Nancy. That's funny. I s'psoe Nick and I would better be looking for him."

"Oh, yes, please do!" begged Mister Codger. "I'm so nervous! I'm afraid I am going to have a chill. I'm so afraid some bird has picked him up in mistake for a bug or something. There! I knew it! I have a chill."

Mrs. Codger came along and led her nervous husband away to give him a drink of hot catnip tea, and Nancy and Nick started to hunt for the tiny lost king.

"We'll look in the palace first," said Nancy.

So they looked under all the beds and in all the cupboards and in all the trunks and behind the doors and up in the attic and everywhere.

But no king could they find.

Then they went down to the cellar.

Nancy's sharp eyes discovered a "Here's something!" she called to Nick.

"Yes, sir, he's been here, for here's his crown. It fell off when he went down the hole. Let's follow!"

So the Twins crawled through the hole and found that it led through a long dark passage. They had lightning bug lanterns for light, you know, so they could see.

"Oh, I'm so glad you came!" called King Snookum's voice. "I've just found this lovely secret passage. I never knew it was here and I'm trying to find out where it goes."

"I'll tell you, called Nick. "It goes right into Mister Mole's house, and if you don't want him to make a meal of you, you'd better come back."

"I've wanted a secret passageway all my life!" declared Snookums, "and now that I've found it I'm not going to give it up."

"Who's doing all that talking?" demanded a deep voice.

And away they all went as fast as they could go.

Husband Gains 11 Lbs. And Wife 33, on Tanlac

Hamilton Business Man Gives Striking Examples of Restorative Powers of Celebrated Medicine — Ended Stomach Troubles Entirely, He States.

William H. Dyer, well known proprietor of the Dyer Painting & Decorating Co., 27-29 Railway St., Hamilton, Ont., is another who has found the Tanlac treatment invaluable in recuperating his health.

"Tanlac has done so much for my wife and myself," says Mr. Dyer, "that we want to let everybody know what a great medicine it is. As a result of three years' stomach trouble I had reached such a poor state of health that my useful days seemed to be about over.

"When I started taking Tanlac I was not eating anything scarcely and even then I would bloat up as tight as a drum and suffer severe pains in my stomach and back. My nerves were all undone and I would get so dizzy on a ladder that I was in constant fear of falling to the ground.

"I seldom got more than an hour's unbroken sleep at night and lost many days from my work, being too tired and miserable to even leave the house. After Tanlac restored my wife's health I began taking it myself and now we are never without a bottle in the house.

"Soon after I began taking it my troubles disappeared and I picked up eleven pounds in weight. My appetite is so keen now I can't control it and, while I eat like a wolf, I never feel a touch of indigestion any more. My nerves are like iron. Why it wouldn't even ease me a bit to paint the City Hall Flag Pole, for my nerves are steady as a die even at dizzy heights.

"I sleep every night like a school boy and am feeling so strong and well that life and work are a pleasure. My wife gained thirty-three pound by taking Tanlac and between us we have personally praised it to a great many people. We consider it without an equal.

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 37 million bottle sold.

760 Stray Children At Toronto Exhibition.

TORONTO, August 29 (Canadian Press). — While the rawness of the air and threatened rain kept the attendance down somewhat at Young Canada's Day at the Toronto Exhibition yesterday, it looks as though a high record has been set up in the matter of the number of lost children.

No fewer than 760 little ones were found wandering aimlessly about the grounds, and were led by the policemen or other kind-hearted observers to the shelter of the Police Station, where they were comforted with reassuring words and candy.

All were retrieved save two, a boy and girl, whom General Manager Kent last night took to his home to await claimants.

General Hertzog expressed gratitude for the Premier's assurance that Anglo-French relations were friendly

Price of Gas Too High, Says Hamilton Mayor.

HAMILTON, Aug. 29.—(Canadian Press).—Mayor Jutten yesterday gave out a statement in which he said the price of gasoline here was too high and should be dropped at least three cents. He said if dealers did not reduce the price steps may be taken to force such action. The mayor says the city was offered gasoline of 64.6 gravity at 17 2-3 cents. Dealers ask 27 cents for ordinary gasoline and 29 cents for special kinds and he thinks they should cut off at least three cents.

AUTO SAFETY RULES

General Move For Inter-Nationwide Uniform Laws.

With the annual summary of summer accidents comes another concerted move for the adoption of safety measures throughout the country. What can't be effected through legislation is being advocated through education.

Thus we get the American Automobile Association and its member organizations encouraging the adoption of uniform traffic legislation in all the States, so that auto accidents may be further reduced. At the same time States are passing all sorts of laws enforcing caution among auto drivers

Three States have gone so far as to compel motorists to come to a complete stop before crossing railroad tracks. They are Virginia, North Carolina and California, although the California law applies only to motor buses and trucks carrying inflammable or explosive material.

States Unite.

What other States haven't accomplished toward stopping railroad crossing accidents, safety organizations and large businesses have been doing. For instance, the Standard Oil Company of Indiana has pledged its 8,500 drivers to come to a full stop at railroad crossings. And this is one of many firms that have taken similar action.

Put railroad crossing safety is only a detail of a lengthy program for accident prevention throughout the country. City traffic is the greatest problem presented to the State authorities. And to solve it, some of the States have formed a so-called "conference" of motor vehicle administrations with the main purpose of attaining uniformity in motor vehicle legislation.

This conference includes the ten States consisting of New England, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland and Ohio. In its desire for uniform auto laws, the conference already has brought this about in the matter of headlights, especially, and in other features.

Hand Signals.

Safety organizations are now trying to produce uniformity in safety laws throughout these States and the rest of the country. For example, the Cleveland Safety Council is trying to promulgate a system of hand signaling for general adoption in all parts of the United States. Its sponsors say it is the simplest form of signaling the man behind what you are going to do, and can easily be recommended for use by all drivers.

At the same time the American Automobile Association, the National Motorists' Association and other similar organizations are seeking uniformity of State auto laws, not only from a safety angle but for the general benefit of drivers. As Major Roy Britton, Chairman of the Legislative Board of the A.A.A., puts it:

"The adoption of a uniform code of regulations would not only reduce the hazard of driving along our streets and highways through a common understanding of just what the regulations are, but would make their enforcement easier."

Fruit of Canada on Exhibit in England.

The Imperial Fruit Show, which is to be held in Manchester, England, at the end of October and the early days of November, has special significance for Canada this year. The British apple crop will be light, while Canada will have a fine lot of fruit to dispose of. Canadian fruit is to be well represented at this Show, not only in the competitive Overseas Section, but the Fruit Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture will make a display that will be of special significance. Fruit inspectors of the Department, it is reported, by the Fruit Commissioner, are at present looking over commercial orchards in the different parts of Canada with a view to locating the sources of the samples that are to be displayed. The Branch will have an imposing booth which will contain pictorial and other representations of the Canadian fruit industry. From the standpoint of the overseas apple grower, Canada is given special consideration as the Board of judges will contain a Canadian representative who will be nominated by the Fruit Commissioner. The members of the Board will consist of three men, one each from Great Britain and Canada, and a neutral judge.

Schedules of Classes and Entry blanks or any further information in regard to the Imperial Fruit Show may he had upon application to the Fruit Commissioner, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

A WOUND IS AN OPEN DOOR

Absorbine Jr. enables you to shut the door quickly.

The skin is Nature's own protection against germs. When it is bruised, broken or cut, that protection is withdrawn. The door is open. As quickly as possible Nature closes it by forming what we call a scab and renders you comparatively safe against infection. But this scab sometimes takes days to form and until it has fully sealed the wound, even until the wound has thoroughly healed again you must furnish the required protection yourself.

A few drops of Absorbine Jr. in the water will give you an antiseptic wash that will kill all possibility of infection and help nature to heal the wound. As well as being a very powerful germicide, Absorbine Jr. will draw out the inflammation and bring instant relief.

Absorbine Jr. is antiseptic, germicide and liniment in one container—handy to keep always in the house; easy to carry around if you travel.

ATTEMPT CLIMB DIFFICULT PEAK

Grand Teton in Yellowstone Park Has Been Conquered Twice in Fifty Years.

(By HARRY W. FRANTZ)

YELLOWSTONE PARK, Wyo., Aug. 29 (United Press).—Arrangements now are being made here for an ascent of the Grand Teton, to be attempted about the end of August by a party under leadership of Dr. A. R. Ellingwood of Lake Forest College, Lake Forest, Ill.

This peak, the most difficult to climb in the United States, has been ascended to its summit only twice in 50 years, the last time in August, 1898.

The Ellingwood party will first visit the Yellowstone National Park, and then proceed southward past Jackson Lake to the nearest point to the Grand Teton, which can be reached by road probably in the vicinity of Bradley Lake. Besides the Grand Teton the party also will attempt to climb Mount Moran.

The attempt to ascent the Grand Teton derives added interest from the fact that the late President Harding recently announced his strong personal approval of the proposed extension of Yellowstone Park to include this and neighboring peaks. The Grand Teton and vicinity affords the finest Alpine scenery in America.

The First Ascent

The ascent of the Grand Teton was first accomplished on July 29, 1872, by Nathaniel P. Langford, superintendent of Yellowstone National Park, and Captain James Stevenson of the United States Geological Survey.

The second successful ascent was made on August 11, 1898, by Rev. F. S. Spalding of Erie, Pa., W. O. Owen of Wyoming and two assistants, John Shive and Frank Peterson.

Finding no marks on the summit to indicate previous ascent, Owen challenged the claim of Langford and Stevenson to first ascent, and started a controversy which was waged 25 years among mountaineers. A survey of the evidence by General Chittenden favored the claim of the Langford-Stevenson party.

A dozen other attempts to climb the Grand Teton have been unsuccessful. The great difficulty confronting climbers is the traversing at a point about six hundred feet below the summit of a ledge not over 16 inches in width, 40 feet in length, skirting a cliff about 3,500 feet high. Ice conditions also weigh heavily in any attempted ascent.

Owen, who was in the second successful ascent, now is a resident of Los Angeles, Calif. He returned to Jackson's Hole, Wyo., this summer to survey conditions with a view to climbing the peak again next summer.

Sign Post to Pioneers

After inclusion in the Yellowstone Park and the development of travel in the Teton region, the ascent of the Grand Teton will doubtless become a popular pastime with mountain climbers. Besides its marvelous scenic beauty, the Grand Teton is famed in Western history because of its ser vice to pioneers crossing the plains as a guide-post. It rises very abruptly 7,500 feet above Jackson's Hole, and in clear weather is readily visible at more than one hundred miles distance.

The mountain was named Grand Teton by early French trappers because of its fancied resemblance to a woman's breast. The country nearby, Jackson's Hole, was known in early western history as the rendezvous of outlaws and cattle rustlers, and now regards itself the Last Frontier of America.

A few drops of alcohol on a hot cloth, so placed that the alcohol fumes enter the ear, will often relieve an earache.

INSECTICIDE.

If roaches or water bugs make their appearance in the kitchen mix dry powdered borax with its own bulk of white sugar and set in shallow vessels where the bugs are likely to be. Renew the mixture every few days.

LEFT OVERS.

Meat left over from dinner can be chopped and used in an omelette for the next day's luncheon. Or it may be combined with rice and tomatoes and used in a scalloped dish.

GREENS.

The tops of summer beets and turnips and the outer leaves of lettuce can be cooked as spinach. They make excellent greens.

BE CAUTIOUS OF SUBSTITUTES

There are several medicines on the Canadian market to relieve Kidney and Rheumatic Ailments, but there is one preparation that seldom fails to give quick relief and for that reason Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills are in a class by themselves.

This statement is vouched for by well known residents of this city. For instance Mr. Arthur Pinch, well known in the city, states that he was unable to work and suffered severe pains from backache, but after using three boxes of Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills, he was able to go back to work and is as well as ever.

Mr. Thos. Oldham, another well known Simcoe street resident, has no hesitation in saying that for Kidney and Rheumatic Ailments, there is no equal of Dr. Banta's Pills.

Never neglect Kidney Ailments as they are liable to lead to other complications, but always keep on hand a box of Banta's Pills. If they fail to do what we claim for them, return your box to your dealer and your money will be refunded.

Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills are sold at Lynch's Drug Store, 168 Hunter street. Mail orders attended to promptly. m.w.-84

ODDITIES IN NEWS

Puzzle

Half the farmers made less than $1000 last year, claims Nathan Straus Jr., agricultural expert of the New York State Senate. Such figures are confusing. Do they represent clear profit? If so (and probably not), the farmers in addition got their living. Few city workers have $1000 clear after paying for food, etc.

On the other hand: In New Jersey, 309 school pupils in one year clear nearly $70,000 above all expenses, from their home gardens. That's $175 apiece, and in spare time. They had, of course, no investment in land, no notes at bank, no taxes.

Intensive farming and diversified crops may be the solution for many farmers, especially ones who stake everything on one crop. The cotton grower finally is learning this.

Odd

An old married couple in Kochi, Japan, recently attended their own funeral, which they decided to hold before their deaths. This is real news—something that probably never happened before.

After the ceremony, the old couple banqueted the "mourners" and said that the funeral had given them a new lease on life.

In the last analysis, life is a preparation for death. It's a journey between two mysterious stations.

Bug

The boll weevil can be practically wiped out by airplanes scattering calcium arsenate in dust form. So claim some of the bug experts at Uncle Sam's agricultural experiment station, Tallulah, La. They have successfully attacked boll weevils this way in limited acreages. The poison costs a dollar an acre.

Valuable scientific progress, of course. But it starts us pondering, what may be accomplished by poison-scattering air-planes in future wars. We are progressing mechanically faster than we are morally. Like giving a savage a high-power rifle before he can be counted on not to use it recklessly.

Fish

It's not true that fish is a brain food, claims a writer in Journal of American Medical Association.

Fish, however, is easily digested and a great builder of strength. We should eat more of it—and would, if fish on the average were fresher when they reached our kitchens.

As for real brain food, nothing in particular has been discovered except that the brain functions best when we are physically in good shape. In this sense, any healthful food is "brain food." Endocrine glandologists are beginning to believe that thought has a close connection with a form of iodine, the poison which is manufactured "in combination" by the thyroid gland in the neck.

Pigeon-Toed

The right foot of Americans, on account of its use in handling autos, is becoming pigeon-toed. So claim specialists who treat diseases of the feet. There was similar discussion a year ago.

A good thing. Pigeon-toed is the natural way to walk. Watch the Indian. And, by the way, if nature had intended us to wear heels on our shoes she'd have grown them on our feet. The heel was first put on shoes to prevent the soldier-horseman's foot from slipping in the stirrup.

Rag-Chewing

A Chicago laundryman, advertising for deaf and dumb women, says he figures he'll get more and better work out of employes who can't waste time talking. He has noted that most of us cannot continue working, even with our hands, when we gossip.

This valuable scientific discovery might be applied by voters to speed up Congress. Nothing really wrong with Congress except that it talks too much.

FALL OF MARK LAID TO GERMAN STRATEGY

LONDON, Aug. 29.—(Associated Press).—Various reasons have been given for the depreciation of the mark. In a recent circular Messrs. Samuel Montagu & Co., bankers and bullion experts, give an interesting example of how Germany herself is weakening the mark on foreign exchanges by enlarging the demand for stable currencies. Prussian and Bavarian banks, with State sanction, it is stated, are attracting savings deposits on the undertaking to repay the depositor in paper marks of the same gold value.

The "Savings Gold Mark" thus avoids the depreciation of the deposits while they remain with the bank. The bank avoids any loss in this way. The "Savings Gold Mark" basis is merely camouflaged dollars. When the depositor hands his savings to the bank, to be kept say for three months, at 3 per cent., the bank at once buys a corresponding amount of dollars and deposits them with an American bank at, say, 5 per cent.

The result is that the depositor, who is precluded by law from sending his money abroad, is also by law enabled to do so, while the bank makes a more or less handsome profit both on exchange and on interest, which profit the bank, also prohibited and permitted by the law, leaves abroad.

NOTED HERBERT HOOVER IS UNCLE TO RUSSIANS

MOSCOW, Russia, Aug. 28.—(United Press.) — Herbert Hoover may be the Honorable" in official and diplomatic circles, but to about five million Russian youngsters he is "Uncle" Hoover. Of the hundred of letters daily pouring into American Relief Administration headquarters in Moscow perhaps the most appealing are those addressed to "Uncle" Hoover from his tiny "nephews." Here is a typical child letter, translated literally.

"Dear Uncle Hoover: For half a year sister and I have had dinner in your kitchen in Petrograd. Had you not thus helped us, we should have died of hunger. God bless you and your children for that good deed. Now we are better off, papa is work and on Sundays we even get meat. We should like very much to correspond with somebody of the American children. We can write in Russian and German. Yours gratefully, Ernest and Norah Pievitz, Kazanskaya 45, flat 36, Petrograd."

Clifford White and Gordon Salter, two members of the "Young Farmers' Clubs of Great Britain", who came to Canada at the invitation of E. W. Beatty, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, to study Canadian ways and means of agriculture, are much impressed by the Canadian West, and their reports, published in Great Britain, will no doubt turn the minds of many farm workers to the opportunities Canada offers. They are here seen hoeing and using a hand cultivator at Olds', where they and the two other "Beatty Boys" took a summer course.

WITH THE CAMPERS DOWN THE RIVER

AT BRAUNDPORT.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Greene, Mr. Roy Greene, Miss Mildred Greene, and Master Donald Greene of Peterboro, were visitors at Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Braund's camp on Sunday.

Miss Molly Gregory of Toronto, is visiting Mrs. Mendell Braund, at Braundport.

Mr. Henry Greene of Perry street city, visited Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Braund on Sunday.

Messrs. Garth, Lorne, Gordon, Ernest, and Eldon Braund, Messrs. Ronald and Gerald Routly and Mr. and Mrs. Ben Smith, all of Braundport, accompanied the Boy's Band of the Salvation Army, to Port Hope over the week-end.

Master Bramwell Smith, of Peterboro, is visiting friends at Braundport'

Mr. and Mrs. R. J. G. Sutherland visited J. T. Braund's camp, on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Moyser of Bowmanville, spent Sunday at Braundport, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Routly.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Routly returned to the city on Monday after spending the past three weeks at Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Routly's camp.

Mr. L. Gibson and Mr. F. Thirnbeck spent Sunday afternoon and evening visiting the Misses L. and M. Routly.

Last Sunday was the occasion of the last service of the season at Braundport. Good weather has been enjoyed throughout the summer and a very good attendance has been recorded. Next Sunday's service will not be given as usual, but there will be Sunday School held at one of the camps, if the weather permits.

The campers have intimated their intention of leaving for their homes during the coming week, as the weather is becoming somewhat unsettled.

The usual corn roast will not be held this year, owing in part to the scarcity of corn.

CRAWFORD'S GROVE

Miss Maudie Samways of Toronto spent week end at Toot-an-Kumin Camp, the guest of Miss Helen Mowry.

Miss Catherine Millard is visiting friends in Bailieboro.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Edwards, and son, have returned to Toronto after camping in Crawford's Grove for the past three weeks. The Grove, and along the banks of the Otonabee, are becoming popular camping sites for out-of-town dwellers. The fishing is reported as being very good.

Major Gordon Hall had a very successful catch of fish this week-end catching 18 bass and pickerel. Major Hall still believes that there are just as many fish in the Otonabee as have ever been caught yet, and is not adverse to trying his luck again at any time.

SWEETBREADS

Sweetbreads are a delicious summer meat, easy to digest and almost easier to eat. While they are almost prohibitive in price in some cities there is practically no waste and they combine marvelously with other foodstuffs. In country markets sweetbreads are very cheap usually.

Of course, calves' breads are the most delicate and tender. But beef breads have much the same flavor if properly prepared and are cheaper.

As soon as sweetbreads are brought from the market immerse them in cold salt water. If bloody, let them stand in salt water till clear. Change the water often. Ordinarily the sweetbreads should remain in salt water one hour. Then plunge into boiling acidulated water. Boil calves' sweetbreads 20 minutes and beef breads from 30 to 40 minutes. Drain and plunge into very cold water. They are now ready to put on ice until needed or prepare in any way.

The simplest way to serve them is broiled.

Broiled Sweetbreads.

Split prepared sweetbreads and broil over a bed of clear, glowing coals or under the gas flame. Brown delicately first on one side and then on the other. Season lightly with salt and pepper. Spread with butter and serve at once.

Sweetbreads a la King.

One pair calves' sweetbreads, 12 mushrooms, 1 pimento, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 tablespoon flour, 1½ cups milk, 1 egg (yolk), ¼ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, 6 triangles of toast, parsley.

Cut prepared sweetbreads into neat cubes. Cut mushrooms in strips and fry in a little butter. Cut pimento in strips. Melt butter and stir in flour. Slowly add milk, stirring constantly. Season with salt and pepper and cook until thick and perfectly smooth. This sauce will become thicker when the egg yolk is added. Put over hot water and add sweetbreads, mushrooms and pimentoes. When very hot, sweetbreads and all, for the sweetbreads and pimentoes will cool the sauce, stir in the egg yolk well beaten. Cook until thick and pour over toast or patty shells.

Sweetbread Timbales.

One large sweetbread, ½ cup mushrooms, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 1 cup milk, ½ cup stale breadcrumbs, 1 teaspoon minced onion, 1 teaspoon parsley, 2 eggs, paprika.

Cook onion in two tablespoons butter until a pale straw color. Add mushrooms finely chopped and sweetbreads almost minced. In another pan make a white sauce by melting the butter, stirring in flour and slowly adting milk, stirring constantly. Season with salt and pepper and add to first mixture. Add bread crumbs and parsley. Beat yolks of eggs till thick and lemon colored. Add to mixture. Add paprika and fold in whites of eggs beaten stiff and dry. Half fill buttered custard cups or timbale molds with the mixture. Set in a pan of hot water, cover with buttered paper and bake 25 minutes in a moderate oven. Unmold and serve.

Few Of Girl Applicants Get Into Trouble With The Law. It Was Different Four Years Ago.

(ROBERT A. DONALDSON)

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 29 (United Press).—Despite the fact that many gay girls from all parts of the country came to Hollywood seeking a butterfly life in the movies, police reports show that remarkably few of them get into trouble with the law.

During the past year only ten girls have become cases for the local board of charities and corrections.

Probably 30 or 40 girls a year are taken into custody by the juvenile department, but many of these cases come about not because the girl has gone wrong but because her parents have asked that she be held until they could arrange to bring her back home.

Four years ago the number of girls who went wrong or were juvenile cases was much higher, officials state. During the latter part of 1918, and during 1919 and 1920, approximately 150 girls a week came to Los Angeles and Hollywood, movie casting directors estimate.

Movie Life Gay Then

Movie life was much gayer then—that was before Fatty Arbuckle's arrest, the slaying of William Desmond Taylor and the appointment of Will H. Hays to the post of movie mentor. Girls fell in with a wilder crowd, and were subject to more improper advances by various men connected with the studios, police matrons state.

Now, according to the Hollywood Y. W. C. A., the Service Bureau, which hires the extras, and prominent casting directors, not more than a half dozen new faces appear at the studio wickets each week, and most of the girls who do come are serious-minded, have a fair idea of the hardships they must endure.

The problem of girls under age is the big one, all sources agree. One big studio has each extra sign a questionnaire on which must be given the name of parents or guardian. The parents or guardian are then sent a card informing them that the girl has applied for work in the movies. Many frantic telegrams come back saying that Nellie is only a girl of 16 who is "screen-struck" and has run away from home, and that "pa and ma" are worried and want the authorities to send her back.

Contrary to the best dime novel precedents, it is usually not the simple unsophisticated girl who gets into trouble with the law in Hollywood, but the ultra-worldly-wise girls—the "jazz babies."

The Dixie Twins

There are many girls like the "Dixie twins," who come to Hollywood seeking fame and notoriety. The "Dixie twins" hiked all the way from Pensacola, Florida, arriving in Hollywood in overalls, looking for work. They danced and sang to make their way across the country, they said, and hoped to get into the movies on the strength of a handful of clippings garnered enroute. But the juvenile authorities took them in charge.

"Why, we're not juveniles," both stated when questioned by the authorities. We're both married. Feature that—calling us kids. We're actresses. Say, this town must have some class when they lock a girlie up because she doesn't wear silk. We had some other clothes but a funny old landlady in Denver seized our trunks."

But the juvenile authorities were adamant, and, learning that the girls' mother lived in Denver, took steps to determine their ages, and learn why they were wandering so far from home.

But it's such girls as the "Dixie twins" who never in the world get a peep behind the high fences that enclose the studios.

SCIENTISTS ARE READY FOR ECLIPSE OF SUN

PHILADELPHIA, August 29.—(United Press). — Deep down in the hills of Mexico, near Yerbaniz, State of Durango, an American astronomican expedition, headed by Dr. John A. Miller, vice-president of Swarthmore College, and director of the Philadelphia Sproul Astronomical Observatory, is waiting to observe a solar eclipse on 10th September.

The scientists, while observing the eclipse of the sun, plan to test the Einstein theory on the blending of light. Dr. Miller claims that if the Einstein theory is true, the ray of light coming from a star, near so large a body of the sun, would be sent out of its course.

Stars apparently in the neighbourhood of the sun would not appear in the same position at the time of the eclipse as they did some months before.

The test of the theory will be made in a comparison of the starry field made on the day of the eclipse with the photographs of the same field made some months before.

Dr. Miller also aims to solve the problem of the release of energy by the sun, which he believes may be comparable to the release of energy by the atom. The tests will be made by a 60-foot camera.

Ten other similar groups of scientists will observe the same eclipse from different points and then compare their photographic records on the phenomenon.

Professor W. W. Campbell, of the Lick Observatory last year virtually certified the Einstein theory when he photographed the eclipse from Australia. The value of the work was impaired by a small refraction and Dr. Miller plans to further carry on the verification.

With Dr Miller are Mrs. Miller, Prof. R. W. Merritt and Mrs. Merritt, Prof. R. W. Wright, of Swarthmore, Prof. H. D. Curtis, director of the Allegheny Observatory, Prof. Sinsmere Alter, of the University of Kansas, three students from Swarthmore, and two students from Harvard University.

JERSEY WANTS BATTLING BUG

Ferocious Insect Needed to Fight the Beetle That Destroys Crop.

By CLARENCE DUBOSE.

TOKYO, Aug. 28. — (United Press).—American bug-hunters are on the war-path in Japan.

They are looking for a ferocious insect, the more ferocious the better, and when they find the creature they are going to send him, and as many of his lady and gentlemen friends as possible, straight back to America and turn 'em loose on a beetle that's been eating up crops in parts of the United States.

Seven or eight years ago some fruit trees shipped from Japan to New Jersey contained in the earth about the tree-roots some insect grubs that the plant quarantine inspectors of the American port failed to find. The grubs got by. When they reached New Jersey they became beetles, and applied themselves industriously to propagating their species and eating up everything in sight. They've been doing both things ever since.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture sent to Japan a couple of its best entomologists. "Since these beetles live in Japan," said the Department, "they must have insect enemies in Japan. Because all insects have enemies. So go to Japan. Find another beetle, or a bug or a beast or a bird or something that just naturally hates this first beetle like pizen and tries to kill him on sight. When you find that creature send us all you can get. We'll turn 'em loose on Beetles No. 1, and there'll be a cruel war in New Jersey."

The bug-hunters haven't found what they want yet—but they're still looking.

MANY INTEND TO VISIT OTTAWA FAIR.

Good Roads Encouraging Motorists — Programme For the Exhibition on Elaborate Scale.

Many from this district are arranging their holidays to provide for a visit to Ottawa during exhibition week. Special rates are again offered by the railways but on account of the improved highways many are planning to go by motor. In anticipation of this, the exhibition management has provided enlarged parking space within the grounds and all other requirements for them each day will be procurable.

The Ottawa exhibition has grown to such proportions that one day is not nearly sufficient to take advantage of the splendid attractions and educational features. This year the programme has been arranged on a more elaborate scale than ever. The prize money has been increased so that the exhibits in live stock, poultry, horticulture, dairy, women's work and other departments will be exceptionally meritorious. Other factors of educational worth will include an unusually fine art display, a child's welfare branch, baby show, automobile show, pure food show and many other really worth-while demonstrations.

For genuine and wholesome pleasure, the Ottawa exhibition gives unrivalled opportunities. The midway will be the mecca of pleasure seekers who will find scores of novel and entertaining shows and riding devices. These will include the latest New York ride, the Caterpillar, which is both thrilling and amusing.

In front of the grandstand will be afternoon and evening programmes which will include auto polo, auto races, horse races, balloon ascensions, a daring and death defying ride down a high incline, ending with a plunge into a water tank; performing elephants and varied feature vaudeville acts which have been big successes in the large American cities. Comedy will predominate but the auto polo and races and a number of other acts will give thrills aplenty. In the evenings the programme will conclude with a spectacular fireworks display, the best ever arranged for by the exhibition management.

Two or three days at least may be spent with profit and pleasure at the Ottawa exhibition which this year has increased in popularity and worth.

IDEALS OF A REVOLUTIONIST AS DEFINED BY TROTSKY.

At a meeting in moscow during the inauguration of "Sverdlov's Communistic University" Trotsky delivered a speech in which he characterized the qualities that a true revolutionist should possess. The Pravia summarizes his statement:

"A true revolutionist," he said, "is a man who is not afraid of blowing up, of resorting to a pitiless violence. He must not be restrained by any considerations that might keep him from resorting to violence; it is for this reason that the education of a revolutionist must be based on atheism."

Spanish Ship Has Been Given Up As Lost.

MADRID, Aug. 29.— (Canadian Press.)— The Spanish dreadnought Espana, which went aground in a fog on Cape Tres Forcas, on the Moroccan coast, last Saturday, has been given us as lost. The vessel is lying at a sharp angle, with no chance of being refloated, and her guns and other equipment are being salvaged. The Espana displaced 15,700 tons and was launched in 1912.

DRESSES FOR MISSES.

Velveteens, wool jerseys and wool crepes are the materials shown in new fall dresses for small girls. The wool jerseys are shown in a new camel's hair finish as well as in the ordinary finish and frequently are trimmed with bands or pipings of another color or with touches of colored embroidery.

The velveteens usually are made with sateen bloomers. These dresses, too, are trimmed with embroidery or bits of applique and ribbon trimming. The straight unbelted frocks are popular and many are cut with small yokes. Other dresses follow the styles for women's frocks adapted and modified, of course.

Fall coats for school girls are of rough mixtures in the tailored styles and of velvets and pile fabrics in dress models. Altogether there are many attractive styles in which the school girl of today may be clothed.

CROPS IN FIRE'S PATH.

Heavy Yield of Hay in New Ontario.

While the loss of life in that section of New Ontario swept by the fire last fall can never be retrieved, the monetary damage in the way of burned crops and buildings will to a large extent be repaid this season, when one of the largest hay crops in the history of the "clay belt" will be harvested. According to the best advices the yield will average close to two tons per acre, and the quality from a market standpoint is ideal, the fodder running fifteen to twenty five per cent. red or alsike clover and the remainder timothy. Furthermore, as a result of the fire, the acreage under crop has been materially increased, one man clearing over sixty acres single handed this spring. This piece of ground had been swept by the fire and without the burn the owner would not have been able to have cleared more than a tenth of it. Grain crops according to Agricultural representative W. G. Nixon of New Liskeard, are coming along splendidly, helped by excellent weather. It is estimated that the acreage of these has been increased from five to ten per cent. this year. Potatoes are the only crop which have been unfavorably affected by the fire, large quantities of seed having been destroyed by the conflagration.

DIVORCE ON DECLINE IN FRANCE, AFTER INCREASE

PARIS, Aug. 29 (United Press).—Divorce is on the decline in France. Official figures show that, after a decided upward tendency—between 1913 and 1920 the annual decrees rose from 19,000 to 35,000—the curve of marital infelicity has turned downward, registering 34,000 for the year 1921 and a little more than 32,000 for 1922.

Of the latter number Paris alone furnished 5,200. Examination of the statistics demonstrates that for the last 20 years couples without children have furnished more than 65 per cent of the applicant's for liberation from the matrimonial bond.

Infidelity, contrary to general belief, is the motive in only 25 per cent of the cases which came before the courts. The most common cause is cruelty.

AMERICAN MOVIES CORRUPT MORALS.

Missionary in Bulgaria Declares Crime is Incited and Taught by Films.

PHILIPPOPOLIS, Bulgaria, Aug. 29 (Associated Press).—"American film presentations which would not be tolerated in America are doing their conspicuous share in ruining the morals of the Near East," said Dr. T. T. Holloway, American missionary and educator in Bulgaria, in speaking recently with a representative of The Associated Press.

"In three recent crimes which have stirred the public, police investigation has disclosed that the inspiration of the crime, and the suggestion of the method by which it was attempted, came from an American film recently shown in the community.

"In one criminal attempt a prominent citizen was instructed by the 'Black Hand' to deposit a large sum of money in the corridor of a railroad car. The agent of the 'Black Hand' appeared to collect, and the investigation that followed his arrest proved conclusively that his inspiration came from an American film called 'The Secrets of New York.'

"In a case of boy banditry it was proved that the suggestion of the crime came from another American film. In still another case, where a robbery by adult bandits was committed, it was also discovered that the suggestion as to both crime and method came from an American film then running locally.

"A doubly regrettable feature of such presentations is that they utterly misrepresent America and show it to the credulous in the light of a country where the criminal is king."

CINCINNATI MOVED UP ONE FULL GAME

Reds Too Much For Boston

BOSTON, August 29 (Canadian Press). — Luque held Boston to three hits yesterday, Cincinnati winning 4 to 1. It was Luque's twenty-first victory of the season. From the first inning until the ninth no Boston player reached first base. A single by Gibson, Caveney's error, on Felix's grounder, and Nixon's double gave Boston its solitary run in the ninth. The playing of Rousch and Caveney was a big factor in scoring Cincinnati's runs. Score:

|---|---|---|---|
| Cincinnati | 000110002 | 4 | 8 1 |
| Boston | 000000001 | 1 | 3 3 |

St. Louis 8, Philadelphia 7.

PHILADELPHIA, August 29 (Canadian Press). — St. Louis took the second game of the series from Philadelphia yesterday by a score of 8 to 7. The Cardinals hammered Couch for 15 safe hits for a total of 21 bases.

The game was held up by rain, and during most of the contest a steady drizzle fell on the ground. Score:

|---|---|---|---|
| St. Louis | 200030210 | 8 | 15 0 |
| Philadelphia | 200002021 | 7 | 11 1 |

Chicago 4, New York 1.

NEW YORK, August 29 (Canadian Press). — The Chicago Nationals, with the veteran Alexander pitching spectacular ball, won their last game of the season in New York here yesterday, 4 to 1, and thereby reduced New York's lead to three games, as Cincinnati defeated Boston.

Alexander held the Giants to five scattered hits, and issued no passes. He has now won thirty games from New Cork and lost twenty-nine.

Friberg's triple won for Chicago in the eighth. It scored Statz and Grimes, and Fribery scored on Miller's single. Score:

Dempsey Called Off His Fishing Trip.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N.Y., 29. Canadian Press. — Rather than risk the danger of further aggravating his cold, Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion, postponed his contemplated fishing trip to-day, and remained in his cottage on the shores of Saratoga Lake.

The champion's cold while not serious, bothered him more to-day than at any time, and is showing no sigas of improvement.

While the rain beat down on his little frame cottage, Dempsey chafing under his enforced retirement, spent the day playing pinochle, reading, and grinding jazz tunes on a phonograph.

Washington Won a Great Slugging Match.

DETROIT, Aug. 29. Canadian Press. — In a game featured by heavy hitting, Washington triumphed over Detroit yesterday, winning the game 10 to 9 by means of a ninth inning rally, which netted three runs. "Goose" Goslin lifted one of Holloway's shoots over the right field bleachers for a home run, the hit being one of the longest seen at the park this season.

FIRPO LEARNING TO USE HIS LEFT

Challenger Mauled Four Sparring Partners in Eight Fast Rounds — A Hard Hitter.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. Aug 29. —(Canadian Press).—Banging away with lefts — straight lefts, hooked lefts and uppercut lefts—Luis Angel Firpo punched four sparring partners dizzy in eight rounds of a fairly heavy workout at his training camp this afternoon. Under the cabled directions of Felix Bunge, the Buenos Aires trainer as interpreted by Horatio Lavalle, the local boss, Firpo is devoting virtually all of his work to development of the port side pile driver.

Frank Koebele the young Brooklyn light heavyweight whose style is similar to that of the heavyweight champion furnished stiff opposition for the challenger.

Koebele's straight rights for the jaw and left hooks to the body seldom fell short of their mark, but Luis Angel took most of them going away" never receiving the full force of the blows. He shot his left straight to Koebele's face and and hooked his jaw unerringly throughout the two rounds they sparred.

Jeff Clarke, the Joplin Ghost though his shiny head bobbed up and down, in and around incessantly could not escape a drubbing. He was a bit groggy at the finish. Joe McCann and Natalio Pera were made to miss repeatedly and they, as well as Koebele and the Ghost were pretty well done up by the time Firpo left.

COACHES ARE COACHED IN FOOTBALL TACTICS

NOTRE DAME, Ind., Aug. 29.—(Associated Press)—Approximately 100 football coaches are enrolled in the coaching school being conducted at the University of Notre Dame by Knute K. Rockne, director of athletics.

Only football is being studied by the men under the direction of the man who generally is accredited with having been the leader in the development of the forward pass. No fundamental of the game will be left out, according to Rockne. The class will be in season throughout August.

Twenty states are represented by those attending the school. More than 30 college mentors are studying under the Notre Dame leader with the hope that they, too, may absorb some of his ability to develop winning football elevens. High school football instructors also are going in for the class, men from 37 schools being in attendance.

Coach Rockne is devoting four hours a day to the class. Half of the time is given to blackboard work and two hours to practical exhibitions on the gridiron.

Records show that less money was spent by Maxwell owners for replacements and repair parts in 1922 than during the preceding year; and 1923 to date shows a further decrease. This low cost of maintenance is a tribute to the fine way in which the good Maxwell is built.

CHANGES MADE IN SOFT BALL LEAGUE

Players Must Be Signed By November 1 and Must Play in Three Games Before the Finals.

About thirty representatives were present last evening at the meeting of the Men's Soft Ball League held in the Chamber of Commerce. Owing to the absence of the president the chair was occupied by the vice-president C. S. McLean.

A few important changes were made in the league plans but on the whole the schedule this season will be carried out along much the same lines as last year.

The question of changing the playing field was brought up at a previous meeting and was left in the hands of the executive. It is expected that the change will be made. Last evening the question of obtaining portable seats with some kind of a wire screen to protect the spectators was pretty thoroughly discussed. The officers of last season did not quit work when the schedule finished but kept on the look for opportunities to help along the league for the fall schedule. As a result they have already obtained prices on suitable seats and have an opportunity to get some at bargain prices. The matter was therefore left in the hands of the executive with full powers to act.

It was felt by some that if the seats and protection were provided for the spectators a stated price should be charged rather than continue the practice of passing the hat. The question was pretty well discussed and was with the matter of the seats left in the hands of the executive. The committee was also given power to act in regards to allowing the three military teams to enter free of charge. This was suggested at the previous meeting from an independent source but was not pressed by the representatives of the teams involved.

It was decided that each player must take part in at least three games in order to be eligible to take part in the play off games. Last year as long as the players had been signed within the time limit he could play in the finals regardless of whether or not he had taken part in any of the previous games. A change was also made in the time limit for getting the certificates in. Last year players could be signed any time before the team had completed four games. This year the certificates will have to be signed and in the hands of the secertary by November 1.

Uniform sweaters for the players of each team were not made compulsory last season and will not be this though it is desirable to have them if possible. The feeling of the meeting was that if they were made compulsory it might be a hardship on some of the teams. Most of the teams which played last year have their sweaters and its is expected that most of the others will get them anyway.

The chairman announced that the executive committee would consists of the elected officers together with the following appointed members: G. Gimblett, W. R. Fox, and J. E. Sullivan. The committee will arrange the schedule and it is expected that the league will get under way about September 17.

The teams entered are:

Belmonts, Dragoons, Guuners, Kiwanis, K. of C., Lawn Bowlers, L. O.L. 50, Rangers, Rotary, Triple Link, Brass Department of the C. G.E., C.N.R., Colonials, De Laval, Engineers (C.G.E), Examiner, Lock Works, Porcelain Department (C. G.E.), Quaker Oats, Woolllens.

Some Surprises in Women's Golf Round.

CHICAGO, Aug. 29.—(Canadian Press).—Elimination of the defending champion Mrs. Dave Gaut, of Memphis Tenn. by Virginia Wilson of Onwentsia, Chicago, yesterday furnished the surprise of the first match round of the women's western golf championship at Exmoor Country Club.

Miss Wilson, only 17 years old and heretofore unknown in championship play got a lead on her more experienced opponent early in the play and turned three up. Mrs. Gaut tighened up on the second nine, but her girlish opponent shot fully as well and won two and one. She scored a 91 to Mrs. Gaut's 92.

A promising contender for the title Virginia Pep, of St. Louis, defeated Mrs. Walter Page, of Chicago, by the wide margin of 6 to 4.

COMMUNIST MEMBER SHOCKED COMMONS.

Appeared in Comfortable But Unconventional Garb During Hot Spell.

LONDON, Aug. 29.—(Associated Press)—The communistic ideas of J. T. W. Newbold, the Scottish Communist in the House of Commons, have had relatively little effect on that stolid body, but the same cannot be said of his hot weather dress. The House received a profound setback during London's recent heat wave when Mr. Newbold appeared without a collar, without a tie, without a collar button, without a vest, and his shirt unbuttoned and opened at the neck.

The Communist M.P. walked to his seat in silence until some of the Labor Party members gave a few cheers in approval of his audacity.

Prior to this entrance, Commander Kenworthy held the center of interest by appearing in the House in white shoes and a yellow palm beach suit.

MAPLE LEAFS CAPTURE JUVENILE CITY TITLE IN A HARD FOUGHT GAME

Defeated Sacred Heart 8 to 3 Yesterday Afternoon — Will Meet Cobourg in First Round of O.B.A.A. Series.

TIMELY HITTING.

Maple Leafs won the city title in Juvenile baseball by defeating Sacred Heart by 8 to 3 at Riverside Park yesterday afternoon. It was a repeater for the Leafs, they having won the honors last season. The champions will now play Cobourg in the O.B.A.A. semi-finals.

Yesterday's game was a tidy battle barring the fifth and sixth when the Leafs won the game, getting a pair of runs in the fifth on some wobbly infield work by Sacred Heart, and counting six runs in the sixth on some solid hitting.

Sacred Heart held a one-run lead for five innings and with Sheehy twirling effectively, the tally looked mighty big. A blow-up in the fifth by Sacred Heart, gave the Leafs the lead, but they lost it in the sixth when Sheehy's timely single into centre scored two runs. The Leafs came back strong in their half, by sending six runs across, Corbett and Delahaye driving in four of the counters, with doubles.

Sacred Heart threatened a rally in the ninth but the Leafs nipped the latters nice catch of Rishea's drive putting an end to the battle.

First Inning.

The Leafs won the toss and McDonough leading off for Sacred Heart drew a pass. Rishea sacrificed neatly. Milloy was thrown out at first when Corbett left a throw get away, McDonough made third, to score when Jones hit a high one back of third, Thirnbeck and Corbett losing the ball. Jones went out stealing.

For the Leafs, Delahaye fanned. Hall walked and was doubled when Marchen popped to Rody.

Second Inning.

Masterson missed three. Thirnbeck threw out Rody on a nice play. Sheehy was passed and he stole. Collins fanned.

Thirnbeck double. Sheehy struck out Franks, Johnston and Corbett.

Third Inning.

Kenneally dropped a hit into left. McDonough fanned. Rishea shot a hot one at Bradley who got Kenneally going into third. A passed ball advanced Rishea but Delahaye got the runner on an attempted theft of third.

Bradley was thrown out by the pitcher. Grant doubled and made third when Jones dropped a throw. Delahaye fouled out to Rishea and Hall fanned.

Fourth Inning.

Milloy doubled down first. Franks fumbled Jones' grounder. Masterson's third strike was dropped, but the catcher got him at first. Rody was passed filling the bases. Sheehy struck out and Collins grounded out.

Marchen walked, only to be caught off first by Sheehy, Milloy and Collins getting the runner. Thirnbeck hit down third and advanced on the wild peg by Jones to Collins. Franks fanned and Johnston fouled out to Rishea:

Fifth Inning.

Kenneally was passed. McDonough attempting a bunt, popped to Bradley who doubled Kenneally. Franks threw out Rishea.

Corbett hit down third and went to second when Jones again threw wildly to first. Bradley laid one down, going out at first while Corbett made third. Grant grounded down third to score Corbett, Jones fumbling the ball. Delahaye's grounder to short got away from Rody and Grant scored. Milloy missed a peg from Sheehy, allowing Delahaye to make second. Hall fanned and Jones threw out Marchen.

Sixth Inning.

Milloy was hit, going to second on Jones' infield out. Delahaye took Masterson's tap in front of the plate, getting the runner. Rody walked. Sheehy shot a hot one through second, scoring Milloy and Rody. Collins fanned.

Thirnbeck bingled and stole second. Franks walked and Johnston was hit filling the bases. Corbett doubled to score two. Bradley singled Johnston home.. Grant was hit. Delahaye scored two more with a double. Hall was safe on Rody's error, Grant scoring. Delahaye was caught at the plate on the throw-in. Marchen flew out to Milloy.

Seventh Innings.

Kenneally was safe on Thirnbeck's error. McDonough hit. Kenneally was caught at third and on Rishea's singled to right, Grant relayed the ball to Bradley to get McDonough at the plate. Milloy struck out.

Thirnbeck was thrown out by the pitchers. Franks and Johnston drew singles only to be stranded when Corbett fanned and Bradley grounded out.

Eighth Inning.

Jones fouled out to Delahaye, Masterson fanned, Rody hit through third, and Sheehy retired at first.

Grant singled, Delahaye grounded out, Hall popped to Hilloy who followed it up by putting "a hidden ball" on Grant at second.

Ninth Inning.

Collins was passed and singled to second by Kenneally. McDonough grounded to Thirnbeck who made the out at second, Collins going to third. With Rishea up, McDonough went to second and was thrown out by Delahaye, Collins holding third. Rishea lined a screamer to right, Grant taking the ball with one hand for the feature fielding play of the game, and the contest was over.

CRICKET REVIVED IN CAMPBELLFORD

Veterans Are Enjoying the Sport With All the Zest of Youth.

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 29. — The good old game of cricket has been revived in Campbellford and veterans who have not had a bat or ball in their hands, some of them for 25 years, are engaging in the spirt with all the zest of youth. The revival is largely due to the number of former residents of England who have arrived here during the summer to work for the Campbellford Cloth Company, crtcket bats, balls and wickets being carried among their baggage, and who were surprised to find that Campbellford was interested chiefly in baseball and lacrosse and that the sport to which the newcomers were devoted, was utterly ignored.

R. T. Cowell, O. H. Gledhill, I. A. Humphries, J. A. Stewart, R. G. Scott and other old-time residents who had played the game in former years, co-operated with the new arrivals in getting it started again.

The first contest, between the business men of the town and the employees of the Campbellford Cloth Company, was held at the Fair grounds Monday evening, play starting at 5 o'clock. There was only time for the business men to take their turn at bat and their opponents to play part of an inning when darkness put an end to the game. The business men had been retired after scoring 66 rounds. The mill men ran up to 69 and when play stopped only three of their men were out. I. A. Humphries captained the business men, and distinguished himself as a bowler, while O. H. Gledhill directed the work of the mill hands. One of the best players on either team was J. A. Stewart, who batted out 13 runs, but who ran outs over 40 with other players.

The Game Resumed.

The game was resumed last evening, when all of the players reported, although some of them were suffering from the effects of the unwonted exercise and several have marks of the fray. Mr. Cowell, for example ,was suffering from a bruised knee, where a fly ball had caught him after slipping through his hands.

The play was spirited. The mill men went to bat first and made 109 runs before 10 men were out. James Storie was the survivor. R. G. Scott was wicked keeper for the business men and G. E. Collins for the other side. The batter was at one time a member of the British army and held the rank of Sergt.-Major. He is an expert of the game, having played with the Imperial troops in India.

The leading bowlers were Messrs. Humphries, Cowell, Parish and Jim Blute, and Gledhill. The latter who was bowled out by Blute, after running up a score of seven, pronounces him one of the best bowlers whom he has ever faced, and Mr. Gledhill is no novice at cricket.

Mill Men—Collins, 1; Parish (not out), 40; Bell, 4; Storie, 3; Gledhill (not out) 17.

Runs 65, byes 4, total 69.

Business men — E. Tait, 6; Bygott, 0; Leonard, 2; Bonycastle, 4; Humphries, 2; Cowell, 1; Hind, 11; Scott, 4; Stewart, 13; Hamilton, 4; Imming (not out) 17.

Runs, 64; byes 2; total 66.

Tuesday's Game.

Mill Men — Bailey, 2; Druce, 0; Gay, 3; Hog ,7; Bell, 34; Thrower, 12; Parish, 2; Storie (not out) 23; Gledhill 7; Collins, 6. Burling 3.

Runs, 101; byes 8, total 109.

Business men — Hind, 13; Imming, 1; Blute, 1, Tait (not out), 9.

Cowell, Bonnycastle, Stewart, Scott Leonard Humpries and Neale did not have a chance to go to bat.

Runs, 23, byes 1, total 24, for three wickets.

These teams will play a game, two innings to the side, on Labor Day, beginning at 1.30.

GENIUS OF M'GRAW SPELLS VICTORY

Great Leadership Overcame Handicap of a Dilapidated Pitching Staff.

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—After the genius of leadership he has shown in the last three seasons, it might be true, even if it sounds a little unfair to his boys, to say that John McGraw can win a pennant with any kind of a good ball club.

The New York Giants of 1922 were, in comparison to the other clubs in the National League, a fine ball club, but it is almost certain that they would not have won the pennant behind any manager other than McGraw.

No other manager, with such a dilapidated pitching staff, could have urged the Giants to the heights which they attained in the critical parts of the 1923 pennant race.

Outside of the pitching department, which some tacticians consider the most important, the Giants have a great team. McGraw has said he figures it to be the smartest and the best ball club he has ever handled.

In building up what no doubt will turn out to be at least a three-time pennant winner, McGraw was able to find everything but good, young pitchers, and since the New York club has more money to spend than any other National League club, it seems but fate that has reduced the team to such poverty in pitching.

From the results of the 1921 and 1922 pennant race, it might be argued that a great team can win without pitchers, but the results are achieved only by genius in direction. McGraw has that genius and the figures show that it is possessed by no other manager.

DEMPSEY IS NOT TRAINING HARD

Social Duties Keep Him Busy at Saratoga Springs — Says He Is In Good Shape Now.

By BOB DORMAN.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, Saratoga Lake, N.Y., Aug. 29.—Sure it's the "Life of Riley" that Mr. Jack Dempsey is leading here.

As the "Playground of America", this resort, near to the famed Saratoga Springs, is living up to its reputation, but—as a training camp for a ring champion—it's not so good.

Most of Jack's time is taken up by posing for pictures for the kodak fiends, both sexes, though the fair ones predominate, and in shaking hands with the legion who want to go back home and tell their friends how they have "mitted" the champion.

Golfing, dinner and dance engagements flow in on him.

Some of them he finds time to accept.

The good nature for which he is famous is leading him into permitting much of his time to be taken up by the curiosity seekers who always flock around a celebrity.

The crowds of idlers passing away their play time in the vicinity of Saratoga, flock, at 55 cents a head, into his camp to see the champion maul his sparring mates around.

Jack does not believe that he will have to train as strenuously for Firpo as he did for Gibbons.

He says: "Training for Firpo will not be so hard as for Gibbons.

"Then I had to overcome the effects of two years' lay-off. I got into first-class shape for that fight and one month has not taken away anything from my physical condition.

"Right now I could go in and fight tomorrow. I am going to take it easy until just before the fight, because I do not want to take off any weight.

"Firpo is a big man and I don't want to have to give away any more weight than necessary.

"The few social engagements that I fill are really good for me, as they help to relieve the deadly monotony of training. It keeps my mind off the ring and, in fact, acts as a mental tonic."

NEW YORK, Aug. 29 — Canadian Press. — William Killefer, manager of the Chicago Nationals, yesterday was informed of his indefinite suspension by John A. Heydler, the president of the National Leageu.

Though under suspension, Killefer managed the Chicago team yesterday from a box near the visiting dug out —Coach Oscar Dugey having the charge of the club on the field.

GIANTS MAY WIN FOUR PENNANTS

If McGraw Can Top the League For 1923 He Has a Good Chance of Repeating in 1924.

Taking an outside chance that the Giants might be beaten in the present chase for the National League pennant, it is not out of order to look to the future and see McGraw leading another race to the pennant in 1924.

If the Giants had some young pitchers of promise for the next season it might not be too hazardous to guess that New York will have another National League pennant and make it four in a row. Considering the fact that none of the other National League clubs promise to be much stronger next season, it would be logical to figure that a team good enough to win this year ought to be good enough next year.

The Giants are not youths, but in one way they are a young ball club, inasmuch as McGraw has two, or not more than three, slipping veterans, and to replace them he has several of the finest young ball players in the league.

Heinie Groh is about through, but when the time comes for him to be seated on the bench, McGraw can shift Frank Frisch over to third base and use Fred Maguire at second.

Frisch is a fine second baseman and a great all-round player, but many critics believe that third base is his position and that he would be a star at the fast corner. Maguire has all the makings of a second "Eddie Collins" at second base. He isn't a major league hitter yet and, if he doesn't learn, the Giant's batting order has enough power to carry him along.

Dave Bancroft, the smartest shortstop in the major leagues and the spark-plug of the Giants defense, may not have another good year, but when he has to be replaced, McGraw has, in Travis Jackson, a youngster now who is about ready for stardom right.

Bancroft is none too strong physically, and when he was forced out of his position this season by illness, Jackson stepped in and did everything that was asked of him.

George Kelly has many years ahead of him at first base, but if anything should happen to him, McGraw can bring Jimmy O'Connell in from the outfield and play him at Casey Stengel is liable to be through after this season, but the way veterans have been acting in recent years, Casey is likely to be around for several more years.

Bill Cunningham is available for any outfield jobs that have to be filled and he is a player good enough to be holding a regular job on any other major league clubs.

Pep Young, the brilliant right fielder of the club, is a young player and he should be good for five years at least. In the letf field, Irish Meusel may need replacement, as he has slipped a lot and is having trouble with his legs.

The pitching, however, will be the big worry for McGraw again, as it has been for three years. The club is buying up every good, young pitching prospect in sight, and if the law of averages ever starts working for the Giant leader he ought to find a couple of good ones before long, because his efforts so far have been fruitless.

IT ALL DEPENDS ON TODAY'S EVENTS

Peterboro May or May Not See C. O. B. L. Play Off Tomorrow.

Whether Peterborough will see a clash between Belleville and Oshawa here to-morrow depends upon two things, first what happens in the game at Belleville to-day and secondly what takes place at the meeting to-night, when Belleville's protest will be heard. If Oshawa wins to-day and also wins the protest, there will, of course, be no game here. On the other hand, if the motor town loses and successfully defends the protest a third game will be necessary. A third alternative is that Oshawa may be thrown out altogether because of playing Dainty and in that case Leaside, the runners up, will be given a chance to meet Belleville in a sudden death game to be played here to-morrow.

LAWN BOWLING.

A local tournament will be held by the Lawn Bowlers on Monday (Labour Day), and those who intend playing are requested to write their names on the board at the clubhouse.

COBOURG HERE NEXT SATURDAY

For First Game in O.B.A.A. Semi-Finals With Maple Leafs.

The first game of the Cobourg Maple Leafs series in the O.B.A.A. Juvenile race will be played at Riverside Park on Saturday afternoon, and the second contest will be played at Cobourg one week later. The dates were arranged to-day.

MIDGET BATTLE ON THURSDAY

The Sacred Heart-Curlers Midget game at the former's grounds on Thursday evening, promises to draw a big crowd of fans. Baseball enthusiasts who have been following the game of the Midget Series have seen some high-class pitching and fielding and Thursday's battle between Masterson and Wood, should be a hummer. The game will start at 5.30 o'clock.

GENE PLAYS MARBLES TO GET A LIVING

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 29.—Ever hear of anybody playing marbles for his daily bread?

Probably not, if you haven't been here lately.

But that's just what Gene Brown, Kansas City "megs" champion, is doing.

Gene, an orphan, living at the McCune home supported by taxpayers, read about the marble tournament a local newspaper was going to put on.

He entered and began practicing immediately. Every day he put in at least two hours practicing with his aggies.

The big day came. Hundreds of kids were there. Gene stuck through all the elimination matches and landed in the semi-finals. He went into finals. And he won the cup.

Gene asked the contest editor if he thought a marble champion could work as well as he could shoot. The contest editor felt he could.

Before Gene knew it, he had a job And guess what it was? Playing marbles, of course.

He puts on exhibition games on a table in the toy department of a big department store. Sometimes, he helps the clerks sell things, too.

Gene gets $12 a week. He pays $5 for board at the Boys' Hotel. And he figures on saving at least $2 every week.

In a year that will be $104—enough to start him in a business college.

"Then just watch me land a real job," says Gene. "Playing marbles isn't such a bad way to get a start, after all."

And you'll agree with him, won't you?

BULL MOVEMENT IN RAILS TODAY

Car Loadings Last Week Biggest Total Ever Reached in August.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—Car loadings of 1,035,741 for the week ending August 18th, the highest total ever reached in August, furnished the basis for a bullish demonstration in the railway list in the early dealings on the stock exchange.

New York Central, Union Pacific, Baltimore and Ohio, and other representative issues went into new high ground on the current movement. Industrials were also stimulated by this evidence on how far the summer let up in business activities had been over estimated.

Steel Common was the leader of this section on the market, selling at 92, the equivalent of a new high on the recovery, taking into consideration the 1 1-4 per cent. dividend deducted at the opening. Rails continued on an upward course in the first hour, interest spreading from the standard issues to stocks more of the specialty class, such as New Orleans, Texas and Mexico and Wheeling and Lake Erie preferred, both of which reached new highs on the movement. Specialties also focused the major share of speculative attention in the industrial group. Virginia Carolina preferred continued its spectacular rise, selling at 39, against Tuesday's low of 27 5-8, reflecting the $6,000,000 surplus shown by the company in the first six months after a long string of deficits.

American Cotton Oil preferred achieved a new high for the year at 22 and Davison Chemical at 45 7-8. Motor stocks continued to enjoy increased demand while Stewart-Warner, Stromberg and other accessory issues went into new high ground on the recovery. Recent improvement in the market for the shares of automobile companies and those of affiliated industries has created special activity of late in Pierce Arrow prior preferred.

Opening prices included United States Steel ex-Div .92 up ¼, Sinclair 21 3-4, up 1-4, Studebaker 107 5-8 off 1-8; American Can 99 1-8 up 1-8; Baltimore and Ohio 50 up ½, corn products 128 up 1-8; Pan Amer Petroleum B 58 3-4 up 1-8; producers and refiners 26 3-4 up 1-8; Sou. Pacific 8 5-8; Can Pacific 145½ up ¼, Bethlehem Steel 53 1-2; Retail Stores 77 7-8 off 1-8; N Y C 99 3-4 up 1-8; Deading 75 5-8 up 3-8; Baldwin 124 7-8; Industrial Alcohol 82 7-8 up 1-8.

MOVIE CAMERA IS FAD SOCIETY SET.

Little Brother Does the Camera Work While Sister Poses as Heroine.

DEL MONTE, Cal., Aug. 29. — (United Press.) — Time was when no vacation was complete without the debutante of the family trotting around taking the "cutest pictures of Ma and Pa and all the folks" with a little camera.

In fact, some plain, everyday folks still think a camera worth space in the car when they start their auto vacation.

But society folks—well, that either became too common or it's old stuff, or something, because they have turned to the movie camera.

And now that the vacation pictures are to be movies, sister does not do the shooting at all. she poses—is the sort of heroine of the vacation record.

Little brother does the camera work. He turns his cap around with the visor over the back of his neck like real movie camera men do and cranks and grinds away just like they do in Hollywood.

The new society fad for movies started here with the arrival of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Hill, of railway and financering fame, to summer around historic Monterey, exclusive Del Monte and Bohemian Carmel. Louis Jr., came armed with the movie camera. He posed the Hills and all their friends on the Del Monte lawns, recorded for study by future generations the form of "Dad" Hill on the golf links; shot countless feet of frolics on Camal's snowwhite sands, and got the tumbling surf on the rocks near Monterey.

It started something. Movie cameras began to sprout like mushrooms, and when Charlie Chaplin arrived a few days later, announcing that he sought refuge from the studio and from movie queens, he found himself beset with more movie cameras than he ever saw on a Hollywood set. He let them all have a shot at him—he didn't look much different from anyone else in vacation clothes—and then indicated that he wished that all the cameras could be consigned to Death valley or to some other place where the climate's warm.

But next winter, back in eastern homes, there will be movie projection rooms added and friends will gather at night while the son reels off for them the story, told in movies, of how pa sliced a drive; how sister failed as a fancy diver, and how Charlie Chaplin looked when he came to Del Monte to escape the movie Queens.

APOPLEXY STRUCK WOMAN THREE TIMES

TORONTO, Aug. 29.—(Canadian Press).—Stricken suddenly with apoplexy for third time in one day Mrs. Louise Gougeon, aged 53, died in the Western Hospital early this morning. She sustained two strokes while visiting the Canadian National Exhibition yesterday afternoon, but was apparently not seriously affected A few hours later a third stroke occurred while waiting for a street car and she as rushed to the hospital in a motor car. Examination showed that a blood vessel had broken and paralysis developed resulting in her death.

MYSTERY DEATH

police had been informed that Sutphen's mother died in Elizabethtown, N. J., a little more than a week ago, leaving an estate amounting to more than $300,000. Sutphen, it was understood, was a beneficiary of the estate, with his sisters, Mrs. J. L. Hulse, of Englishtown, and Mrs. Mabel Burtt, of Freehold, N.J.

The police also were said to have been informed that Sutphen arrived in an automobile at the entrance to the Turin at about 6 o'clock Sunday morning and that he was helped to the elevator by two men, one of whom was said to be the manager of a Broadway cabaret. The police also were told that Sutphen had spent the night at a party in a club in East Fifty-Ninth Street, in which he and several friends indulged in much drinking.

Thought Liquor Caused Death.

Dr. Gonzales earlier in the day said that when he arrived at the apartment Captain Spohn and the two women told him that Sutphen had returned at about dawn. Miss Janesto was said to have told the medical examiner that she and her sister were asleep in a rear room in the apartment when Sutphen, aided by the elevator man in the apartment house, entered, and that Sutphen, after removing his coat, lay down on the couch in the drawing-room.

Dr. Gonzales said that they admitted that Sutphen was very drunk, and that it was not until 10 o'clock in the morning that they discovered he was dead. Captain Spohn said that Miss Janesto preceded him into the drawing-room, where Sutphen at first appeared to be asleep. Dr. Gonzales said that Captain Spohn told him that Sutphen had been under the care of Dr. Kahn at the Spencer Arms apartment house for alcoholism.

The Deputy Medical Examiner added that he immediately got in touch with Dr. Kahn over the telephone and that the physician told him that he had treated Sutphen in an apartment on the ground floor there and had warned Sutphen that if he didn't stop drinking liquor would kill him.

No Sign of a Struggle.

Dr. Gonzales said that the expensively furnished apartment showed no signs of a struggle having taken place and that he had made an examination of the drawing-room for a bottle or a glass from which Sutphen might have taken a drink. He added that Captain Spohn and the two women, one of whom, during the conversation between the trio, were frank in their answers to him and he took it for granted that the man had died of alcoholism.

SANGUINE BATTLE WAS WAGED, CENTRAL PARK

The line-up was as follows:

Wolves — E. McGhee, c; Arthur Westbrook, p; Harry Westbrook, 1b; Richard Martin, 2b; Harold Coleman, ss; George Coleman, 3b; Clarence Morgan, rf; Mervin Clarke, cf; Richard Cowan, lf.

Manager Harold Bickell of the Grand Opera House has very kindly invited the members of the Peterborough Central Ontario League ball club to be his guests at a theatre party on Tuesday evening next to see the originals in their new revue, "Rapid Fire." The former members of the Dumbells, with Red Newman, Arthur Holland, Jimmy Goode and other favorites, will be at the Grand on Monday and Tuesday.

ARTHUR (JOCK) HOLLAND, the well known female impersonator of the "Originals" appearing at the Grand, Monday and Tuesday, Sept. 3-4 with a special Labor Day matinee Mr. Holland has just returned from London with a wardrobe costing many thousands of dollars including a Parisian gown made entirely of Gold Sequins.

THEATRES

REX BEACH'S ALASKAN STORY "THE SPOILERS"

"The Spoilers," which will be shown at the Capital theatre for three days commencing Thursday matinee is said to be a stirring picture of Rex Beach's celebrated novel of the historic clash that occurred in the Klondike when crooked politicians tried to rob the miners of their properties. This book was a sensation in its day and when a decade ago Selig made a film of it, that too was a big success. The 1923 "Spoilers," which was produced by Jesse D. Hampton for Goldwyn is declared to be one of the finest and most thrilling photoplays ever made.

There is a remarkable cast of stellar players, headed by the manly Milton Sills the beautiful Barbara Bedford, and with blond Anna Q. Nilsson as the sympathetic Cherry Malotte. Noah Beery, the powerful villain of many a movie, is said to be at his sauve worst in "The Spoilers". Robert Edeson, Mitchell Lewis, Ford Sterling, Rockcliffe Fellowes, Robert McKim and Sam De Grasse are some of the other well-known players in the cast. Miss Bedford is the girl from the States with whom Mills, as Roy Glennister, falls in love. Miss Nilsson, a girl of the dance hall, who roams from camp to camp in the Northland, "asking odd of no man."

Director Lambert Hillyer has adhered closely to Beach's story, which was founded on historic facts as viewed at close range. Critics have said that if anyone wants to see before his eyes the rough, reckless and ready life of Alaska as it was in the days of the gold rush, he can see it in "The Spoilers."

AT THE GRAND.

THE "ORIGINALS" IN "RAPID FIRE."

The appearance here next Monday and Tuesday of the famous "Originals" (of the 3rd Division C.E.F.) at the Grand theatre, will be a revelation to theatregoers of this city. This Company comprises the entire cast of "Full O' Pep" including the fifteen former members of the originals Dumbells, and two new artists of prominence. Their new revue "Rapid Fire" has all the old favorites such as "Red" Newman, Arthur (Jock) Holland, Jimmie Goode, Alan Murray, Charlie McLean, Fred Fenwick, Bill Tenant, Tom Young, Bertram Langley, Jerry Brayford, Ted Charter, Leonard Young, Ivor Ayre, Percy Campbell, Bob Anderson, and a highly talented new female impersonator, Gene Pearson, who possesses the most perfect natural soprano voice of any female impersonator before the public.

Every kind of entertainment from light Opera to Jazz, with everything brand new, is to be seen in "Rapid Fire" which is declared by the press and public everywhere to be the best Soldier revue ever seen in Canada. One of the many new and unique features is a magnificent jeweled curtain specially imported from England for the new production, this curtain contains tons of thousands of small brilliant jewels and is the same as the famous jeweled curtain used in this season's revue at the London Hippodrome. Many new and elaborate costumes, some of them costing hundreds of dollars each, including one made entirely of Gold Sequins, and brought from Paris by Arthur Holland, have created a sensation in all the larger cities. The most spectacular electrical effects have been introduced in the show with remarkable results. In a realistic khaki sketch entitled "Down on the Farm" presenting a true to life satire of a French farm scene behind the lines, a most unusual bombardment is seen in the distance at midnight followed by a realistic rainstorm with remarkable lightning effects. This is followed by the break of dawn and a clear sky after the storm.

The box office opens tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

AT THE ROYAL.

New Production Standards Reached in "Thorns and Orangeblossoms" at Royal To-morrow

"Thorns and Orangeblossoms" Bertha M. Clay's famous novel and stage play has been made into a moving picture. That announcement should be sufficient to fill the Royal Theatre where it opens its local runs at 2.30 and 8.00 p.m tomorrow. This story represents one of the most famous pieces of fiction ever written.

Under less capable hands "Thorns and Orange Blossoms" might have suffered but the producer, has mustered the best talent available for its screen translation. Gasnier, director of "Kismet" and of "Rich Men's Wives," has given the piece a fine treatment replete with drama and human interest. The cast is as suitable and capable as could possibly have been found. Moreover, local movie fans will be pleased to hear that three of their favorites are included therein. Kenneth Harlan plays the part of the young American whose affections are divided between a dashing Spanish prima donna and a little American girl. The fascinating foreigner and her lovely rival are portrayed respectively by Estelle Taylor, heroine of "Monte Cristo" and Edith Roberts.

The settings of Spain and Louisiana are beautiful and picturesque enhanced by photography that is in itself a rare achievement. The production standards rank ace-high The picture might well be classed in the category of "better films" of which producers have been talking lately.

"THE SPORTING EARL" AT THE ROYAL THEATRE.

Starting on Monday, for four days, the public of Peterborough will have a chance to see the big English production, "The Sporting Earl."

This film opened in Canada after a run of tremendous success in England. It is a melange of laughs, thrills, romance, and melodrama, the like of which has not been seen since the famous picture "Mickey."

The story of "The Sporting Earl" concerns the will of Sir Horace Pilkington, Baronet, by the terms of which one nephew inherits all the baronet's fortune and the other nephew becomes the possessor of his big racing stable, and the nephew is "The Sporting Earl."

Without a cent to his name, absolutely penniless, this irresponsible young "nobleman" is the owner of the stable, which numbers on its roster the famous name of "Cheerio Arf a Mo," considered by many in English sporting circles as the fastest colt form Ascot to Timbuctoo.

"The Sporting Earl," in an effort to retrieve his fortunes and land a girl, enters the stars of his stable, "Quicksilver" and "Cheerio Arf a Mo," in a double event at Acot with the intention of emulating J. K. L. Ross so that the following day the newspapers will carry the cheerful and startling news, "The Sporting Earl" scores a double at Ascot.

The story is full of thrills and comedy, and includes a big fire in the stables, sensational fights, two steeplechases, and the affair of the will of Sir Horace Pilkington, Bart., which will keep spectators tied in knots.

GYPSY BLOOD HOT.

HERINGSDORE, Germany, Aug. 29.—(United Press.)— Gypsy blood runs hot. That is why the first violinist in the Ileesku orchestra is awaiting trial here and why his son of 17 lies wounded in a hospital.

The violinist wedded a second time, taking a dark beauty of the Roumanian tribe. The son loved her, too, and kissed her one night as they danced in a fashionble restaurant to the mad strains of Ileeku's gypsy orchestra. The first violinist's instrument shattered on the platform; a revolver cracked and the son lay bleeding on the floor.

THERE NEVER WAS A FISH LIKE THIS ONE

Caught at Stoplog Lake It Is Unnamed As Yet—Out-Cumping Andy.

Thomas Fagan, with his foot on the brass rail and his elbows on the mahogany top of a local bar last night called on all who heard him to name a monster fish he caught, last week, while camping near Stoplog Lake. Andy Gump has a rival in Thomas and Thomas doesn't mind saying so.

With pork rhind bait and minnow Tom enticed a monster about four feet long to nibble at the hook and clung with his toes to the gunwhale of the boat while he battled with his fish. When it came to lifting the monster into the boat he strained the muscles of his back. In his simple words he told of the end of the epic struggle: "I hit it a clout behind the ear with my paddle."

None of the Waltonians in the district had ever seen a fish like it before, and no records exist of such a speciment of the finney tribe ever having been on exhibition at any of the world's famous aquariums.

May Be a Snifflefish

A fisherman of renown, but a gentleman withal, declared the strange monster to be a snifflefish. The snifflefish, he says, has been known to spawn in the placid waters of lonely lakes, and in many ways resembles a whale only it is much smaller. It has two set of teeth neither of which is visible unless the fish should have its mouth open. Mr. Fagan said he would have this rare speciment mounted, and present it to the first museum that asker for it.

WEDDING BELLS

PERDUE—THOMPSON.

A very quiet wedding was solemnized by Rev. Father J. J. O'Brien at the Church of the Sacret Heart, on Tuesday morning, when Mary Gertrude, eldest daughter of Mrs. Thompson, Romaine street, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Joseph Dennis Perdue, son of Mr. and Mrs. Perdue of Ennismore. The bride was attired in a charming dress of blue Canton crepe and wore a grey hat with ostrich plume.

Miss B. O'Brien was bridesmaid and wore a brown satin dress. The groom was attended by his brother. At the Offertory Miss Minnie Allen sang an "Ave Maria."

A dainty wedding breakfast was served at the bride's home. The happy couple left on the noon train for Belleville and Kingston. On their return they will reside in Toronto.

Premier Ferguson Discussed Present Amendments With Delegates

TORONTO, Aug. 29—(Canadian Press). — Ontario chiropractors want to know "where they are at" and a deputation waited on the Ontario Government to-day to ascertain its policy in this regard. At the last session of the Legislature amendments were passed which in the opinion of the Chiropractors unfairly limited their scope. Premier Ferguson promised this morning that whatever regulations were made in this connection would be found fair to all.

PUBLIC MEETING RE ALBERTA COAL

Thirty Thousand Miners Out of Work and Ontario Needs Coal.

TORONTO, August 29 (Canadian Press). — A deputation, representing public bodies who recently held a meeting here to discuss the coal situation, appeared before the Board of Control to-day, headed by Major W. F. Orr, and requested that another public meeting be held to discuss the distribution of Alberta coal.

"Albert has 30,000 miners out of work, and Ontario needs coal," said Major Orr.

Several mine owners were present, and gave information.

Sir George Filmer, an Albertan mine owner, said:

"I can bring coal here and lay it down in car lots at $11.00 a ton, bituminous coal, any size you want. If the fgreight rate is reduced, we'll reduce the price of coal By 1924 we can deliver up to 5 million tons a year."

SCHOOL DAYS CALL TO HOLIDAY MAKERS

Fall Exodus From Chemong Has Commenced. Many New Residents in Prospects.

With the approach of school-days, the fall exodus from Chemong commences, although the Park is at its loveliest when the leaves begin to turn. This week will see several of the residents close up their summer homes and return to the city. Some of the cottagers report a number of inquiries already received from intending purchasers of summer homes in the Park.

The Chemong road is worn down pretty well. The last two miles, from the Gilmour Church to the Park, shows some ragged portions. Just outside the city, a section of the road has been covered with a greenish ground rock material, that makes a fine filler.

The entrance to the Patte-Wolff fox farm is marked by a very ornamental rustic archway.

Charlie, the Pavilion owl, has a melancholy appearance these days. He looks as if he was about to moult, and didn't like the prospect.

Social and Personal.

Mrs. P. Heffernan, Miss Margaret Heffernan, Mr. and Mrs. J. Carroll and family, Mr. and Mrs. Herb. Heffernan of New York City, Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Heffernan and family of Rochester, N.Y., and Mr. Frank Heffernan make a family party that is occupying two of the Park cottages just now.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Armstrong and son, of Toronto, have been visiting Mrs. Armstrong's sister, Mrs. J. K. McKenzie, of Chicago, at the Park.

Mr. and Mrs. T. McQuillam are at the Rutherford cottage.

Mrs. Walter Hartshorn leaves today for Ottawa, accompanied by her guest, Mrs. Moore, of Montreal.

Mr. and Mrs. Barnum and family, of Buffalo, are closing their cottage on Thursday of this week.

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Davidson and family are coming in to the city this week.

Mrs. E. J. McCarthy, Hunter Street, and family, are in the Burnham cottage on the main road.

Mr. and Mrs. Owen and Mr. P. Kenny are coming in from the Park on Tuesday next. Mrs. Owen's sisters, Mrs. Jas. Lawless and Mrs. M. J. Lawless, of Kingston, and son Kenneth are visiting her just now.

Mrs. Fred. Sullivan gave a small bridge party last Friday evening.

Miss Kathleen O'Connell, of Toronto, spent the week-end at Mrs. E. J. McCarthy's cottage.

RENT COMES FIRST

Landlord Declares Tenants With Cars Have Got to Pay For Roof Over Their Heads First.

Of course, anybody can have a car these days, that is, some kind of car; but many of the joy-riders must be putting up a desperate struggle to pay for their pleasures.

An incident overheard by The Examiner this afternoon indicates that somebody is being skimped in the process.

The informant is familiar with the real estate business in Peterborough, and has a number of tenants.

"You will understand the type of house these two particular families are occupying when I tell you that one is paying $8.00 a month and the other $10.00. Both of them have cars, and I know that they can't afford them. However, it is none of my business whether they can or not. Everybody is out for pleasure these days, so I suppose they are merely falling in with the parade.

"I know their grocery bills are unpaid, but when it comes to passing up their rent for their car payments, gas, oil, and garage bills, I think it is pretty nearly time to step in and call a halt, and that is exactly what I intend to do. If they want a roof over their heads they've got to pay for it, especially when they imagine they can keep up with the Joneses in the car game."

COAL AS DECORATION FOR BANQUET TABLE

DUBBAN, Natal, Africa, Aug. 29—Coal as a table decoration was seen at a banquet given here recently in connection with the inauguration of the port's new coaling plant.

At intervals on the tables were lumps of coal varnished to prevent soiling the linen, with holes drilled and filled with water to hold sprays of cut flowers.

The "Superb" will be overhauled, reconditioned, and the name of the car changed, officials of the Pullman Company said.

BACHELOR M.P.'s TOAST PRINCE

"Most Popular Bachelor," Acclaimed By Celebate Members at Banquet.

LONDON, August 29. — Associated Press. — Thirty-four bachelor members of the House of Commons revelled in their unfettered estate just before Parliament shut down for the summer. There was plenty of wine and song but no women were present when the celebate legislators sat down to the banquet table to let loose a flood of stories, jokes and witty remarks upon the joys of the single man and the woes of the wedded.

The first thing the diners did was to toast the Prince of Wales — "the best and most popular bachelor."

Then Sir Robert Horne broke loose with some stories leading up to this climax.

"In these days of the rights of women, we are told that the women no longer run after the men. The mousetrap never runs after the mouse!"

Lord Hugh Cecil, brother of Lord Robert Cecil of League of Nations fame, picked up a serviette from the table, and holding it high with upraised hand, said he thought bachelors could have no better emblem "than this piece of pure white linen."

GANG LEADER SHOT AT DOOR COURT HOUSE

STORY OF FEUD

NEW YORK, August 30. — The efforts of the law to protect Nathan Kaplan, alias "Kid Dropper," notorious east side gang leader and gunman, from enemies of his kind, met with defeat when Louis Cohen paid a long standing grudge by shooting Kaplan to death outside the door of the Essex Market Court House, where Kaplan and fifteen of his men had been arraigned on criminal charges.

Penetrating a cordon of two police captains, fifteen detectives and ten uniformed patrolmen, which had been thrown around the neighborhood of the court at Second Avenue and Second street, in anticipation of a threatened outbreak between the "Dropper" gang and its rival, the "Little Augie" gang, Cohen, who denied having any connection with either group, fulfilled by vow of vengeance in a manner that has no equal for daring in the annals of the city's underorld.

Kaplin appeared in court in answer to a charge of felonious assault made against him by Jacob Shapiro of 52 Stagg street, Buffalo. His confederates were variously charged with knowledge of the same crime. Shapiro, who previously had identified the "Dropper" as one of the three men who fired at him from an auto in front of 75 Essex street on August 1st, was certain that he had made a mistake in accusing Kaplan. Accordingly Magistrate H. Stanley Renaud dismissed the charge against Kaplan, and he was released to be taken in the custody of the police to appear in the West Side Court on a charge of violating the Sullivan law.

With Acting Detective Sergeant Jesse Joseph at hiss ide and Capt. Cornelius Willemse a few feet to the rear, Kaplan emerged from the court house, where he was joined by Mrs. Veronica Kaplan, his wife. Parked at the Second street curb was a taxicab with its engine running to take the prisoner up-town.

Detectives who had been inside the court room in ready for an emergency joined those on the street. The police closely watched the crowd, which had been driven away from the immediate vicinity of the taxicab.

The "dropper," smiling, walking leisurely to the taxicab, the door of which had been opened for him by Ernest Goldfinger, the driver, of 204 Forsyth street.

Hugged and Kissed by Wife

"Jack, you've beaten all other cases and you will beat this one uptown," said Mrs. Kaplan. She put her arm around his neck and kissed him.

Captain Willemse pushed Mrs. Kaplan away, telling her that she could see him in the West Side Court, and instructing Goldfinger to take his place on the chauffeur's seat Kaplan entered and sat on the right side of the cab. While Detective Joseph was stepping into the machine an undersized, emaciated man broke through the crowd and approached the cab on the run. His very appearance disarmed suspicion of his mission.

Standing on tip-toe—even at that he couldn't see Kaplan—he whipped out a revolver and fired three shots downward as best he could through the rear window of the cab. The first shot hit the "Dropper" in the back of the head. The second imbeded itself in Goldfinger's head just behind the ear. The third hit the straw hat of Captain Willemse, entering in the back about an inch from the top and ricocheting out the side.

Mrs. Kaplan seemed to be the first person to recover her presence of mind. She ran back of the cab and grappled with Cohen as he fired the third shot. Clawing his face, she cried.

"Don't shoot him!"

Cohen succeeded in throwing her to one side and then, knocking away part of the pane of glass in the cab which had not been shattered by the first three bullets he fired again in a downward direction. This bullet passed through Kaplan's head. A fifth shot went wild.

Assassin is Overpowered.

By this time Captain Peter Tighe of the Fifth street station had run to the aid of Mrs. Kaplan, who again was struggling with her husband's assassin.

Police from every direction converged at the cab and Cohen, who

Survived a Bullet In His Brain for Twenty-four Years

NEW YORK, August 30. — After carrying a steel-jacketed Mauser bullet in his brain for 24 years, John S. Gretzer, 48 years old, died of heart trouble in his home at 71 Boss Avenue, South Ozone Park, Queens.

Mr. Gretzer received his wound in the Phillippines in 1899 while serving as a private in the volunteers. The bullet entered his head just above his left eye, and lodged, as physicians described it, between his larger and his smaller brain.

When brought back to the United States, physicians took what was said to be one of the first X-ray pictures in this country. They decided that to remove the bullet would be fatal.

Mr. Gretzer had been in the postal service for eighteen years, and for the last eighhmarfaoinaoo and for the last eight years had been an inspector.

CANADA SOUND IN RESOURCES

No Whisper of Death in the Dominions—Financial Institution Are Safe in This Country.

"There is no 'whisper of death' in Canada; on the contrary there are great prospects for the Dominion", declared Leon Frazer, Secretary of the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce, interviewed yesterday regarding the Montreal Star editorial and the "Bull and Bear" story in Tuesday's Examiner.

"The Montreal Star only gave one side of the issue," he continud. "People are willing to face facts, but they demand that every angle of the question be placed before them."

Mr. Frazer keeps closely in touch with trade conditions throughout the country, and his opinion is based on accurate information gathered from impartial and authentic sources As proof of his statement regarding the possibilities in Canada, Mr. Fraser quoted the report of a Britisher who spent six months in this country investigating business possibilities.

This man said: "Canada to-day stands pre-eminent among the trading nations of the world in respect of the value of her external trade per head of population, and in regard to her export trade she takes fourth place among the nations of the world.

Between 1902 and 1922 Canadian exports on a quantity basis more than doubled, and the result may be attributed less to commercial enterprise or native manufacturing skill than to the immense natural resources lying ready to hand and calling insistently for exploitation."

"Canada cannot go bankrupt while Europe, denuded of the natural wealth which Canada enjoys, is clamouring for what we have to dispose of," Mr. Frazer declared.

Toronto Viewpoint

In this connection the Mail and Empire says this morning: "The basic condition of Canada is entirely sound. This fact should be steadily borne in mind by anyone inclined to uneasiness over the business unsettlement through which the country has been passing.

Financial experts are unanimously of the opinion that following the recent comprehensive readjustment no apprehension whatever need be felt regarding banking institutions in Ontario. There is no question that money on deposit in these banks is as safe as are the banks themselves. In view of this, banks are discouraging the transference of deposits from one institution to another, a practice which results only in disturbance, and in no way enhances the security of the depositor. The banks, have a common interest in keeping the business channels of Canada free and open and are not rivals in the sense of trying to attract savings deposits to themselves from other institutions which are alike serving the needs of the country's commerce. One of the leading financial authorities stresses the point that banks doing business in Ontario, are in such a strong position that the public can entrust its savings to one and all with a feeling of perfect confidence."

PRES. COSGRAVE PREDICTS PEACE AND PROSPERITY

Results of Irish Elections Give Satisfaction and Optimism to Free State Government.

RETURNS TILL NOON

HOLYHEAD, Ireland, Aug. 30.—(Special).—Declaring that the Irish elections had completely endorsed the Government, President Cosgrave of the Free State to-day predicted the beginning of an era of peace and prosperity in Ireland.

Cosgrave arrived here with other Free State representatives, en route to Geneva. Ask as to the fate of Eamon De Valera, now in jail, Cosgrave said: "I cannot commit myself at present, but De Valera is now so situated that he cannot do any harm."

- 33 Government Seats.

A Dublin report says: Compilation of the returns from the Parliamentary elections up to noon today gave the Government 33 seats, the Republicans 20, the Laborites 7, Farmers 8 and Independents 9. Eighty-two seats remained undeclared.

Wexford returned two Republicans against one each for the Government, Labor and Farmers. Cork City returned two Government and two Business candidates, and Mary MacSwiney, Republican. Miss MacSwiney is the fifth woman to be declared elected, four of them being Republicans. The election count for the North City was completed at 4 o'clock this morning, adding two seats to the Republicans' total. These victorious candidates were: John O'Kelly, former Sinn Fein representative in Paris, and now in an internment camp, and A. O'Malley, one of De Valera's best fighters. He also is in jail.

William Hewat, a leading Dublin coal merchant, was elected as a representative of the business interests. P. T. Daly, one of the Larkin candidates, was defeated, while the regular Labor candidate, Alderman O'Brien, who sat in the last Dail, also failed to get a seat.

To Visit Rome.

It is announced in Rome that President Cosgrave, of the Irish Free State, plans to visit Pope Pius XII. shortly. He will go to Italy in connection with the celebration of the Saint Columbians' Monastry Centenary at Bobbco, as Saint Columbian was one of the early Irish saints.

Thirty Irish pilgrims are sailing shortly from Kingstown to attend the ceremonies.

Italy's 24-Hour Ultimatum to Greece Raises Crisis - Allied Council Protests Massacre—Situation Is Like August, 1914

BRITAIN STARTLED

LONDON, Aug. 30.—(Special.)—"Europe to-day is suddenly confronted by the grave and imminent danger of a new war."

This paragraph in the London Evening Star to-day sums up British opinion of the crisis precipitated by Italy's 24 hour ultimatum to Greece demanding redress for the assassination of five Italian members of the Albania frontier commission.

Britain was startled by the suddenness of Premier Mussolini's drastic action. The press emphasized the gravity of the situation, comparing it to that which followed the Austrian ultimatum to Serbia in 1914. The Daily News denounced Mussolini's action and declares that no self-respecting State could submit to the Italian demands. The first impression here was that Mussolini had acted with undue precipitation. The Daily News in its denunciation of Italy called the ultimatum "most provocative, especially the demand for naval honors which seeks to cast on the Greek government a profound humiliation to which no self-respecting State would be expected to submit." It insists that this is essentially a case for a League of Nations which signed the covenant.

"If the League fails now it fails always," said the News.

WILLING TO PAY.

ATHENS, Aug. 30.— The Greek Cabinet met to-day to consider the Italian ultimatum which gives this country twenty-four hours to make reparations for the massacre of five Italian officers in Greek territory.

Premier Gonatas stated to the press that some of the demands could not be accepted, that some must be modified, and that others are acceptable to Greece.

The Premier added that Greece felt the greatest indignation with regard to the crime, but believed Albanian bandits and not Greeks, were guilty of it.

"I believe," he said, "that this unfortunate incident will not ultimately effect Greek and Italian relations."

It was reported that in the event of a deadlock, Greece would invoke the intercession of the League of Nations.

The Greeks are understood to be willing to pay the fifty million lire indemnity demanded but oppose the acceptance of some of the other clauses of the ultimatum which are considered humiliating.

ALLIES PROTEST OUTRAGE.

PARIS, Aug. 30.—The Inter-Allied Council of Ambassadors to-day decided to send a telegram to the Greek Government on behalf of the British, French and Italian Governments, jointly protesting, "with the energy that the gravity of the circumstances warrants, against the outrage of which the Italian mission of the commission for delimination of the Albanian frontier has been the victim." The telegram further invites the Greek government to institute an immediate investigation into the circumstances surrounding the massacre.

LONDON, Aug. 30.—Despatch to the Evening News from Milan says the Italian fleet in Taranto harbor has received orders to be prepared to sail in the eventuality of a movement against Greece.

DEMONSTRATIONS IN ITALY.

ROME, Aug. 30.—Although there has been no violence of late, anti-Greek demonstrations are reported throughout Italy, giving full support to the Government's action in despatching its ultimatum to Athens. The Government, through the newspapers, has requested that the Fascisti assist in maintaining order and discipline.

FIFTEEN-YEAR-OLD ROMEO ESCAPES WITH HIS JULIET

Police Book Formally Reports That Somebody's Red Wagon and Harness, a Boy and 18-Year-Old Girl Disappeared

MONTREAL, August 30.—Spring may be the time when a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love, but for a 15-year-old swain near Montreal any time is good enough.

It was recently that the boy in question met a 13-year-old girl who appealed to him. The attraction was so strong that when the picnickers were going home, he asked permission to meet the maiden again. She refused. Later the lad learned why. He had a deadly rival, and the deadly rival had a bicycle which he lent to his lady friend.

Then and there the love-struck one decided he must do something desperate to crush the opposition. So he walked boldly up to the girl, while she was with the hated rival, and invited her to take a ride "in my pony and cart sometime." She agreed.

How to make good on the proposition was the puzzle facing the boy. He had neither horse nor cart. But love finds a way as the poets say, and love pointed out the way on a very wet and unromantic day, but not sufficient to extinguish the burning affections of the boy.

He had noticed a large waggon, similar to those used by street cleaners, and it was painted bright red. It was parked in a side lane. And he had seen a white horse in the field further north. So he collected up horse, harness and waggon, and in great state drove up yesterday to a spot not far from the girl's house, but nicely concealed. Would she come? Of course she would!

And that is the reason for a very formal report in the police book today, to the effect that Mr. Somebody's white horse, and Mr. Somebody Else's red waggon, and yet another Mr. Somebody Else's harness have all disappeared, together with one little lad and one small girl.

The police report says nothing about it, but it is known that the hated rival's nose is now "right out of joint."

DIED IN LONDON.

Princess Anatasea of Greece, formerly Mrs. William B. Leeds, of the United States, who passed away in London, was married to Prince Christopher of Greece, in 1920.

The immediate cause of death was cancer, complicated by cirrhosis of the liver. It is thought likely that the body will be sent to the United States immediately for interment in the family mausoleum at Woodlawn cemetery, New York.

NO DIPLOMATIC CHINESE BREAK

Consul to Canada Returned to China on Immigration Business

OTTAWA, Aug. 30. Canadian Press. — The Chinese Government has no intention of breaking off diplomatic relations with Canada, according to the secretary of the Chinese Consul here, who was asked regarding a news story that a temporary break had occurred between the governments of Canada and China over amendments to the Immigration Act passed last year.

Report on Immigration.

The secretary stated that Dr. Tsur (Chinese consul here, who is out of town to-day) had merely been asked to return to China to make a personal report on immigration legislation.

Will Dr. Tsur return to Canada?" he was asked.

"If he does not, another representative of China will," was the reply.

A Word to Bank Depositors

Local bankers declare that there is no cause whatever for recent apprehensions among a few of their depositors, and the soundness and security of the banks is vouched for by the following measured statement published by the Toronto Globe to-day:

The Globe is constrained by a sense of duty to say to bank depositors that upon their steadiness and confidence at the present time the financial well-being of Ontario in the immediate future largely depends.

Some of the depositors in our Canadian chartered banks have recently been making inquiries concerning their financial standing.

Some have gone farther, and have changed their deposit accounts from one bank to another.

The Globe is assured, on the highest financial authority, that the deposits in every chartered bank carrying on business in Ontario to-day are amply secured, and that there is not the least necessary for concern as to their safety.

The removal of deposits from one bank to another does not necessarily increase their security, and it is understood that the banks themselves, in times like the present, do not favor such action. It only tends still further to disturbance and unrest when confidence and sanity are essential.

The Globe hopes that its readers will take no part in rocking the boat.

BANK CLEARINGS.

Clearings, week ending 30th of August, 1923, $594,762.
Same week last month, $670,694.
Same week last year, $555,766.
Same week two years ago, 693,865.

REDUCTION ON EXPORTS.

Following reports from abroad of a slump in grain prices the council of commissaries has voted to reduce taxes on grain exports. Reductions of 10.8 gold kopeks per pood have been decided upon.

UNION MINERS WILL PREVENT MINE FLOODS

Maintenance Men Allowed to Remain at Work If Suspension of Mining Becomes Effective.

WARN PROFITEERS

HARRISBURG, Aug. 30.—(Canadian Press). — An agreement was reached to-day between the Policy Committee of the anthracite operators and the officials of the Miners' Union, under which union men employed as pumpmen, engineers and maintenance men will be allowed to stay at work after September 1, even if the suspension of mining, now ordered, becomes effective. The men in the classifications named are needed to prevent the mines from flooding and caving in during the periods of idleness.

GUARD CONSUMER.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—Warning against probable attempts of unscrupulous wholesalers to profiteer on anthracite in case of a strike Saturday was issued yesterday by the United States Coal Commission.

The Commission made public detailed information on middlemen's profits which were mentioned briefly in the general anthracite report on July 5. It declared the speculative jobber was the prime cause of extremely high premiums paid for anthracite during the recent shortage in New England and other sections.

In addition to a general discussion of coal profits, the Commission also gave out mines prices of anthracite and freight rates to different cities and communities of Atlantic seaboard States in order that the public might be informed of profits made between the mine and the consumer.

GAS OVERCAME MAN AND WIFE

Saved by the Police from Death Fumes—Woman in Serious Condition—Man Revived.

MONTREAL, Aug 30.—On the threshold of death, an aged couple the husband aged 83 years and his wife aged 70 years, were rescued from gas fums escaping from their kitchen stove, at 2:40 o'clock in the morning when the police broke into their house after a neighbor had notified them. Both victims, S. Boyer and his wife, of 688 Drolet street, were unconscious when found by Sergeant Joinvill of the Laurier avenue station and his men, and had to be carried outside where artificial respiration was tried while awaiting the arrival of an ambulance.

The work of the police soon revived the man and he was taken to the Royal Victoria Hospital, where the doctors say he is recovering rapidly from the effects of the gas. The woman, however, would not respond to treatment by the police, and she was still unconsious when the ambulance from the Hotel Dieu carried her away to that institution. Her condition is reported as being serious.

Neighbours Call Police

It was 2:40 o'clock a.m. when Lieutenant Trepannier, of the Laurier avenue station, received a telephone call from Mrs. John Frazer, at 686a Drolt street, advising him of a heavy odor of gas escaping from the home of the Boyers, which was annoying to the neighbours.

After the victims had been taken to the hospitals, Sergeant Joinville continued his searches and found a tea pot on a plate of the gas range in the kitchen. The teapot had overflown and caused the gas flame to extinguish, leaving the gas to escape freely in the flat. It was though that the woman had arisen early during the night, placed the teapot on the stove, and rested on the couch while the tea infused. Then, apparently she fell asleep and did not notice the overflowing.

SOME COWS DIETING ON SWEET CLOVER

A trouble that is harassing the minds of local milkmen just as present is the effect which a sweet clover diet has on the milk supply. Housewives who may have noticed a bottle of milk, which would have stayed sweet for many hours, turning sour on their hands within a short space of time, need not be alarmed. The herd that supplies their particular milkman has been consuming a dainty in the form of a sweet clover that has the opposite effect from sweetening on the resultant milk flow.

The clover gives the milk a peculiar odor and a noticeable acrid taste, but a stoppage in the sweet clover diet will result in the regular condition of the milk returning at once.

Vegetables also, such as turnips and leeks, when eaten by the cattle, result in milk and butter which is tainted with their juices.

Says Prohibition Hastened Death of President Harding

LONDON, August 30.— Prohibition hastened the death of President Harding, in the opinion of ex-Governor Sproul of Pennsylvania, who said, in discussing Prohibition in an interview in The Evening Star:

"I think President Harding's death was accelerated by the fact that he thought it his duty, because of Prohibition, to set a public example and abstain from the use of liquor. He was accustomed to take an occasional drink of Scotch whisky.

"I was his personal friend, and I know, and in that laborious trip to Alaska I'm sure he missed it."

LAID WREATH ON MONUMENT

Lieut. Col. Charles Ackerman Was Present at Unveiling of St. Julien Memorial.

Lieut.-Col. Chas. Ackerman, back from a six weeks' trip to the Old Country, during which he spent a great deal of time in England and visited in France and Belgium some of the places where fierce engagements of the recent war were fought, has an interesting story to tell of the unveiling of the St. Julien Memorial near Ypres, which took place on Sunday, July 8th. This memorial is the first of a series which it is intended to erect in commemoration of battles in which Canadians took a prominent part.

The Toronto "Saturday Night," in its issue of August 4th, has a long account of the ceremony and a cut showing the memorial, a tall column of white stone, from the top of which rises the torso of a Canadian soldier in full marching kit, looking down with grave face at folded hands which rest on "reversed arms." The figure faces toward Pilkem Woods, where Canadians saved the situation in an action which Marshal Foch considered the finest in the war annals, when they launched an assault in the face of poison gas in one of the most sanguinary encounters of the whole war.

Placed a Wreath.

The figure of Lt.-Col. Ackerman, who had the honor of placing at the base of the memorial a wreath in memory of the Second Canadian Battalion, occupies a prominent place in the picture. A former resident of Peterboro, Mrs. C. B. McAllister, of New Westminster, B.C., also placed a wreath sent by the women of British Columbia.

It was on this occasion that Sir Richard Turner, V.C., addressing his audience in French and English, centralized his effort on the work and sufferings of the Canadian fighting men. Lt.-Col. Ackerman had the pleasure of meeting here several of his old comrades-in-arms, including Sergeant Brunton, of the Guard of Honor, who enlisted from Peterboro with the Second Battalion. He also met Marshal Foch and the Duc de Brabant, the son of the Belgian King.

Grain Growing Over the Dead.

Lt.-Col. Ackerman visited many places in what was formerly the devastated area of France, and found everywhere signs of French industry. Every available bit of arable soil is being cultivated to attain what the French desire; enough grain to feed themselves without importation, and the spots where men fought and bled are now fields of golden grain. At Bois Grenier, the visitor found the remains of the old high command breastwork trenches serving as boundary lines between fields of ripening wheat and Russian workmen were laboring to dislodge from the concrete emplacements of the Germans the iron which lay embedded in them. At Merris, a place of which it was said that not a brick was left to mark the spot, the original roadways, with their buried shells, have been used to serve as foundations for a re-built village, the paths used in military operations having been taken for new roadways.

In France, contractors working to rebuild the devastated regions do not handle any funds. They merely certify invoices of supplies received, and all wage accounts are paid by a central committee, headed by the "maire" or the burgomaster, as the case may be.

Flew to England.

The return journey from France to England was made in one of the Handley-Page aeroplanes which make regular trips from Paris to Croydon, the trip taking about two and one-half hours. The aircraft carried twelve passengers and a limited amount of baggage. It is rather a curious picture that Lt.-Col. Ackerman presents of the people of the two countries of France and England. In the former, they are working, working, putting in grain in every available inch of soil, building up their war-stricken regions, standing behind their Government's policy with whole-hearted enthusiasm, determined to remain in the Ruhr as long as may be necessary, thinking of the League of Nations as impractical and idealistic, discussing with intense passion and vigor the whole situation.

BLACK DUCKS TO BEAR BRUNT OF HUNTERS' GUNS

Wood Ducks Are Still Protected During Season That Opens Saturday—Display in Lech's.

MANY AT RICE LAKE

The duck shooting season opens on Saturday morning at daybreak. As soon as the grey light of dawn becomes clear enough to sight a gun from a screen along the marshes, the annual bombardment will commence, depending in its volume on the number of ducks that are found within range of the small shot, and also upon the success of the sportsmen in their choice of grounds.

Quite a number of those to whom the first of September brings a pulsing thrill of anticipation have been leisurely surveying the lakes and the bays around this district, and have already selected their sectors of the firing line for Saturday morning.

From their observation, it is understood that the early ducks are fairly numerous at Rice Lake and in the bays along the river almost up to the outskirts of the city.

Out in the middle of Rice Lake there is a flock of black ducks that are estimated at four or five hundred, and elsewhere along the lake and up the river there are other hundreds, although in scattered groups.

Some of these birds are reported to be feeding comparatively close to the city. Up at the end of Mud Lake and on the Omemee pond the early varieties are said to be fairly plentiful, but only a few have been seen in the Pigeon Creek district.

The rice beds in those waters have thinned out, and offer an exceedingly light crop for game fowl.

Heavy Rice Crop.

The Rice Lake's crop is heavy, and although it has been ripening slowly, the colour of the expansive beds seen from the shore is passing through the saffron shades to the straw colour of ripeness and maturity.

For the opening of the season on Saturday the black ducks will have to bear the brunt of the fusilade. Wood ducks are still protected, a prohibition which hunters should be mindful of. None of the later ducks are due yet, and the blacks are practically alone, with the exception of the few teal that are expected, solitary sacrifices in Saturday's slaughter.

The wood ducks are the only fowl of their species that nest in trees, seeking out hollow stumps or higher stunted trees, or even the old nests of flickers and other woodpeckers, which they enlarge for their own use and convenience.

Ducks in Window Display.

For the information of those who may be interested in the early water fowl, Mr. Cyril Lech is displaying in the north window of the store of K. G. Lech & Sons three brace of wild ducks, green wing teal, black and wood.

Nature has favoured the males with plumage more brilliant than their drab and smaller mates, and this discrimination applies to the entire collection of Canadian water fowl in the Lech store. Incidentally this is an exceptionally fine collection, including practically all the later ducks which do not arrive in these waters until the cold has driven them from the Northern lakes and rivers where they nested and raised their broods.

Automobile's Part.

In shooting as in fishing, the automobile is playing a pernicious part: It gives to the gentlemen of the chase a ranging mobility that presents a new menace to the country's game resources. In the old days duck hunters usually reached their chosen grounds the night before the opening day, for example, and when day broke they were either in or out of luck, depending upon the number of birds they found before them. And after the first round of shots the birds took the air and flew off in their fright to some other part of the lake or river. The hunter's day might not have been entirely spoiled thereafter, but it involved paddling to other grounds.

Saturday morning, however, the duck hunters will put out their cars before daybreak and drive to the place they have selected, and if they are not satisfied there they can move on to some other place later, shooting from the shore, in some instances, and retrieving the ducks with their trained dogs.

Such is the change that has come over the ancient sport of shooting game fowl. This form of hunting tends to become more successful for everybody but the birds, and to that very extent probably less successful for everybody eventually.

COMPROMISE PROPOSED BASIS OF SETTLEMENT FOR IMPENDING STRIKE

Governor Pinchot Suggests Increase in Pay, Eight-Hour Day and Recognition of Union Without Check Off.

REPLY ON FRIDAY.

HARRISBURG, Pa., August 30. Canadian Press. — Governor Pinchot last night submited to the representatives of the anthracite miners and operators in joint conference, a proposed basis of settlement, providing for a ten per cent. increase in pay, recognition of the eight-hour day for all employees, and full recognition of the union by the operators without the check-off but with the right to have a union representative present when the men are paid.

The three main points of his scheme of settlement were set forth as follows:

"1. Recognition of the basic eight hour day for all employees. If longer hours are necessary at certain times or in certain occupations, the overtime to be paid for at the eight hour rate.

"2. A uniform increase of ten per cent. to all employees, this increase to take effect September 1st.

"3. Full recognition of the union by the operators, without the check off, but with the right to have a union representative present when the men are paid."

A fourth point proposed complete recognition of the principle of collective bargaining.

The Governor also suggested that as a method of settling differences in cases of disagreement between the miners and the operators each side select a man agreeable to both to attend and take part in discussions, but without a vote, and not as an umpire or referee. If then unable to agree he proposed the differences be referred to the conciliation board "which will be provided with whatever equipment is necessary for the rendering of prompt decisions."

In opening his address the governor said:

"My justification for proposing a basis upon which I believe this strike can be prevented with justice to all parties, is three-fold.

"First, that this controversy has continued until all chance of agreement by direct negotiations between the miners and the operators has been lost.

"Second, that the interest of the miners, the operators, and the public all require that this controversy shall be settled without a strike.

"Third, that the public is entitled to a voice in the discussions and the rights of the people generally deserve consideration at least as much as those of the miners and the operators."

He declared he based his proposals upon information assembled from operators, miners and government experts with the belief that it affords a basis of settlement, reasonable and just.

He then outlined his plan for a settlement adding that he did not regard the question of the open or closed shop as at issue in the controversy.

After expressing the opinion that an agreement on the terms suggested should cover a period of one year, Governor Pinchot dscussed the wage question in detail.

"The whole body of wage rates in the anthracite field," he said, "is antiquated, haphazard and honeycombed with inequality. It needs revision. I suggest that the anthracite conciliation board be authorized by the joint wage scale committees to undertake and complete within a year a thorough revision.

The proposed increase of ten per cent. he recommended, "in view of the high degree of skill required among the miners, and the extra hazardous nature of the occupation." This increase he estimated, would add 60 cents a ton to the cost of domestic sizes of anthracite coal at the mine adding that of this amount not less than ten cents ought to be absorbed by the operators without any increase of price.

The remaining fifty cents per ton, he said, should not in the end be taken from the consumer but should properly be taken out of the cost of transportation and distribution.

In conclusion, Governor Pinchot said:

"I believe the proposed settlement to be fair to all three parties to the controversy. It is fair to the miners, for it will notably improve their condition as to wages, hours and recognition of the union. It is fair to the operators, for it leaves them in a position to continue running their mines, and to do so at a reasonable profit. It is fair to the public, for the public can better afford to get anthracite at a slight increase in price (if that cannot be avoided) than not to get anthracite at all. In particular it leaves both miners and operators far better off than either would be if the contention of the other had been accepted.

"I call the attention pointedly of both sides to the fact that neither miners nor operators, whether the strike goes on or whether it does not, can hope to have their own way fully in the end. Whether now or later a compromise is inevitable. It is immensely to the advantage of each of the three parties in interest that the compromise shall be made before the enormous loss and suffering of a strike is undergone, rather than afterwards.

"It is fair to ask miners and operators alike to take time to consider this proposal. I do ask very earnestly that both sides will withhold the announcement of any conclusion until they meet with me again at noon on Friday next that they will then give their decisions, and that in the interval they will consider not only their own interests but also their duty to the anthracite using people of the United States."

Electric Brand For Canadian Cattle

MONTREAL, Aug. 30.— (Canadian Press.)—Cattle branding by electricity was carried through with great success here yesterday afternoon when twenty steers were marked with a two-by-four inch "C" in the Montreal stock yards to the complete satisfaction of members of the Canadian Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. The steers did not appear to know that they had been marked with white hot irons and the hides were in no way injured. The hair is neatly singed off, leaving the required mark as plainly as though it had been burned in the animal.

The only question now is as to whether the British authorities will be satisfied with the hair brand.

WURZBURG BEER HIGHER IF CROPS OF HOPS FAIL

WURZBURG, Germany, Aug. 29. —Beer drinkers are watching the German hop crop anxiously. If the production this year is not great the price of beef probably will sail even higher than has been predicted by the brewers. An increase of 350 per cent. in paper mark prices is scheduled for the near future, and still more may be expected, as the efforts of the government to peg the exchange rate of the mark do not seem to be meeting wth any permanent success.

Prospects are excellent now for a good hop crop in the Franconian district but rain during the harvesting season may injure the hops this yeaar as it did last, when the output was discolored and impaired in quality.

GUARD AGAINST BANK ROBBERS

Western Banks Take Precautions to Guard Selves Against Depredations of Border Bandits.

REGINA, Sask., Aug. 30.—(Canadian Press.)— In order to prevent raids by border bank robbers, the banks and police have been equipped with the most thorough protective devices it is possible to devise.

Almost 400 miles of boundary is now continually patrolled. With the movement of the crops there has been a general tightening up as the danger of invasion increases. A number of cars each carrying two police officers and mounted police with machine guns work along the appointed stretches of the danger zone. The patrol is complete as it can be be in the rugged stretches of country covered nightly.

In some of the banks a police officer is sttaioned practically continuously. All bank buildings have been equipped with protective devices and burglar alarms powerful enough to awaken the whole district are set each night. The staff will shoot from behind the latest bullet proof shutters and many of the vaults when opened by explosive contain an unpleasant surprise for the bandits. The breaking of the vaults will explode bombs rendering the inside workers easy victims for capture.

THREE ISN'T EVEN.

LIVERPOOL, Eng., Aug. 30.—It cost Messrs, Blackledge, local bakers, $10 to learn that three is an odd number. ### MARGARET'S BOOK REALLY OUGHT TO BE AMAZ ING.

Margaret Shotwell

OMAHA, Aug 30—A flapper who admits it.

And she's capitalizing on the fact. A "professional flapper" she calls herself.

Margaret inherited $75,000 on the death of a friend of her family. Immediately, she betook herself to Hollywood, capital of Movieland.

Out there she got a job as a movie extra. And now she's gathering material for her book, "AFlapper's Impressions of the Motion Picture Stars."

Her sister flappers here in Omaha can't hardy wait until it comes out. It will reveal so many things they never knew before! At least, that's the word they received from Margaret.

Already the "professional flapper" has interviewed some of the screen's most scintillating lights.

No wonder all the bob-haired clientele is so excited nowadays.

WASHINGTON FEARS A BOLSHEVIST GERMANY

Her Diplomats Say That the Western World Has Brought Her to Verge of Ruin.

TURNING EASTWARD.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—(United Press).—A real fear is expressed in diplomatic circles here that Germany is about to turn Bolshevist.

The recent fall of the Cuneo Government was expected. In fact, surprise was general that the Cabinet lasted as long as it did.

Since the Treaty of Versailles, Germany has professed to follow a policy of fulfillment of the treaty of peace. Despite the fact that this profession is regarded in many quarters as plain bluff, Germany's avowed policy for the past four years has been one of fulfillment of the treaty

A Western Policy.

This has been a sort of "western policy," for through fulfillment of the treaty, Germany hoped to remain in the family of so-called western nations, and after finally discharging the obligations that rested upon her in the Versailles Treaty, again to become one of the principal powers of the western world.

This was the only course which Germany saw open to her through which to remain a factor in the western world. Of course, if Germany had the power to defy the Allies and throw off the yoke of the Versailles Treaty, that would be another course —and a course that gladly would be taken advantage of—but Germany has not such power.

"Therefore, the only other course Germany has along which to develop her foreign policy is towards the east—Soviet Russia. This has been a spectre of alarm to the eyes of the western world since the peace at Versailles—an alliance between Soviet Russia, Nationalist Turkey and finally Germany.

Such a triple-alliance already has been partly made. Turkey has her treaty of alliance with Soviet Russia, and there is the Rappalo economic treaty between Germany and Russia. However, the effect of the Russo-German treaty is believed here to have been largely negligible and neither have Turkey and Russia recently been as close allies as might have been expected.

At the Cross-roads.

But now Germany is regarded as standing at the cross-roads of her future—whether to attempt to remain a part of the western world or turn to the arms of Soviet Russia, arms that are open and ready.

Germany's condition has grown steadily worse since the Armistice. Her currency now is verging on the point of being worthless, and is going down the same paper path that spelled the obliteration of Russia's currency.

German observers here say: "What has the western policy of the post-war Government of Germany brought her? Nothing but ruin! The nation can now only turn eastward to Soviet Russia."

An alliance between Germany, Russia and Turkey is frankly feared by western diplomats. They regard its possible consummation as a threat of future—perhaps early—war. Such alliance would have vast man power and natural resources. With the technical skill which is conceded the Germans, organization of a huge and powerful army is conceded possible.

The Attitude of Japan.

There is also a question in the mind of official Washington whether Japan would regard such alliance a menace to her aspirations. Japan wants a firm foothold in the Asiatic mainland. Russia could well afford, diplomats say, to cede to Japan a large portion of the eastern Asiatic mainland in return for adherence to such alliance. A free hand in China would be a possible added bait

The result might be an alliance between eastern Europe and Asia against Poland, France and Belgium. England, it is believed here, would stand aloof, trying only to save her eastern empire. The attitude of Italy is problematic, while the Americans are not figured as a possible factor in the tangle. Japan, it is felt, given practically unlimited sweep in eastern Asia, would no longer menace the eastern possessions of the United States—at least not for generations.

Taken as a whole the German menace to the peace of the world is regarded here as increased by the political and economic developments of the last few weeks.

VICTORIA, Aug. 30.—(Canadian Press.)— The instruments of Gonzales observatory recorded a severe earthquake Tuesday afternoon. The first wave commenced at 4:24, the maximum coming fourteen minutes later. The record lasted over two hours. It is estimtaed that the origin of the 'quake was about 1,850 miles away, probably in the Aleutian Islands.

GOVT. MAJORITY IS EXPECTED IN IRISH ELECTION

Unofficial Returns Yesterday Increased Confidence of Free State Supporters.

COUNT INCOMPLETE.

DUBLIN Aug. 30. — (Canadian Press).—The election situation last night, with unofficial returns and estimates continually coming in, is such that it is almost impossible to form any accurate idea of how the returns stand. No count is yet complete for any constituency and those of the candidates whose names have been mentioned as among the elected have not yet been officially declared so.

The declaration announced yesterday, however, greatly increased the confidence of the government and its supporters, and tended to lower the hopes of the Republicans. Labor made a poor start, and neither the farmers nor the Independents fared well in the first round of the balloting. The outstanding feature of the elections has been the extraordinarily heavy pollings of the ministers. A comparison of the party strengths of those already unofficially declared to have been elected gives no idea of ultimate strengths pending allocation of the surplus votes.

Last night it was semi-officially stated that Eamon De Valera had polled 17,000 votes in County Clare against 8,000 for Professor John MacNeill, Minister of Education. Both figures are above the quota but it is expected that each will be increased as the count continues De Valera probably will carry in two other Republicans with him.

The main feature of the relative strengths is that the government and the Republicans are the two chief parties. The government, however, outnumbers the Republicans by more that 2 to 1. The farmer, Labor and Independent groups each will be smaller than had been anticipated.

At eleven o'clock, last night, the returns indicated the election of 27 government members, nine Republicans, four Farmers, four Laborites and seven Independents.

They say the waltz will return this fall. This is the third fall they have said it.

Labor Shortage in the Harvest Fields

EDMONTON, Aug. 30.— (Canadian Press.)— A somewhat serious labour shortage has developed in the harvesting situation, the government employment service being 800 men below the number required. The peak of the demand for harvesters is expected to be reached Thursday or Friday and the shortage may then touch the one thousand mark. For the past week there has been a steady call for men and the supply has not been equal to the demand.

TO MAKE SURVEY OF NATURAL GAS

Sarnia Asks For Provincial Expert to Examine Supply in the Vicinity of the City.

SARNIA, Ont. Aug. 30.—(Canadian Press).—A resolution requesting the provincial gas commissioner to have an expert make a survey of the natural gas field in Sarnia township to ascertain the amount available, has been drafted by a special committee of the City Council. This resolution followed a recent request from George A. Wilson, General Manager of the Sarnia Oil and Gas Company for the waiving of the City's priority rights to the gas from this field in order that it might be used for the manufacture of carbon black in a factory which it was proposed to erect in the township. Mr. Wilson claimed that the supply obtainable from the present wells was too small to be of any value for consumption here. The matter was referred to a special committee and was quickly taken up with Hon. Mr. McCrea, Minister of Mines and the latter ruled that the domestic consumers must be given first consideration and suggested that the matter taken up further locally. The resolution now ready sets out that if the proposed survey provided that the amount available was worth while an effort should be made to have Mr. Wilson, the Union Natural Gas Company. The Sarnia Gas and a representative committee confer and try to arrive at some understanding whereby the gas could be brought into the city.

The country bedbugs have enjoyed their vacations on city people very much this summer.

FOREST FIRES THIS SUMMER WERE SERIOUS

Five to Ten Times the Amount of Timber Used By Mills Was Destroyed By Fire.

HEAVY LOSSES.

PORT ARTHUR, Ont., Aug. 30. —(Canadian Press.)— "Forest fires in Ontario during the past summer have destroyed five to ten times the amount of timber put to use by all the mills in the province," declared Robson Black, manager of the Canadian Forestry Association, who is at the head of the lakes arranging details of a three months' campaign in Northern Ontario in the interests of fire prevention.

Mr. Black states he had the report of one company that lost 500,000 cords of pulpwood due directly to carelessness of prospectors setting out fires in the woods. One company lost fifty million feet of pine. Perhaps the most serious loss of any was that in which an Ontario firm lost in one week's fire enough pine to keep the company's mill going for fifty-six years.

"We have come to the point where we have got to face the cold facts with regard to forest fire prevention. At the present rate of waste the forests of Ontario will be depeted in twenty years," said Mr. Black. "If fires continue at the rate of this summer, Ontario is going to face a large exodus of population attached to the wood users. It will mean that scores of towns in the province will cease to exist as towns which are now dependent on the product of the forest, for existence."

SEASON EXTENDED.

OTTAWA, Aug. 30.— (Canadian Press.)—The angling season for salmon in New Brunswick ,except in the waters of the Restigouche river and its tributaries, has been extended until September 30. This season formerly ended on August 31. The regulations provide that the inspector of fisheries for a district may grant permission to fish for and catch salmon by angling at any time after the end of March, in any stream where he finds that the salmon are in good condition for food.

SUMMER HOTELS.

The finding of the jury in the inquiry into the death of the Wawa fire victims that there should be a more frequent and systematic inspection of public buildngs, especially for the purpose of testing the fire fighting appliances and facilities for escape, is one that the Ontario Government should not be allowed to forget.

It is evident that in the past such inspections have been held too infrequently and there is reason to feel that in some cases the testing done has been a mere formality.

The majority of summer hotels are not nearly as well prepared for a fire as was the ill-fated Wawa.

Most of them are wooden structures with thin partitions offering no resistance to the rapid spread of the flames.

In such hotels there are no fire escapes.

The occupants of upper rooms would have to take a chance on escaping via the stairs or of jumping from a window.

In addition many of these places boast of their open fire places, which constitute in themselves a source of peril.

Such buildings might well be visited by government officials with a view to instituting reforms that would give people a fighting chance for their lives in the event of an outbreak of fire.

For it must be remembered that the Wawa hotel was a model of preparedness when contrasted with many others in the province.

A CURE FOR THE BLUES.

Canadians generally, whether they live in Toronto or not, will rejoice in the fact that the Canadian National Exhibition seems to be on its way to new records this year.

That is a source of satisfaction, for the people of this country rightly look upon the Exhibition as not merely a Toronto undertaking, but an achievement to which the Dominion contributes.

They regard the Canadian National Exhibition as a demonstration of Canadian progress, energy and enterprise, and appreciate the fact that the greater the success scored each year the more important is the Exhibition as a monument to those qualities upon which Canadians pride themselves.

And more especially will they see in it a cause for rejoicing at the growth and expansion of the Canadian National.

It is a direct and convincing answer to the gloomy pessimism of that Montreal paper which has been endeavouring to frighten Canadians with its "whisper of death."

No one can visit the Toronto Exhibition and go away alarmed over Canada's future.

No one can see its evidence on every side of prosperity and growth and enterprise without feeling that the Montreal Star has been suffering from an attack of sun-stroke.

It is the best cure for the blues, financial, business or otherwise, that can be found in this wonderful country.

OLD BOYS' REUNIONS.

Millbrook this year and Norwood a year ago have demonstrated most effectively that what every doubting Thomas in Peterborough said could not be done can be accomplished if the undertaking is taken hold of in the proper spirit and with the necessary degree of enthusiasm.

They put over an old boys' reunion, and put it over completely and successfully.

Millbrook's big event, just over, showed that Peterborough people who threw cold water upon a similar proposal here were wrong when they said that the old boys would not come home for such an event.

They came home to Millbrook from all over the Continent—and they were glad to do it, and, more important, were glad that they had done it, for they had a royal time and they revived a lot of old memories that they will carry back with them to the homes of their adoption and cherish until they pass on.

Some time or other the Examiner would like to see Peterborough try this reunion week.

There are Peterborough old boys scattered all over this terrestial footstool whom we would like to see again.

Many of them have climbed high on the ladder of success, but they haven't forgotten the old days in Peterborough.

We'd like to have all those old boys and girls drop in again some time.

Especially because we feel that Peterborough has climbed, too, while they have been away.

And we'd be delighted to show them how we have grown.

FARMERS AND AUTOS.

Much interest has been created by the Nebraska report that the farmers of that State will spend, in 1923, $135,000,000 on their automobiles, and will receive about $75,000,000 for their crops, says the Mail and Empire. Wheat is figured in at 60 cents a bushel net. As the cost of raising it may be 60 cents, the profit will not go far toward paying for automobiles. Nearly every farmer in the State has a motor car.

The ecomonic situation of the farmer has been the subject of deep concern by all business leaders. They recognize that if he cannot make money on his production, the decline in agriculture will be accentuated. Farming is now precarious as a livelihood for the man with small capital. Contrasted with urban industry, it is a poor second. The National Industrial Conference Board of the United States has estimated that the wage-earners of that country are enjoying now more prosperity than in the peak of the post-war boom. Their wages, as averaged from 600,000 cases, are about 18 per cent more, in real purchasing power, than in 1920, when living costs were higher. Wages in May were fast approaching peak levels while the cost of living has gone off, and is still going off, as industrial competition for markets becomes more and more vigorous. The farmers who throw up farming to share in this improvement cannot be blamed.

Unquestionably the motor car has been a boon to the farmer in larger degree than to the city man. It has solved the problem of distance. It means more and better social life, easy acces to town, and lessens isolation as between farming groups. Every Ontario community of any consequence will show more motor cars, per hundred of population, than any city community. But when the cost of automobiles exceed the whole agricultural income of the farmers of a State, the question is: How long can agriculture stand the pace, and what will happen when the inevitable comes?

BOASTING ABOUT BREAKING THE LAW.

The Peterborough Examiner tells of four motorists who arrived at Cobourg last week. No. 1 claimed that at one portion of the road he was doing 65 miles an hour. No. 2 claimed 55 miles was all he had to his credit of the trip. No. 3 was about the same, while No. 4 was a careful driver who did not like over 40 miles an hour.

And all this, the Examiner remarks, in a country where the law says 25 miles per hour is the proper speed.

These four boasters explain very fully why heading writers on morning papers sit back Sunday nights waiting for the list of week-end tragedies to pour in.

One word explains nearly the whole thing—speed.—London Advertiser.

RURAL EDUCATION.

No one is better qualified to express an opinion on rural education than the Provincial Minister of Agriculture, Hon. J. S. Martin is himself a farmer, who has attained the highest distinction in his special line; he has also been a schoolmaster, and knows from practical experience what the educational requirements are. When he criticizes, therefore, the present methods of teaching in the rural districts of Ontario, his observations demand the most earnest attention of the authorities. That they will receive such attention is, fortunately, assured. "I know the Department of Education is in sympathy, and is extremely anxious to co-operate with our department," Mr. Martin declared. We may, consequently, expect prompt action from the Government along the lines suggested. That the need for such a change is pressing is only too apparent. Agriculture is being left behind; it is about the last thing, instead of the first thing, in the minds of the country-bred children. The procession citywards is gaining constantly more and more recruits from those whose early training and environment ought naturally to engender a love of the soil and the capacity to gain a comfortable living therefrom.

How is this problem to be attacked? That it is a very serious problem needs no argument. Agriculture is the basis of our national prosperity; above all others, it is the essential industry. Its neglect spells disaster. The young person will, very naturally, adopt that career which is most attractive to him. The remedy is to increase the attractiveness of rural pursuits. Mr. Martin shows how this can be done. "The science of farming is the most interesting study in the world. . . . We find that the man who has mastered certain branches of agriculture and who is a specialist in his line is the most successful." Farming is a highly skilled profession. Its evolution is by no means yet complete, however. New developments are constantly taking place, and it is only by keeping abreast of the latest knowledge and practice that the farmer can expect to reap a full measure of success. Taught in the right way, no subject should prove more appealing to the average child. There will always be those, of course, who remain deaf to the call. But the call can, undoubtedly, be made much more attractive than it is at present.

Every child has the right to an equal chance in life. In the desire to give the country child similar educational opportunities with the town child, an injustice may, unintentionally, have been done. For those desiring to enter commercial or professional life, the privilege should be equally available to all; but it is a manifest mistake to confine attention too exclusively to these ends. The market is already overcrowded, while a cry almost of alarm is heard from the farms. It is quite obvious that a change must be made without delay, if the situation is not to be still more seriously complicated. The question, however, is mainly one of reward, and on this aspect Mr. Martin also touched. Farming must be made to pay a fair return on the time and toil put into it before it can be expected to enlist the enthusiasm of the rising generation. Whether the solution lies in more economical methods of distribution or not, the problem must be solved in a manner satisfactory alike to the producer and the consumer before farming can appeal to the young aspirants, as it does to Mr. Martin, as "the greatest thing in life." —Hamilton Spectator.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Every day in every way the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition is drawing closer.

To quote the London Advertiser the idea of using soft coal as a substitute for anthracite probably originated with the laundry man.

Prisoners escaping from Cobalt jail waited long enough to take with them a supply of home brew. It is too bad the jailer didn't have a taxi ready for them.

A "sucker" according to the Border Cities Star is a person who believes that good things are peddled around the country for the benefit of the small investor.

Western farmers are being advised to each hire a man for the winter whether they have work for him or not in order to keep the British harvesters in Canada. It is to the interest of the country that they should be retained here but why should the farmers have to bear the whole burden?

Governor Pinchot is pinch hitting for the consumer. And here's hoping he does not strike out.

According to newspaper despatches, Sir Henry Thornton is anxious to see Alberta coal brought to Ontario. So is everybody else, and Sir Henry happens to be in a better position than most of us to make the fulfillment of his wish possible.

Pictures of bathing girls are disappearing from the newspapers. No wonder people are beginning to pay attention to the fuel problem.

TORONTO CATTLE.

TORONTO, August 30. — With 2,8800 stale cattle still on the market, fresh arrivals included 700 Westerners, as well as 320 others. In other lines there were 386 calves, 776 hogs, and 702 sheep.

Exporters are buying very little, apparently holding off till next week, when cattle shipments wil be resumed overseas. Trade locally continues dull, there being a surplus of common cattle.

FIELD DAY HASTINGS UNQUALIFIED SUCCESS

C.G.E. of Peterboro Took Part in Baseball Tourney and Captured Two Wins--Rev. Hinton the Moving Spirit.

HASTINGS, Aug 30—The C.G.E. baseball team, champions of the Peterborough City League, came to the village yesterday to take part in the tournament staged by the Young People's Society of the Methodist Church, and returned home last night with two victories to their credit, victories, too, in which neither opposing team was able to score single run. In a six-inning contest Warkworth lost to visitor by a score of 20 to 0. The Hastings team, reinforced by Turner, a pitcher from Peterborough, this went up against the winners and his struggle lasted through five frames. Hastings was unable to get a man across the plate and the C.G.E. piled up seven runs. The most and best that can be said of the second game was that the work of the Hastings boys was not as ghastly as the exhibition given by their fellow team in the Northumberland.

The moving spirits in arranging for the field day were Rev. M. L. Hinton, pastor of the Methodist Church and Dr. J. H. Hess, president of the Hastings baseball team. A year ago the programme of sports was utterly spoiled by a down pour of rain. This year the weather was all that could be desired and the attendance both in the afternoon and at the concert in the evening, was gratifying to the promoters. There were disappointments, however, the first of these came when the Indian band of Alderville, advertised as one of the attractions, telephoned about one o'clock to say that it would be impossible for them to keep their engagement.

With a view to finding a substitute to furnish the music Mr. Hinton got in communication with R. T. Cowell, leader of the Campbellford band, asking him to bring the members of his organization to Hastings for the afternoon but Mr. Cowell informed him that it would be impossible to get the musicians together on so short notice.

There was, however, no lack of music, Neil Scriver, a venturesome Hastings youth, who went overseas with the Canadian soldier, but who was too young to get into the fighting line in France, has sometime and somewhere developed a talent for playing the bag pipes and he rendered several stirring selections yesterday on his favorite instrument

Warkworth vs C.G.E.

Manager A. J. Primeau and his champion arrived somewhat late owing to an accident to Mr. Primeau's began, the Peterborough men takbegan, the Peterobrough men taking the field. In the six innings, Warkworth had only 20 men at bat. The team was somewhat weakened by the absence of several of its regular players, but this is not sufficient to account for the slaughter. K. Zufelt, the clever first baseman, was out of the game on account of an injury to his ankle, suffered when he slid into the home plate in the game of Colborne on Tuesday. One of his brothers took his place. Mulhall as a second base, Poole being away and Thompson a new man was at short. Scriver of Hastings' team did the receiving for Warkworth. In the fourth inning there was a general change in the line-up, Inglis relieving Archie Zufelt on the mound, Mulhall going to third, Dick to short Archie Zufelt to second and Thompson to Inglis' corner in left. This shift did not break up the streak of hard luck and the C.G.E. team went on piling up runs as merrily as ever. Frost, the C.G.E. pitcher, had the Northumberland and League batters at his mercy and in the third inning fanned the three men who faced him. The summary of the lop-sided contest, gives some idea of the slaughter. The line-up:

Warkworth—McGregor, c.f.; Sriver, c.; A. Zufelt, p and 2b.; Mulhall, 2b. and 3b; Beatty, r.f., Inglis, l.f. and p.; P. Zufelt, 1b.; Dick, 3b. and s.s.; Thompson, s.s. and l.f.

C.G.E.—Rose, 2b.; McCarney, c.f.; Ross, c.; Dugan, 1b.; Webb, r.f.; Ranger, s.s.; Hall, l.f.; Frost, p.; Jackson, 3b.

Summary—Two base hits—Webb, Frost. Sacrifice hits—Ranger. Struck out—By Zufelt 2, by Inglis 7, by Frost 5. Base on balls—Off Zufelt 3, off Inglis 4, off Frost 0. Hit by pitcher—By Zufelt 1, by Inglis 1. Umpires—Hess and Scriver and Harrington.

| Warkworth.. .. ..000 000—0 | 2 | 8 | |
| C. G. E. .... ....016 139—20 | 10 | 0 | |

Notes of Game.

Frost did not find it necessary to strain his arm striking out Warkworth. He put them across and his team mates were right there after the flies and grounders.

Inglis, who is still in his 'teens, is regarded as a coming pitcher when he gets more practice and is able to control a wicked drop that puzzles so many of the batters. In his first time on the mound yesterday he got two of the Peterborough men and the third died on a roller to first.

Hastings Next.

Hastings then went in to take its drubbing, play being called at the end of the fifth. Frost was as effective as ever and the only players to land on his delivery were Harrington and Hill. Turner, the pitcher brought from Peterborough for the occasion, escaped with six hits off his delivery. Box score:

NEWS OF HASTINGS AND THE DISTRICT

Bakers Object to Outside Competition in Bread—Percy Farmer Dead.

HASTINGS, Aug. 30. — Bread costs the consumer in this village 18 cents a loaf, whether delivered by the local baker or sold in the stores, which receive their supply from Peterborough. A Campbellford baker recently started peddling bread from house to house in Hastings and he cut the price to 16 cents.

The business men of the village and the local baker objected to the competition and urged the Council to impose a license fee upon the outsider. Village Clerk Wilson, who is a recognized authority on municipal law, was asked for an opinion and he stated that he was unable to find anything in the statutes authorizing the Council to impose such a charge. Almost all kinds of foodstuffs, with the exception of bread, are mentioned in the Provincial Act. Mr. Wilson's opinion was that as the Campbellford baker manufactured the product he was selling that he was not subject to a license fee.

Hon. George Gordon, M.P., of Peterborough, is solicitor for Hastings. Reeve Fowlds went to the city to consult him, but Mr. Gordon was away at the time. The Reeve then called up G. A. Payne, of Campbellford, who is also county magistrate, and was informed that no fee could be levied on the Campbellford baker.

The village council will meet on the first Friday of the month, when this matter will be disposed of, an opinion to be secured from Mr. Gordon in the meantime.

THE LATE G. H. SEENEY.

George H. Seeney, a farmer in Percy Township, a short distance from here, died at his home Tuesday morning, aged 65 years. The deceased had been ill for some time with typhoid fever, but the doctor in attendance had hopes of his recovery. While delirious, the late Mr. Seeney evaded his friends and, leaving his bed, prepared to go to work as though in his usual health. He collapsed, however, and soon passed away.

The late Mr. Seeney resided for a number of years on a farm at Rush Point, Belmont township, where he was born. He moved to his late home in Percy about ten years ago, and during that time belonged to the Presbyterian Church in this village.

The deceased is survived by his wife, two sons, Warden and Ray, who reside at home, and two young daughters. One son, William, who went overseas with a Cobourg regiment, lost his life in the Great War. Another son, Elmer Earl died in November of last year. Warden is now seriously ill with typhoid-pneumonia, and Mrs. Russel Warren a neighbor, who went to help the family during the illness of the father, and son, contracted typhoid fever, and is now laid up at the Seeney home. Mrs. Seeney completely lost her sight some time ago.

The funeral was held on Wednesday afternoon, the remains being interred in the Trent Valley Cemetery. Rev. D. A. Thompson, pastor of the Presbyterian church here, conducted the religious services at the home and at the grave.

Tourists from Cleveland.

They made the last 370 miles of their journey, in eleven hours, Frank Hoover, a son of the proprietor, acting as chauffeur.. The party are staying at Sunny Brae, a summer resort near here. It is their first visit to the district, and they are charmed with the country. Their car, one of the largest ever seen here, never fails to attract attention as it passes through the streets, carrying someimes as many as fifteen passengers.

WOULD LIKE TO SHOUT FROM THE HOUSE TOPS

That is how Mr. Hurndall fells about Dreco, the famous health-builder, that gave him the results he had been seeking for years.

Mr. Arthur F. Hurndall, a salesman of Long Branch, Ont., gives all the credit to Dreco for his relief from terrible suffering caused by stomach, kidneys and liver that would not function properly. Here is his story, which he says himself he would like to shout from the top of the tallest building in Toronto, so that people might hear and profit thereby.

"My stomach was out of order. After eating, my food seemed to sour and I would double up with cramps. I had so much gas on my stomach that I would gasp for breath. My liver became sluggish and I was very restless, arising in the morning tired out after a night of tossing around. I had no energy or life to do anything. Catarrh in my nose also troubled me and caused me much discomfort and embarrassment. My blood was impure and I often had pimples. Constipation kept my system in a poisoned condition and I became so run-down that friends commented on my appearance.

"My case was of several years standing, during which I tried almost everything without results, until I heard about Dreco. Have only taken four bottles, but a big improvement is noticeable. I feel like a new man. I can eat anything and digest it without being troubled with cramps or agonizing gas. My system feels clean and I feel and look much healthier. I also sleep like a baby now.

"I am trying to make plain what my troubles were and what Dreco has done for me, for the benefit of other sufferers and only hope that they will give this wonderful medicine an opportunity to help them as it helped me."

Dreco's wonderful corrective and tonic properties come from herbs, roots, bark and leaves. It acts on the stomach and aids digestion, arouses a sluggish liver, strengthens the kidneys, corrects constipation and improves the health generally. Why suffer when this reliable medicine is at your elbow?

Dreco is being specially introduced in Peterboro by Bond's Drug Store. It is also sold in Lakefield by E. H. Northey, and by a good druggist everywhere.

Leanders and Undines Won the Rowing Event.

TORONTO, August 30. Canadian Press. — Leanders and Undines, of Philadelphia, were returned heat winners last night of the senior eight invitation race at the Exhibition regatta, and these crews will meet to-night in the final for the C. N. E. trophy. The former defeated University of Toronto by a length and a half, while Undines beat Argonauts by a length.

Much has been said of the prowess of the Leanders. The true time of the heat was ten seconds slower than Undines times, being 6.07 and 5.56 1-5 respectively, but at no stage were Leanders doing their best, except in the first half mile when they hit up a fast pace and drew away into lead. In the last half mile, the crew rowing in perfect unison, did strike a 36 stride for ten strokes, and then fell back to win while doing only 32.

Lewis and his scale committee of United Mine Workers stayed at Capitol to conduct their deliberations.

COUNTING BALLOTS IS TEDIOUS WORK

Counting Continues To-Day Under Proportional Representation System—Government Given 30 Seats.

DUBLIN, August 30 (Canadian Press). — The Freeman's Journal makes the following tabulation of the latest returns:

Government Party, 30 seats; Republicans, 14 seats; Labour, 8; Farmers, 5; Independent and Business candidates, 11.

Tedious Task.

LONDON, August 30 (Canadian Press). — The tedious task of ascertaining who has been elected to the new Parliament of the Irish Free State has developed into a long drawn out affair.

Under the proportional representation system, the counting and recounting still contiue to-day, but the final reports may not be available until next week.

Most of the returns so far tabulated have been from the cities. The results in the country districts must be made known before it will be possible to draw definite conclusions as to the exact complexion of the new legislative body, but the Government Party, with nearly 30 seats so far, continues to maintain its plurality.

Less than one-third that number are available for the rival congress which the Republicans have threatened to establish for their victorious candidates.

President Wm. T. Cosgrave and other Government leaders have deemed the situation safe enough to leave for Geneva to prepare for Ireland's entrance into the League of Nations.

Before embarking, the President gave to the Daily Mail an outline of his future programme. He said:

"We shall build up our commerce and agriculture as far as it is in our power, and we shall start that hard work our country needs so badly."

Punish Plotters Edict.

The Daily Mail cites the overwhelming majority given the ministers as indicative that popular opinon in Ireland supports the policy of imprisonment for the "Republican" plotters and of corporal punishment for those taken with arms, pointing out that the men responsible for this policy won the largest vote.

The Wentminster Gazette says Mr Cosgrave and his associates have an opportunity of establishing a firm Government in Southern Ireland, and by the justice and efficiency of that regime, of preparing the way for the union of North and South. This, the newspaper says, is inevitable, but will only be possible when it is realised that no man has anything to fear from his neighbours.

The Labour Party, according to most of the English correspondents, has suffered badly because of the split occasioned by the Larkin faction.

RUSSIAN PILGRIMS SHOW RESPECT FOR NICHOLAS

SOFIA, Aug. 30.—(Associated Press).—The anniversary of the death by Bolshevik violence of Czar Nicholas II. and the Russian imperial family was marked recently by an impressive memorial service in the church attached to the Russian Embassy in this city.

Russian pilgrims of all classes of society, from nobles to laborers, filled the beautiful structure, which is a gift from Nicholas II.

Each member of the late imperial family was mentioned by name, the priest referring to "thy servant Nikolai," "thy servant Alexandra Feodorovna," "thy servant Alexei," and so with the princesses, Olga, Tatiana, Maria and Anastasia.

It was a devout audience, to which the act of half a dozen years ago was an event of today.

Pains were taken by the police to exclude all Bolsheviks, for fear they might disturb the services.

Mr. Meharry visited friends on that Line while here, though the family homestead is not now occupied by any one of that name. Mrs. J. E. Roxborough, of Norwood, another member of the Meharry family, was also a visitor in town for the Re-union.

Miss May Mitchell, of Oshawa, Miss K. McCarthy, and Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Burnham, of Peterborough, were guests of Mrs. E. S. Burnham for the Re-union week end.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Oke and family, of Winnipeg, left on Tuesday morning after visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. Pitt for the Re-union week end.

The Presbyterian church in Monaghan, Cavan and Millbrook has had a long and eventful history, the first missionaries coming into this district in 1833, though unfortunately no record has been kept of their labors. Centreville and Millbrook were joined under one pastorate until 1890, during the ministry of Rev. James Cameron, when the separation took place. The first elders were ordained in 1833 by Rev. Mr. Jenkins, their names being: David Armstrong, David Huggins, Jos: Sharp, and James Holmes. Rev. James Douglas, in 1834, was the first minister, his pastoral charge including South Monaghan, Cavan, Port Hope and Cobourg. At that time the congregation here worshipped in a frame church which stood in the cemetery at the top of Dawson's Hill. In 1868 Rev. Mr. Douglas, at the age of seventy-six resigned, passing away the following year after thirty-four years' labor on this charge. He was succeeded by Rev. William Mitchell who was inducted in 1869 and gave six years to the work of the church of this district, being followed by Rev. James Cameron, his induction taking place on February 29th, 1876. The red brick church, which stood north on Tupper street, had been built in the meanwhile, Rev. Mr. Cameron being minister in charge for about fourteen years. This church was burned in the summer of 1896 and the present Grace Presbyterian church was opened the following January. The late Mrs. Hugh Waddell, of Peterborough, laid the corner-stone of this church, and the ministers who preached on the two opening Sundays were Rev. Mr. Paterson, of Cook's Church, and Rev. Mr. Hossack, both of Toronto.

The late Rev. William Johnston was Mr. Cameron's successor, ministering to the congregations here and at Garden Hill, for twenty-two years. Rev. Mr. Bloodsworth came after Mr. Johnston, laboring on this field for three years, Rev. Dr. Lee, now of Thorold, was minister in charge for nearly six years, and the present pastor, Rev. G. S. Gervan, is in the second year of his ministry.

Mr. Taylor, an early resident of Millbrook, was precentor in the first church, and Josiah Ball, a brother of Mr. Reid Ball, followed at a later date. The strong controversy which arose over the purchase of the first organ, in Josiah Ball's time, may still be recalled by those of older years. The pipe-organ in use in the church today is a far call from the tuning-fork, and even the reed organ, the purchase of which caused such a disturbance during Rev. Mr. Cameron's pastorate.

Probably not many residents of Millbrook are aware that before the late Squire Ferguson built the "Molsons' Bank" and residence, combined, on King street, now the Methodist parsonage, that the late Mr. A. Leach added an extension to the east side of the house now occupied by Miss Eagleson, where the Molsons first did business, Mr. Clinch being the manager.

CROP REPORTS

The following is a summary of returns made by the Agricultural Representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:

The recent generous rains will greatly help crop conditions. Corn and roots were much in need of moisture, while pastures were dry, affording insufficient fare for many of the animals grazing on them.

The rain also will be a boon to farmers so far as the cultivation of the soil is concerned. Plowing was almost impossible during August on some clay soils, except with tractors, and it was with the greatest difficulty that land could be got into condition for the sowing of fall wheat. Some farmers have been using three horses on single plows, and a number have been using cultivators on their stubble land instead of cross-plowing.

Halton reports that peas have been an exceptionally good crop this season.

Prescott and Russell: A light touch of frost has ruined large fields of buckwheat on low lands. The frost has also affected some fields of corn, a few fields of late sown oats and garden crops.

Kenora: There is no fall wheat grown in this district, although there has been several settlers stated that they intend giving it a trial, as they see no reason why it should not grow when clover does so well.

Halton: Orchards in general are going into the winter in rather poor condition this year, due to the severe attack of blight. Most of the raspberry plantations are badly attacked with crown gall, mosaic and leaf curl. Sprayed orchards show a more vigorous condition than orchards which were not sprayed.

Northumberland: Apples on lighter soil were showing lack of size until the rains came. A number of dealers are active, but few sales have been made. Everyone is carefully watching the trend of the market.

Much injury was done to the fruit crops in the Niagara district by a recent hail storm, but particulars are not yet to hand.

Grenville: Creameries are finding it hard to hold their patrons, as there is so much difference in price in favor of cheese.

Frontenac says that the milk production had fallen off so low that some factories last week were able to run at only 25 per cent. of their capacity.

Elgin: Beef cattle going to market more than for a number of weeks and the increase in the price of hogs is bringing more to market. Farmers are beginning to understand the grading system, and are endeavoring to improve their stock.

Leeds: Dairy cattle have fallen off considerably in flesh recently, although horses are in very good condition as a rule—there being plenty of hay and roughage. Canners and dairy bulls are being sold at a very low figure; 2c to 3c a lb. being the average price.

Halton: Due to the shortage of help in the spring, farmers did not get sufficient manure out, and they are applying to sod in preparation for fall wheat.

Peel: The labor situation has been helped somewhat during the past week, owing to the fact that we placed six Salvation Army boys and fifteen men. Short-time men are scarce, however.

PETERBORO MAN LOST COUSIN BY DROWNING

Mr. James Skinner Was Bereaved by Sad Accident

The following from a Bennington (Vermont) paper, refers to a cousin of Mr. James Skinner, C.P.R. ticket agent of the C.P.R. here:

The body of the late G. B. Sharpe, aged 46, son of the late Robert Sharpe, of Bennington, and a resident of this village when a boy, arrived here this morning from Detroit. The funeral will be held from the Old Frist (Congregtional) church at Old Bennington at 3.30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, August 14. Burial will be in the family lot at Old Benington cemetery.

Mr. Sharpe, who was one of the foremost advertising men of America and who at the time of his death was advertising manager for the Burrows Adding Machine Company, of Detroit, was drowned at Algonquin, Ontario, Friday morning, August 10, while bathing.

No one was with him at the time of the accident but it is known that he left the hotel early in the morning for a swim in the lake. Some time later two guides entered the water for a similar purpose and discovered the body lying on the bottom of the lake.

Mr. Sharpe had left Detroit a week previous with the intention of remaining in the woods about 200 miles north of Toronto during the remainder of the month. He was an ardent fisherman and had spent his vacations during a number of years in Canada and Maine.

From 1904 to 1907 he was advertising manager of the Studebaker Corporation. For the eleven years following he occupied a similar position with the De Laval Separator Company, of New York. From 1918 until late in 1921 he was advertising manager of the Cleveland Tractor Company, joining the Burroughs company at a later date.

He was president of the Association of National Advertisers, having been elected to that position last November, after serving several years as a Director and Vice-President. He likewise was high in the councils of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the world. He was one of the founders of the New York Advertising Club and one of its early presidents.

Mr. Sharpe was a native of Durham, Canada, whence the family moved to Bennington. The elder Sharpe, who died in 1899, was for a number of years assistant superintendent at Fillmore Farms. The family continued to reside in Bennington after his death and the children attended the Public schools here.

Mrs. G. B. Sharpe and two sons, Robert and Richard, the former an art student in New York, and the latter residing in Detroit, arrived here at noon to-day.

The deceased is also survived by his mother, one sister, Mrs. William M. Darling of Williamstown, and two brothers, H. Harry Sharpe, of Valley Falls, N.Y., and Walter F. Sharpe, of Hartford, Conn.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

BAD BILLY BLINKERS

"If you'll please find Billy for me," begged King Snookums, "I'll certainly be much obliged."

"If all the Pee Wee Landers are home again," said Nick to King Snookums, "I think we'd better be going back to the Fairy Queen's palace."

"Just wait a minute until I see," replied the tiny king.

So he called Mister Codger and asked if all the noses had been counted that day.

"I'll go and see," answered Mister Codger and soon came back with the word that one nose was missing, belonging to Billy Blinkers. "And naturally," he added, "Billy was missing also, for Billy, like most people, had followed his nose."

"If you'll please find Billy for me," begged King Spookums, "I'll certainly be much obliged, for he lives with his Aunt Dinah Duster and she won't give me a minute's peace if he's lost."

"We'll find him," declared Nick. "We'll start right away and look everywhere. Don't worry any more."

King Snookums sighed with relief. Now he could take his afternoon nap in peace!

So off went the Twins to find Billy Blinkers for his Aunt Dinah Duster.

As Pee Wee Landers are tiny, even when grown up, Pee Wee boys are still tinier. And Billy was small for his age. So he was likely to be most anywhere at all.

"I'm sure he hasn't left Pee Wee Land," said Mrs. Spider, who lived in a large web stretched between two burdock leaves. "I've watched every fly and bug that left Pee Wee Land today and not one of them had a passenger on his back."

"Then we'll look for him right here," stated Nancy.

But Billy Blinkers wasn't anywhere, it seemed. They looked down every ant hill and behind every stone and under all the grass tangles and toad stools. But no Billy!

"Oh, dear," cried his Aunt Dinah Duster, wiping her eyes on her apron, "If Billy would only come back, I wouldn't make him wipe his feet, or wash his neck with a scratchy cloth, or wear his shoes and stockings or anything."

"Honest?" came Billy's voice suddenly as if from the sky.

And there was Mister Billy grinning down at them from a dandelion puff where he had been hiding all the time.

I think he needed a good smacking, don't you?

FOOD CRISIS CAUSED BY BAD DISTRIBUTION THROUGH GERMANY

Riots in Cities and Threats of Communists Have Discouraged Farmers — Dealers Unwilling to Accept Paper Marks.

ECONOMIC CRISIS.

HAMBURG, Aug 29.—Germany's collapsing currency and the resultant food shortages are producing a situation wholly unlike that in Russia two years ago when the ruble first descended to the point where one dollar purchased a million rubles.

Russians were in the throes of a famine caused by drought in the wheat-raising districts. And their railway system was in need of repair and utterly disorganized by labor troubles and sabotage.

Millions of persons were actually starving. Many of them were in flight from the burned-out districts, most of these without the means of buying food even where it was available.

In Germany to-day the dislocated population is not large and the families which have been deported from the Ruhr are for the most part provided with some paper money by the government.

The Russian government, just previous to the decline of the ruble to the million point, had changed its economic policy and discontinued the plan whereby it had sought to prove money utterly worthless and useless by promising workmen actual food and clothing and rent and light and heat in exchange for their work. Consequently Russians suddenly found themselves without food rations and without money as well, as unemployment as widespread.

Plenty of Food

The food troubles in Germany are largely the result of imperfect distribution. There is food in Germany, but the economic crisis and the unwillingness of dealers to sell it for paper money which descends in value by leaps and bounds are holding the food out of the market. Food riots in cities and threats of confiscation by Communists have discouraged the farmers and market-gardeners from carrying their products to centers liable to disorder.

It is the old problem of the city against the country, the peasant against the industrial laborer. The farmers are in better condition in Germany than any other class, and they are holding their products for payment in something more stable than paper marks. They are engaging in barter and exchange, as is common now in Russia. Dealers are particularly unwilling to let go of any products which are imported, as they cannot raise sufficient gold to replace them. Unless they are paid in gold or its equivalent wholesalers and retailers alike prefer to hold their rice and coffee and other staple food products which are imported.

Coffee Substitute

But Germany is accustomed to going without real coffee. Even the small vegetable gardens about Berlin nearly all raise a small patch of rye, which is roasted and made into a coffee substitute for the family which must save every possible mark. It is potatoes which, after bread, are the most important article of diet with the average German family. The lateness of the season and the excessive rainfall have contributed to the potato shortage which is becoming very acute and raising much disturbance.

Women who cannot buy potatoes in the markets are in despair. That represents a loss of the foundation of the average German family's meal. Meat prices have long been prohibitive for families in modest circumstances. But until recently potatoes were within each. Butter, butter substitutes and all sorts of fats are also extremely scarce in the public markets and are held at a price beyond most purses. But practically all sorts of foodstuffs are available in Germany if the purchaser is willing to meet the terms of the dealer, and there is adequate transportation to handle them. Distribution is unsatisfactory because of the crash in the currency and threatened political troubles.

SPAIN IS WORRIED OVER ITS PRINCES.

Prospective Successors to Throne Are Sickly — Difficulties Face the Country.

By JOHN DE GANDT.

HENDAYE, France, Aug. 30.—(United Press).—Will Spain become a republic some day because of shortage of kings?

This is a question about which few people in Spain dare talk, that fewer dare believe, and that the newspapers avoid for several reasons, such as lack of information, censorship, etc.

However, the truth is that, although the present King of Spain is not ill, his first son, the Infante Alfonso, Prince of the Asturies and heir to the throne, who was born in Madrid on May 10, 1907, is in very poor health and may not live as long as his father.

The news has leaked out, little by little. It is known that the Prince is suffering from a malady of the spine, which prevents him from walking, except with a crutch under each arm, his body almost bent double.

A pathetic incident occurred recently, when the royal family decided to leave Madrid to go to the north of Spain, where it has summer residences on the seaside, at San Sebastian and Santander. Prince Alfonso was in condition to make the trip by railroad, but what would the crowds say and think when they see him, crippled; he, their future king? How embarrassing it would be for him and others attending the offfcial ceremonies in places where the train stops. On the other hand, it was so terribly hot in Madrid that he could not stay there, and his parents would not leave him alone. Wherefore, the King decided to take his son to Santander, which is about four hundred miles northwest of Madrid by automobile

One morning at 5 o'clock a huge torpedo car left the royal palace. It was driven by the King himself, and carried the Prince, a doctor and the chauffeur. After dashing through the towns of Castille and Navarre, the car reached the Miramar palace of Santander at noon. Prince Alfonso, almost covered with blankets, had passed unnoticed everywhere in the clouds of dust. The King came back to Madrid the next day, and a week later returned to Santander with the rest of his family.

Of course, what the Spanish papers said about the trip to Santander was that the King went with the Prince.

The situation would not be critical if the other sons of the royal family were in better health, but it is known too they are not well. The second, Don Jaime, who is now 15, stammers and suffers from hereditary deafness, for which he receives care from an American doctor.

Don Juan Carlos, 10 years old, although his condition is not as serious as the other two, is weak and does not grow properly for his age.

It is easy then to understand the anxiety in official circles on account of the health of the possible successors to the throne, especially should King Alfonso not survive long. It is not surprising, either, that those who know the inside are wondering what will be the outcome and what further difficulties may arise when Spain loses its present ruler.

Western Farmers to Shoot Wild Ducks.

OTTAWA, Aug. 30.—(Canadian Press).—An effort is being made to guard against a repetition of conditions last year in the Province of Saskatchewan, when, it is stated, serious injury was caused to the agricultural interests by wild ducks eating grain in the fields. Regulations which give power to the Minister of the Interior to issue general permits covering the provinces of Manitoba, Alberta and Saskatchewan, allowing owners to shoot these birds which are found causing injury to the crop, have been passed. The birds must not be sold, or shot at outside the area which is seriously affected by them.

The Million Dollar Doll

By C. N. and A. M. Williamson

Authors of "The Lightning Conductor"

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY

Teresa Desmond (Terry), lovely and unbelievably innocent, has left her father.

Terrence Desmond, a selfish, unreliable man, the proprietor of the Blue Moon, a road-house, and has gone to

Juliet Divine, her beautiful half-sister—known as the Million Dollar Doll—whose sketchy career is unknown to Terry. No one knows of the girls' relationship and 'Julia' is careful to keep Terry, who is an exquisite counterpart of herself hidden from her (Julia's) fiance.

Eustace Nazlo, is a wealthy Greek whose unwelcome advances caused Terry to run away from her father.

Miles Sheridan, Terry's 'Dream Prince,' furnished the money for her convent education when she was a child, partly to atone for a past rudeness of

Hartley Phillips, acting as Sheridans' medium, has offered Julia twenty thousand dollars to take a yacht trip with Sheridan in order to facilitate Betty's obtaining a divorce. Unable to go herself, Julia persuades Terry to go in her place, posing as the Million Dollar Doll. Terry does this because of her desire to repay 'the Prince' for his generosity.

Julia marries her South American and goes away while Terry waits impatiently for the cruise when she will see her 'Prince' again.

Suspicious of Julia's long silence, Phillips calls at her apartment and Terry, assuming her new role, informs him that she finds him coarse.

Much amused, Phillips leaves Julia's flat and has an encounter with Betty Sheridan.

CHAPTER XXIII

Of the "Silverwood" and a Black Look

Mrs. Sheridan smiled, and bowed to Phillips, with a showing of dimples and a gay, short little nod which she cultivated; then the traffic was allowed to move, and the big, dark green car and the small purple one lost sight of each other.

"Even that minx, Juliet Divine, is better than Betty Sheridan," Hartley Phillips thought.

"He looks as if he could bite—hateful old brute" Betty said to herself. And she wondered if Phillips had had any hand in arranging the yachting trip, about which Miles had written her a curt note.

He had said, "I am going away for a cruise in the Mediterranean. I shall have a companion. You will hear details later, and can act according to your judgment."

No more than that: but enough had passed between them before they parted completely, for her to be sure that the companion would be a woman.

She rather wondered what woman Just idle curiosity, of course; not jealousy at all. Most likely it would be someone well known. It would be fun to hear what people would say when the story was sprung on them.

Betty could hardly wait for that to happen, because then her chance to live, really to live, would come. She felt very happy and interested in life, and entirely indifferent to Hartley Phillips' silly waves of hatred.

Phillips had business in Washington that night and the next day. Possibly he would have no chance for another private talk with Miles Sheridan before the yacht steamed away on her cruise of adventure. But he scrawled a few lines and sent the boy messenger to Sheridan's studio.

"I went up to the Ardlamont and managed to see J.D. She is all right, fortunately, and I'm to take her on board about eleven day after tomorrow. I meant to break to her a few details of your iron programme for the trip, but couldn't get them out, somehow.

"She was in rather a jumpy mood, and I thought it would be safer to let her realize everything after she'd started than before. It's perfectly fair, and all she wants is the money.

"Her latest dodge is to play the ingenue. She plays it well, but didn't impose on me, and I don't expect it will on you. Yours, H.P."

"Well, here we are," announced Phillips, as the taxi stopped at a Brooklyn pier. He got out, and offered Terry a hand, but she did not see it. She was looking at the yacht which was to be her floating home for two months—with Miles Sheridan.

She had seen plenty of small yachts passing in the distance when she played in front of the Blue Moon; as a little girl, but this one was of noble proportions, painted white, and her lines were full of dignity and grace.

Her brass glittered as if she had been newly polished from stem to stern, and smoke was curling lazily from her funnel. Terry wondered if Miles Sheridan had come on board. Perhaps he would appear to greet his friend, and be introduced by Phillips to his yachting companion.

A smart young man dressed as a sailor received the new arrivals at the top of the gang-plank, saluting Phillips as if he recognized and expected him. Phillips spoke of "Miss Divine's baggage" and was assured that it would be attended to.

Terry stood still for a moment, admiring the whiteness of the deck under its wooden roof and glancing at a few sailors who seemed immensely busy about something she didn't understand. She wished that Mr. Phillips would mention the absentee, but he did not.

"I'll take you below," he offered, "and we'll find Mrs. Harkness. She'll look after you while you're on board, and I think you'll find her efficient in most ways—though probably you'll have to do your own hair. I'm afraid Mrs. Harkness' skill won't run to that."

"I've always done my own hair," Terry calmly exclaimed.

Phillips looked surprised. "So much the better. It seems you can be useful as well as ornamental In that case Mrs. Harkness will be equal to most emergencies.

"She used to be Sheridan's nurse when he was a small boy, and was pensioned off by his guardians when he outgrew her, till a few years ago when he bought this yacht and called on her services again in a different way.

There was a room, fitted up like a drawing-room, on a level with the deck, and Terry's heart jumped as she recognized several old pieces of furniture, pictures and mirrors from Silverwood, the dear place of her first memories. She would have liked to stop and examine them, but Phillips seemed anxious to finish off his duties as cicerone.

As he guided her down the companion-way she had a glimpse of the dining-saloon. There were flowers on a round table that glittered with glass and silver, and Terry had a faint sense of suffocation as she thought of herself sitting there with him.

Excitement grew within her, and mounted to her head like wine. Julia had said that Sheridan "wouldn't trouble" her, and that she wouldn't see much of him, but of course they'd have their meals together.

"Mrs. Harkness" Phillips called; and then more loudly—"Mrs. Harkness"

For a moment he and Terry stood in a white corridor which the girl had not learned to call a gangway; then a short, squarely-built old woman dressed in dark blue with a white cap and apron, came round a corner aft

"Here's Miss Divine," Phillips said in a distinct tone, as if for years slightly deaf. "You've been told to expect her and have her cabin ready of course?"

"Yes, sir," replied the woman, with a suspicion of Irish brogue, and looked straight at Terry with a stern, disconcerting look.

She had very black brows, which almost met in a straight line across a broad nose, and a thick stubble of black lashes out of which blazed light brown eyes. White streaked with black was pulled tightly back from a low, rather narrow forehead, and crowned with an old-fashioned mob cap.

She had a firm jaw; and the mouth, with its long upper lip, was shut like a trap as she gazed at the smartly dressed girl in navy blue serge.

No Clearance Papers For Smaller Vessels.

OTTAWA, Aug. 30.—(Canadian Press).—Hon. Jacques Bureau stated last night that an order had been issued directing that no clearance papers should be issued to vessels under 250 tons, which are carrying liquor to a foreign port. This order applies only to liquor in bond, the minister added, as the department of customs has no control over duty paid liquors.

It is understood that the purpose of this order is to fix a standard of vessels to which clearance papers may be granted. In the past, it is stated, very small boats, even row boats have taken out papers for the transport of liquor to ports to which it would be impossible for them to navigate.

The order is expected to put an end to this practice, and to limit the issue of clearance papers to vessels capable of making a bona fide voyage.

Italy Has Forwarded Ultimatum to Greece.

ATHENS, Aug. 30. — (Canadian Press). — The Italian Government has demanded from Greece an answer within 24 hours to a note handed the Greek Government last night, declaring that Greece shall pay indemnity of 50,000,000 lire, salute the Italian fleet and punish the Greeks responsible for killing the five Italian members of the Greco-Italian frontier delimitation mission.

Premier Gonatas told the newspapermen that while all the demands of the Italian Government were not acceptable, some of them would be agreed to and that the Greek Government would ask modification of the others. The Premier added that the Government would make reply to the Italians within the time limit set by them.

Canvassers Start Big Drive For Wheat Pool.

REGINA, Sask., August 30 (Canadian Press). — Thousands of canvassers started out yesterday on the drive to secure contracts from the farmers of the Province to deliver their wheat over a five-year period to the Saskatchewan Co-operative Wheat Producers, Limited.

The provisional estimate of 12,332,000 acres sown to wheat in Saskatchewan this year, issued by the Provincial Department of Agriculture, is being given as the basis for the calculation of the 50 per cent required to be covered by contracts.

Therefore, unless 6,166,000 acres are covered by contracts signed between now and 12th September, when the drive closes, the pool project will be abandoned.

LABOR DEPT. WILL LODGE AN APPEAL

The Dominion Department Will Appeal From the Decision of Justice Orde in the Toronto Hydro Dispute.

OTTAWA, August 30. — Canadian Press. — It is understood that the Dominion Department of Labor will appeal from the decision of Mr. Justice Orde, granting a temporary injunction against the board of inquiry in the dispute between the Toronto Hydro commission and its electrical employees. In the meantime the Minister of Labor intimated that the Board of Investigation will go ahead with the inquiry upon a voluntary basis.

When his attention was called to the decision of Justice Orde after council last night, Hon. James Murdock stated that he had been in communication with Lewis Duncan, who acted for the Dominion government, and that he understood that the decision of the court left the board still free to go ahead with its investigation so long as it did not enter upon the premises of the Hydro commission or issue summonses for witnesses. The Board, he said, had no desire to enter upon the premises of the commission and the number of cases under the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, in which summonses had been issued for witnesses in the past could be counted on the fingers of one hand. There was nothing therefore to prevent the board from following the procedure that was usual in such cases, and this course it was expected to take, presenting its report to the minister upon the conclusion of its inquiry.

The question of an appeal, Mr. Murdock added, had not been finally decided and would not likely be decided until the text of the judgment was received. While not making a definite announcement, however, the Minister gave the impression that an appeal was very probable.

SERIOUS BLOW TO THE SMUTS GOVT.

Independent Candidate Was Elected in South Africa By a Large Majority.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa, Aug. 30.—(Canadian Press Cable). — A parliamentary by-election in Turffontein resulted in the election of Major Hunt, independent, over J. Nourse, ministerialist candidate. Hunt's vote was 1,537 and Nourse 617.

Major Hunt was the previous representative of the constituency of Turffontein as a member of the government party but owing to disagreement with the government's financial policy he broke away from the party in power and resigned his seat in the South African parliament which however he has just contested again. this time as an independent.

Hunt had the support of the Labor party and the nationalists in the by-election. The size of his majority is regarded as a blow to the Smuts government.

Harvest Is Finished in Brandon District.

BRANDON, Man., August 30 (Canadian Press). — With the exception of a few odd patches of oats and some flax which is not yet ready for the harvest, the cutting of grain in this district has finished, and threshing will be general by Thursday (to-day).

Threshing is now general in the Douglas district, although the heavy showers in the Douglas-Carberry areas somewhat delayed operations on Tuesday.

The wheat in the Douglas district is turning out better than was expected on some farms.

The grade is No. 3 or 4 Northern, and the yield from 10 to 21 bushels per acre.

Weather in other parts of Brandon district has been ideal, and good progress is being made with the harvest.

A THOUGHT.

When he giveth quietness, who then can make trouble? and when he hideth his face, who then can behold him?—Job 34:29.

Nothing can bring you peace but yourself. Nothing can bring you peace but the triumph of principles. —Emerson.

Your Health

By DR. CLIFFORD C. ROBINSON

WATCH YOUR WEIGHT

Do you eat to live or live to eat Henry Ward Beecher once said that many people were digging their graves with their teeth. This is another way of saying that too many people bite off more than they can properly chew. That's where the weight trouble begins.

If your baby begins life weighing eight pounds, the average healthy gain should be about four ounces a week. At one year the baby should weigh 24 or 25 pounds. Through childhood the normal gain depends on proper food, freedom from disease, environment and natural adaptation to the type one represents, heavy, athletic or slender.

Five Pounds an Inch

At the age of 15, an average boy, five feet in height, should weigh about 105 pounds; a girl about the same or slightly more. At the age of 30 when full maturity is reached in most cases, the gain in weight should cease. At this time a man five feet nine inches in height should weigh about 160 pounds: a woman five feet five inches, the ideal stature about 135 pounds. These weights are without clothing. For each addition al inch in height you are allowed about five pounds increase in weight.

It is quite generally recognized by physicians that many people inherit certain tendencies in stature and weight. But you can regulate your weight, in spite of inheritance, by systematic exercise and careful eating. You must do it the same way you do your work. It must be done every day and all the time. "Rise from the table with an appetite and you will never sit down without one."

A Health Barometer

Do not allow yourself to accumulate a lot of useless fat cells. Prevention, in this case, is worth more than a pound of cure. Weight is a kind of health barometer, and a reliable one, at that. If you are 10 pounds over weight at 35, don't worry or attempt any reducing, except under a physician's care. Any attempt at rapid reduction by steam baths, massage, or drugs, is dangerous. You, too, may fade away.

The great, vital issue in this food and weight business is how to convey to the millions of people, who sorely need it, the real knowledge which they should possess for a healthful and sufficient daily dietary.

I thoroughly believe that this should be furnished them in some clearly tabulated or charted form by state and local health boards, and posted conspicuously in all food shops. These charts should show the relative energy and weight values together with the cost of the foods which are health giving, and can commonly be used to the best advantage in the ordinary family.

Europe Faced By Employment Problem.

LONDON, Aug. 30.—(Canadian Press Cable).—Nevill Chamberlain in an interview on the occasion of his assuming his new duties as chancellor of the exchequer, said the task before the government was to bring about a return to more normal conditions of employment. This problem was irrevocably bound up with the European situation, he said. He hoped it might be possible to find means of working harmoniously with France, Italy and Belgium to obtain a final settlement both of the reparations question and the interallied debts.

The cabinet was giving constant thought to the question of finding employment for the unemployed, the chancellor said, he thought the housing shortag would right itself in due time. Private enterprise was reviving and large numbers of houses were being constructed.

JOINT CONFERENCE ON CANAL PROJECT

Formal Steps Are Being Taken For a Conference on the St. Lawrence Waterway Scheme.

DULUTH, Minn., Aug. 30.—(Canadian Press.)— Formal steps for a joint conference between the United States and Canada to consider a proposed treaty between the two nations relative to the canalization of the St. Lawrnce river and the opening of a waterway to the sea will be taken by the Dominion government, before December, in the opinion of Charles P. Craig, executive of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Tidewater Association.

"The situation across the border is clearing up," said Mr. Craig, "and indications are that President Harding's invitation to Canada to appoint a commission for the purpose of considering a point treaty between the two nations will be formally acted upon within the next two or three months."

CHOLERA INFANTUM

A FATAL DISEASE OF CHILDREN

Cholera Infantum or summer complaint of children is one of the most dangerous bowel complaints during the summer months.

It begins with a profuse diarrhoea, the stomach becomes irritated, very often accompanied by vomiting and purging and the matter excreted from the stomach has a bilious appearance. The child rapidly loses flesh, is soon reduced to languor and prostration, and in a great many cases death ensues.

Mothers, if any of your children become sick with cholera infantum do not endanger their health, perhaps their life, by experimenting with some new and untried remedy; get one that has stood the test of time; one that will quickly offset the vomiting, purging and the diarrhoea. This you will find in Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, a remedy that has been on the market for the past 78 years.

Mrs. W. A. Harrison, 10 Elevator Court, Halifax, N.S., writes:—"Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry saved the lives of three of my children when all other remedies failed. It stopped the vomiting and terrible diarrhoea with which they were troubled. I always keep a bottle of it on hand in case of emergency."

"Dr. Fowler's" is 50c. a bottle; put up only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

BELLEVILLE WIN SECOND BATTLE IN LEAGUE FINAL

Beat Oshawa 6 to 5 Yesterday in Exciting See-Saw Game at Belleville, Winning in Ninth.

DAINTY PITCHED.

BELLEVILLE, Aug. 30.—Finishing strong as they always do the Grand Trunks in a ninth inning rally broke a 5-5 tie and nosed Manager Schultz's Oshawa nine out of the winning ranks at the Exhibition Park here this afternoon. The final score was 6-5.

While the baseball was not gilt-edged there were snappy spasms and havy clean clouting was a feature.

Manager Walt Gerow sent "lefty" Jack Williams after "Duke" Dainty, a visitors' port sider, and it was a fight from the drop of the hat.

It was hard to choose, who was master of the situation.

Williams had the edge however, if there was an edge. He fanned 8 to the Duke's 7, and issued no passes

Dainty passed three and the Trunks nicked him for 9 safeties, one of which was a 3-bagger by Hagerman in the sixth frame with two on. Oshawa got seven safeties and had 4 errors to Belleville's 6.

Oshawa drew first blood in the second, when Wilson hit a bad bounder to Weir and Dainty went over. The Trunks came back with a pair in the third. Weir walked in the third and Ross sod burner, got through Rewden, both scoring while the Oshawa outfielders juggled the ball in a manner which must have made their handiul of fans seasick.

The automotive crew evened matters up in the 5th however. Two lovely clouts by Jacobi and Rowden tieing the score.

Each tallied a pair in the 6th when Hagerman busted out a three-bagger with two on for the homesters and singles by Roddick and R. Fair together with Wilson's sacrifice hit plus an error thrown in sent Oshawa's pair across.

Oshawa came back for another one in the lucky seventh, but the Trunks tied it again in the eighth, and won the ball game in the last session with three clean cut singles by Weir, Ross and Harry Mills.

Oshawa outfielders worked like demons and proved their worth. Dainty was there and the blame for the loss of the game should not go to him. The infielders are the weak sisters on the Oshawa team. Trunks were loose in places also and had to again fight the horse shoe tendencies which seemed to insist upon following the motor town nine.

Fans to the number of nearly three thousand from all parts of the country, attended the game, and cheered vehemently during the two hours and ten minutes of play. The line up in batting order:

Trunks — Weir 2b, lf; Ros cf; Brownscombe ss; W. Mills lf, rf; H. Mills 1b; Meagher 2b; J. K. Williams 3b; Casey and Mills rf; Hagerman c; J. H. Wiliams p.

East Peterboro Champs No Match For Durham Title-Holders, Who Grab Off Hollow Victory By 22-7.

A LOOSE EXHIBITION.

The Bethany team, winners of the East Durham League made a light lunch of the Cognawagas, the East Peterboro League champions, in the first game of their first round O.B.A.A. intermediate series at Riverside Park yesterday. The Durham crew won practically as they pleased by 22 to 7, every man in the line-up having at least one run and one hit. After the third inning when the visitors after being blanked in the first two frames scored six runs the only question was as to the size of the final score.

The Cogs fielded miserably behind Vannest and as the Bethany outfit were swinging their clubs to good effect there was never any doubt as to the result after that disastrous inning. Barring a tendency to be wild, Charlie Staples, the Bethany left-hander pitched excellent ball, holding Cognawaga to six well scattered singles and striking out thirteen. Vannest the local pitcher was bit hard but many the safeties came after the side should have been retired, his infield displaying little trace of the form they exhiibted in their own league.

BRIGHTON PLAYS COLBORNE NINE

Five Games to Decide the Supremacy — Exhibition Game Between Campbellford and C.G.E.

CAMPBELLFORD, August 30.—Brighton and Colborne will play a series of five games, home and home, beginning on Monday and on every Wednesday thereafter until the question of supremacy is completed.

It is likely that both teams will be strengthened by recruits taken from other clubs in the league.

Archie Zufelt, pitcher, K. Zufelt, first baseman, and Mulhall, shortstop for Warkworth, will play with Colborne.

An exhibition game between Campbellford and the C.G.E., champions of Peterborough, will likely be arranged, as it is believed that the former could, in a measure at least, restore to the Northumberland League the reputation that was lost when Warkworth and Hastings crumpled before the Peterborough nine at Hastings on Wednesday.

HERE AND THERE IN SPORT

The Lakeviews deserve every credit for their win in Kingston yesterday, making it two straight from the Circle Six nine. Some scandalmonger in the Limestone City has started the rumor that the Lakeviews are not a regular team, but an all-star gathering from the whole Junior League here. For the sake of local sport, such statements should meet an instant and emphatic denial, for they not only cast unwarranted discredit on a good team, but also reflect on the running of the local city leagues. Kingston papers publishing such tommy-rot should be the first to deny it.

Belleville has protested the Oshawa game of last Saturday on the grounds that Dainty is not eligible under the residence rule, and according to the Belleville Intelligencer, they were advised to do so by M. B. Dulmage, Secretary of the O.B.A.A. If Mr. Dulmage was aware that Dainty was not eligible he should have notified the Central League officials at the commencement of the season. Withholding this information until the dying days of the season is bound to create a great deal of ill-feeling and the league is sure to suffer as a result.—Port Hope Guide.

The visit of the New York Americans to Toronto left an unpleasant impression among the fans, which even the energetic, all-round good work of Babe Ruth failed to dispel. Their indolent methods on the field and their apparent lack of interest in the game naturally made the spectators sore and there were several outbursts in the stands when some particularly poor play was made by a team that is sure to be in the final of the world's series. The Yankees outclass all the other teams in the American League and have 100 points lead in the percentage column today, yet they performed at the Island like a lot of bush leaguers. There was one notable exception—Babe Ruth hit a homer and gave the best he had all the time.—Toronto Star.

PETERBORO LAKEVIEWS W'ON FROM KINGSTON

Hammered the Offerings of Two Pitchers Hard and Piled Up Score of 10-4.

KINGSTON, Ont., August 30 (Special to The Examiner). — Playing far superior baseball in every department than the locals, Peterborough Lakeviews easily defeated Circle Six in the Junior O.B.A.A. game here last evening by the score of 10 to 4.

The victors hammered the offerings of the pitchers hard, and in all-round play they were much the better.

Lakeviews started the ball rolling in the first inning, when with three men on, Collins lifted a mighty home run to right.

Kingston came back strong in the first when two hits and a couple of errors sent in a couple of tallies

In the second Kingston scored another run on two hits and an error.

The Petes scored one in the third when two errors and a sacrifice sent in a counter.

In the sixth two walks, two stolen bases, two errors, and a sacrifice scored three more.

Another was added in the eighth on hits by L. Lebarr and Moore, while the last came in the ninth on a hit and two errors.

Kingston scored their final run in the seventh on a walk and a hit.

In the ninth they threw a scare into the Petes when three men walked, but Whitehouse showed his cunning by retiring the side.

The Petes' pitcher twirled a great game, and really deserved his win. In only three innings was he in any danger. He was brilliantly supported at times, Cameron especially featuring.

The umpiring was the worst of the year, with Kay being "razzed" throughout the whole game. His calling of balls and strikes was very displeasing to the crowds, and they kept hooting him throughout.

Kingston fielders played very loosely, and were lucky to get their four runs.

Oxford-Cambridge Team Defeated By One Goal.

ST. CATHARINES, Aug. 30. Canadian Press. — The Oxford-Cambridge touring lacrosse team, was defeated here yesterday afternoon on the close score of 12 to 11 by the St. Catharines senior O.A.L.A. team, the last quarter being of the hair-raising variety. At three-quarter time the score was 8-8. The home team, which had led up in the first quarter after gaining a three goal lead, but up their best effort in the final period in which the score was tied three times. Red Miller scored the 23rd and winning goal one minute before the final whistle. Pearson of the visitors provided the sensation of the game by intercepting a pass in front of his own goal, running the full length of the field, rounding every player that came in his path, and scoring on a one handed shot.

Heavy Rain Interferes With Firpo's Training.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J., August 30 (Canadian Press). — A cold, driving rain, falling throughout the early part of yesterday, compelled Luis Angel Firpo to pass up his daily workout in preparation for his title match with Jack Dempsey in New York on 14th September.

The South American champion started out for his regular jaunt along the beach and board walk at seven o'clock yesterday morning, and had walked briskly for about a mile when rain began falling.

He returned to his cottage in Chelsea and let loose for a while on the heavy sand bag that is suspended in the garage, then pulled the weights.

Intermediate Games For the Week-End.

The deciding game in the Kingston-Preston Intermediate O.B.A.A. series will be played at Napanee this afternoon with J. J. Solomon of Peterboro scheduled to do the umpiring.

Tweed and Trenton will clash tomorrow at Trenton for the second of their home and home games. Tweed is now one game to the good having won at home yesterday.

The Cognawagas will meet Bethany on Saturday afternoon for the second game of their series. Bethany now holds a good edge by virtue of yesterday's decisive victory at Riverside Park. The winners of this series will play off with the C.G.E.

FAST GIRLS' GAME.

The Colonials defeated the Woollens 11 to 7 in a fast girls game at Central Park last evening. The game was close and hard fought from start to finish and provided a brand of ball that was well worth watching.

The C.G.E. and Tigers are scheduled to play this evening and the Woollen and Quakers tomorrow.

A change was made this week in the time for the game to start. In the past the games have got under way at 6.30 but the shortness of the evenings has made it necessary to start them a little earlier and the management of the league has ordered all games to start at 6.15.

THREE SCHOONERS IN TO-DAY'S RACE

Thirty-One Mile Course To Be Covered in the Lipton Cup Race.

GLOUCESTER, August 30 (Canadian Press). — Three fast fishing schooners, the pick of the United States fleet ,started out this morning in the open fisherman's race for the Lipton and Prentiss Cups, postponed from Monday because of fog.

The fourth entry in the race, Mayflower, was unable to compete.

Henry Ford, of Gloucester, Captain Clayton Morrisey, Elizabeth Howard of New York, Captain Pn. Pine, and Shamrock of Boston, Captain Marty Walsh, were the schooners to dispute the speed honours of the fishing fleet.

The thirty-one-mile course is a five-mile stretch from a line off Eastern Point, thence around a triangle seven miles on a side, and five miles to the finish buoy.

The Shamrock was the first to cross the line, followed by Ford and the Howard in that order.

Official starting times were:

LAID WREATH

England Plays.

On the other hand, as pictured by the visitor, England is pursuing a different, and perhaps, a characteristic policy.

"If it were any other country than England, populated by Englishmen, it would have been into a war long ago."

"Public sentiment in England seems to be pretty equally divided over the Ruhr situation. However, recent developments, and, in particular, the assertions made by Poincare in his Sunday address at Petitcoteret, seem to have implanted in a certain portion of the public mind a suspicion of German good faith." In the meantime, the whole vexed question, and the United States' possible intervention, which is still an uncertain quantity in the mind of the average Englishman, is being thrashed out on the cricket field and the golf course, for, true to her traditional habit, England plays.

"Not on Saturday afternoons nor on holidays alone, when you might expect it, but on every afternoon, and everywhere you go, you will find them playing cricket, tennis and golf," said Lt.-Col. Ackerman.

The unemployment condition seems to be bettering itself gradually, and the visitor was much impressed by the amount of building operations going on in the principal London thoroughfares, as well as in connection with the housing scheme. Trade conditions were not promising in their outlook, remaining in the uncertain condition in which everything seems to be just at present in Europe, and depending on the final outcome of the tangle in European international affairs. There was plenty of talk of emigration, to Canada and Australia both.

League of Nations.

The idea of the League of Nations seems to have gained a strong hold on the imaginations of the British people, who look upon it as a sort of ultimate panacea for the European trouble. They believe that if France, which is evidently pursuing a policy of "safety first," could be made to see that it is not entirely an idealist's dream, and if the United States could be persuaded to take a more active interest in its workings, that much might be done toward bringing about a general world peace.

Lt.-Col. Ackerman, before his departure from Canada, was informed by Sir Robert Borden of measures which are about to be taken in Canada to organize societies somewhat along the line of the Canadian clubs, to bring to general attention the aims and objects of the League, and in London, he also heard from Mr. Henry Baker, first secretary to Lord Robert Cecil, of plans which are in process of construction with regard to it.

ODDITIES IN NEWS

BOSSES.

We seem not to be in the toils of "Big Business" as much as we imagine. Joseph W. Roe, president of Society of Industrial Engineers, studies the last census and finds that, of the 290,105 manufacturing establishments in our country, only 1,012 employ more than 1,000 wage earners apiece. And 235,884 manufacturers employ fewer than 20 apiece.

Half of the Americans engaged in manufacturing are employed by concerns with from 20 to 500 on the pay-roll.

Our most dangerous near-monopolies are in distribution, not production.

COOLIDGE.

President Coolidge is a football fan, an all-round gridiron expert, and has been since he was a senior at Amherst in 1894. Parke Davis of Princeton furnishes the information.

Football includes the entire science of warfare. Napoleon and Foch were, in effect, quarterbacks. A brain trained in football strategy has an advantage on the battlefield—and in that milder form of warfare.

GUM.

Americans spend a million dollars a week for gum, according to a trade report by National City Bank.

This is a very conservative estimate, we are told by the janitor of a movie theatre who has to scrape gum wads from their parking places underneath the seats.

However, it is good news for dentists and doctors.

Look who's here. Our old friend "Red" Newman, the famous character comedian with a bunch of new hits from the London Music halls. "Red's" latest triumphs are "The Stoker," "Ar, you working" "Old King Tut," and many others. He will appear at the Grand with the Originals in "Rapid Fire" on Monday and Tuesday, Sept. 3 (Labor Day), and 4th.

AT THE ROYAL.

Bertha M. Clay Story Lives in Picture Form Novel Faithfully transferred to Screen at Royal to-night.

The Bertha M. Clay story, over which every reader of fiction must have cried and laughed at some time in his or her career, has been visualized as a Preferred Picture by Gasnir, who had the added advantage of a cast that might be equaled but certainly could not be excelled.

The work of every member of the cast already is familiar to theatre goers here. But it seldom has been the privilege of any of the company to have roles such as are offered them in this unusual story. The principal parts are played by Estelle Taylor, Kenneth Harlan, Edith Dobcerts, Arthur Hull, Carl Stockdale and Evelyn Selbie.

In addition to the intense heart interest supplied by the plot, the artistic effort that is exhibited in the direction, "Thorns and Orange Blossoms" profits by some of the most beautiful photographs ever thrown upon the screen. Karl Struss well known as the winner of numerous prizes at photographic art exhibits in years past, certainly has brought all of his cunning to the screen.

Thorns and Orange Blossoms opens at Royal to-day. The added attractions include Jack Mulhall in "The Social Buccaneers" and selected comedies.

AT THE GRAND.

THE "ORIGINALS" IN "RAPID FIRE."

The Originals' opening number in the new revue "Rapid Fire" which will be the attraction at the Grand commencing next Monday matinee is an entirely new and novel idea for a prologue. It conveys different characters from scenes in "Biff Bing Bang", "Dumbells revue of 1922" and "Full O' Pep", all the revues these entertainers have appeared in since they first started to tour Canada in 1919. A brilliant spectacle follows with a scene of the Valley of Kings and a screamingly funny satire on King Tut and his many wives.

24 brand new numbers including elaborate costumes, scenery and lighting effects make "Rapid Fire" positively the biggest and most spectacular production this famous Company has ever brought to this city. Several magnificent costumes worn by Arthur Holland and Gene Pearson, which were specially designed and made for them in London, cost several hundreds dollars each.

Every kind of entertainment is to be had in the new show including many brilliant and spectacular concerted numbers. A sketch of life in No Man's Land with marvellous and unusual lighting effects depicting a a bombardment in the distance at night, the breaking of dawn and a heavy rainstorm is undoubtedly the most realistic picture ever seen on a Canadian stage of life over there. The Originals have been playing to packed houses everywhere.

The box office opened this morning and indications point to a heavy demand for tickets. Patrons are advised to make early reservations.

ITALY'S ULTIMATUM PUBLISHED TO-DAY

Greece Must Humiliate Herself to Comply with Italian Demands

ROME, Aug. 30. — (Canadian Press).—The Italian Government to-day published the ultimatum to Greece, giving the precise terms the Greeks are expected to meet in reparation for the massacre of the Italian boundary mission at the Albanian frontier. The terms are:

First — Apologies of the most sweeping and official nature to be presented to the Italian Government through the Italian Legation in Athens by the Greek military authorities.

Second—The victims of the massacre to be given solemn funeral ceremonies with services in the Catholic Cathedral in Athens, all the members of the Greek Government participating.

Third—Honors to be paid to the Italian flag by Greek warships in Piraeus, for which purpose an Italian naval division will be sent there. The honors to be in the form of twenty-one guns, fired by Greek ships while flying the Italian flag at their mastheads.

Fourth—Severest enquiry to be made by Greek authorities on the spot of the massacre, assisted by the Italian Military Attache in Athens, for whose personal safety the Greek Government will be held absolutely responsible. This inquiry to occur within five days from the acceptance of these demands.

Death Penalty.

Fifth—Capital punishment for all guilty.

Sixth—An indemnity of fifty million Italian lire (approximately $2,160,000 at the present rate of exchange) to be paid five days from the presentation of the note.

Seventh—Military honors to be rendered the victims when their bodies are embarked at Previza on Italian ships for their return to Italy.

AT THE REGENT.

WILLIAM RUSSELL'S NEW PICTURE A THRILLER

"Boston Blackie," a picture setting forth with interest and power the need for prison reform, will be shown at the Regent for three days, starting to-night. William Russell, Fox star, appears in the title role and contributes his rugged acting to an exciting tale of conflict and adventure. Eva Novak does her share toward keeping the golden thread of romance shining brightly. Many of those who see the production will probably derive additional pleasure from the performance of the dog, whose part in the story is especially noteworthy.

One form of prison punishment, the water cross, is severely criticized for its cruelty. This torture was effected by tying a man upright against a wall with arms outstretched and turning on a high pressure hose, striking the man in the pit of the stomach. Boston Blackie's escape and his further exploits will keep the average audience in a turmoil of suspense.

Also good comedies, World News and two reels of great turf story, with an exciting race.

LEAFS FIT FOR BIG GAME HERE

Winner of Series With Cobourg Goes Into the Ontario Finals

Lakeviews' great win at Kingston yesterday, sending the team into the finals of the O.B.A.A. junior championship race, added a lot of interest to local baseball activities, and a big crowd will be out at Riverside Park on Saturady afternoon to watch the work of the Maple Leafs against Cobourg. The winner of this series will enter the finals of the O.B.A.A. Juvenile series.

On their league showing, the Leafs merit the support of the fans. The team is strong in the battery department; the infielders work well together and the fly chasers in the outfield have done good work throughout the season.

DEMPSEY READY TO RESUME WORK

Champion Was Knocked Out of the Box in a Baseball Game Yesterday

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 30.—(Canadian Press).—Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion was knocked out to-day, but not on the floor of a ring, with a referee counting over him. The title holder was knocked out of the pitcher's box when his offerings were batted to all corners of the lot during a baseball game between the training camp attendants and cottagers on the shores of Saratoga Lake.

After a three-day lay-off, Dempsey is scheduled to resume training to-morrow to continue, probably without further interruption, until he winds up the conditioning grind for the defense of his title against Luis Angel Firpo at New York, Sept. 14.

GREB-WILSON BOUT WILL DECIDE TITLE

Some Peculiar Dope on the Middleweight Championship Bout to Be Staged To-Morrow.

Johnny Wilson, the title holder, and Harry Greb, that great, little piece of Pittsburg fighting machinery.

As a rule, in doping and in betting on the outcome of a fight, the champion possesses the known quantities and what experting is to be done revolves around the prospects of the challenger.

In this unusual case it is just the opposite. Everyone knows the capabilities of Greb, and no one is sure of what Wilson will turn out to be when he is subjected to a real test that he is bound to face.

Wilson sort of sneaked into the championship and he has sneaked more as champion. He won the title from Mike O'Dowd in Boston on a decision and O'Dowd shouted to the world that he had been made the victim of larceny. Wilson gave him a return bout in New York, and although he failed to show any kind of championship ability, he did beat O'Dowd, and in the povery-stricken condition of the class it meant that he was the champion sure enough.

Wilson fought the rugged Bryan Downey in Cleveland and he was floored and saved by what the ringsiders maintained was a most generous and considerate count on the part of the referee. The champion then took Downey back on for a no-decision thing in Jersey City and the exhibition was so terrible that Tex Rickard refused to pay Wilson his purse.

More trouble followed for the champion When he tried to get his money, Rickard forced him to sign an agreement to fight Harry Greb. Wilson signed the agreement, got his money and then told Rickard to jump into the well-known lake.

The New York boxing commission then suspended Wilson for failing to defend his title and announced Greb as the champion through a sort of default process.

Matters were further complicated when Greb proceeded to win the American light-heavyweight championship and decided that he didn't care to monkey around and defend what claim he had on the middleweight title.

Finally, after months of wrangling the Wilson-Greb match was made, Wilson was reinstated by the boxing commission and they are going to have it out.

In winning the championship and in the few times that he stepped out of the set-up class to defend the title Wilson showed himself to be so bad that he was dubbed "the cheese champion."

He follows the southpaw style of fighting with his right hand and his right foot extended, and it is rather annoying style to beat. He is of rugged build and has enough power in his back, shoulders and arms to be a good hitter, if he knows how to get the most of his possibilities.

Some supporters of Wilson have maintained that he is a good fighter and a worthy champion and that he would prove it the first time he faced a real, capable opponent. He will have that opportunity with Greb, but bettors are asking more than assurance from his friends that he is a real fighter.

Greb has fought so much and done so well that every follower of the ring knows that he is one of the hardest fighters in the business to beat—that is, everyone knows that he once was such a fighter.

It remains to be seen if he is as good as he was more than a year ago. Some doubts exist that he is. Perhaps he will not be hurt by making the weight, but it stands also that he will not be benefited by it. After seeing the exhibition that Johnny Dundee gave when he was supposed to have been weakened by making weight for Eugene Criqui, good judges will be very slow in banking too much on the weight factor as a handicap to Greb

The Pittsburgh boy may not be in shape, however, He is a rather loose liver, and he has been hitting the pace during the last year. There are too many examples to show that Greb is not the one in a million who can retain his effectiveness by not following the rules.

Two years ago, Greb would have been an overwhelming favourite to beat Wilson, and he will carry a lot of smart money with him to-morrow night, but the sentiment is not so much that Greb is so much superior to Wilson, as it is that Wilson is much inferior to Greb.

made no effort to get away, was disarmed.

Cohen was almost carried into the anteroom of the Essex Market Court, by the police, who feared another outbreak of lawlessness. A hurry call was sent to Bellevue Hospital for an ambulance. Kaplan, mortally wounded, fell against Detective Joseph when the first shot struck him.

"Jesse, they've got me!" he muttered and lapsed into unconsciousness.

While the police were taking Cohen into the Court House, Mrs. Kaplan ran to the door of the car, and seizing the sleeve of her husband's coat, cried to him:

"Tell me that you were not what they say you are!"

But Kaplan made no reply. A minute later he was lifted in a Bellevue ambulance, and died on the way to the hospital. Goldfinger was hurried to the surgical ward of the hospital, where it was said he would probably recover.

Cohen Tells of Feud.

In a statement to Assistant District Attorney James J. Wilson, Cohen said he was a wet wash laundry worker, 22 years old, and lived at 67 East Fourth Street. He boasted of his success in getting Kaplan and said that he had not, Kaplan would have killed him later.

"The Dropper has been hounding me for a long time," he said. "Two weeks ago he wanted to shake me down for $500, and when I told him I did not have it, he said he would have me bumped off. A couple of weeks ago Louis Schwartzman, one of my best friends, was killed by the Dropper's order. A few days ago on Essex street, the Dropper and two of his men drew up to the curb where I was standing. They intended to get me then but I ran away. I knew this sort of thing could not continue so I went down to the court and waited for him to come out."

Before he was taken to the Fifth Street Station Cohen re-enacted his crime for the police. A police photographer took pictures of the various movements made by Cohen.

Taking no chances with their prisoner, uniformed patrolmen and foot and detectives in commandeered automobiles followed the patrol wagon in which Cohen rode to the East Fifth Street station

The shoting of Kaplan was the culmination of encounters with underworld characters which had given the police an exciting morning. Late on Monday night Captain Willemnse received word that members of the rival gangs would be on hand "ready for trouble," when Kaplan went to court. With this in mind, Capt. Willemnse arranged for the heavy detail of police in the neighborhood of Second Avenue and Second Street.

DAVISON CHEM. MARKET HEADER

Ran Wild to 72 But Receded to 50 Increases Were General

(Special to The Examiner.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—Reports of Germany's intention to abandon passive resistance continued in the face of official denials which foreign observers regarded as technical to a certain degree. To this optimism over the European outlook was added a number of constructive developments in the domestic situation. Crude Oil production for week ended Aug. 25 showed a decrease. While this was slight, it was looked upon as one of the many straws pointing to the approach of better times for the oil industry.

Gov. Pinchot's terms for averting the anthracite strike were considered likely to prove effective and stocks showed a buoyant tone in the early dealings. Steel Common maintained the leadership, reaching a new high on the movement at 93 3-4.

Davison Chemical kept up its spectacular rise, selling at 69, against Wednesday's low of 44 3-8. Wild gyrationes in Davison Chemical which ran up to 72 and then dropped to 50, threw a wet blanket over the market in the first hour. Evidently the precipitated retreat of an overcrowded short interest caused the stock to get out of the control of interest sponsoring its movements.

When some semblance of order was restored to Davison's fluctuations the general list recorded its balance. The advance of the market was resumed with Gulf State Steel leading the industrials and New York Central the Rails. Among the specialties which developed increasing activity was United States' cast iron pipe preferred, reflecting the possibility of an increase in the dividend rate on this issue.

OPENING PRICES.

Opening prices included: Republican Steel 49 1-8; Canadian Pacific 145 1-4, off 5-8; Studebaker 107 1-8, off 3-8; North American 22 1-2; Westinghouse 59 1-2, up 3-8; Pan American Petroleum 61 5-8, up 1-8; Consolidated Gas 63 1-8; Industrial Alcohol 56, up 1-2; Atchison 97; Pennsylvania 43 1-4, up 1-4; Baltimore and Ohio 50 3-4, up 3-8; Bethlehem Steel 54 5-8, off 1-4; Southern Railway 33 1-4, up 1-8; Northern Pac. 59 5-8, up 1-4; N.Y.C. 100 1-8, up 1-4; U. # ASSUMES ORGAN OF PORT HOPE CHURCH

Mr. Leslie Unitt Will Devote Part of His Time to Local Studio Work

Mr. Leslie Unitt, one of Peterboro's outstanding musicians, who has been organist and choir director of St. James Methodist church, has been appointed to a similar position with the Methodist church in Port Hope, and assumes his duties there next Sunday. The advancement will not seriously interfere with his studio work in this city. Mr. Unitt will be in Peterboro on the first three days of each week to continue his teaching of the pianoforte, and will devote the rest of the week to his work in Port Hope.

Mr. Unitt has latterly proved his abilities as a choir leader and organist as he had previously demonstrated his special talent and accomplishments as a pianist. His many friends in Peterboro will be glad to know that his new position is not depriving them of his presence, companionship and his art.

LLOYD GEORGE MAY VISIT PETERBORO

G.W.V.A. Has Hopes That Britain's Ex-Prime Minister Will Accept Its Invitation.

Last night in the Examiner, there was an article headed "Why not invite Lloyd George to Peterboro," and it was suggested that one man is stated to have shrugged his shoulders, and said "We could not expect to get him here."

Let me assure your readers that the Right Honourable David Lloyd George, ex-Prime Minister of Great Britain, has been invited to come to Peterborough, and we have the assurance from his secretary that the ex-Prime Minister will very likely be here.

The G.W.V.A. requested me some time ago, through its secretary, when it was understood that the ex-Prime Minister might come to Canada, to invite him to Peterborough, and I forthwith did that, in the hope that he would give an address under their auspices.

I might add that His Excellency, the Governor General of Canada, has been invited to Peterborough three times, but has been unable to come here this year; but it is hoped that he will reach Peterborough next summer or the early Fall.

Sir Arthur Currie has been invited to come to Peterborough; also General Mewburn, General Clark, General Morrison and General MacDonnell, the latter being able to accept the invitation, and was here last armistice day, and gave an address.

I might add that I also invited Sir Henry Thornton, who came to Peterborough, and made some changes in the railway schedule, as a result of his visit.

When Lady Astor was in Canada, she was invited to come to Peterborough to give an address; and so was Mrs. Margot Asquith, the wife of the Right Honourable H. H. Asquith, former Prime Minister, of Great Minister. These two ladies, however, had arranged their plans, so that they could not come to Peterborough.

In these instances, in some cases, I offered to pay the cost of renting the Grand Theatre for the purpose of allowing the public to hear these notable speakers.

Only yesterday, the Honourable Charles A. McGrath, Chairman of the International Joint Waterways Commission, wrote me that he was unable to come to Peterboro to address a meeting of the Peterboro Engineering Society, on the St. Lawrence Development Scheme.

I am giving you these facts just to indicate that there has been no laxity in inviting people of note to come to the City of Peterborough; but many of these people have been unable to come on account of the many appointments they have had before the invitation reached them.

It will be remembered that last winter, the Honourable H. H. Stevens, the Honourable Dr. Manion, and Lieut.-Colonel Cosgrove, came to Peterborough, and gave addresses, after I had succeeded in inducing them to accept the invitations.

Yours faithfully,
G. N. GORDON,

Negotiations under way.

While David Lloyd George has not definitely decided to visit Canada and the United States this fall, negotiations have been under way for the past five or six weeks on the part of the local branch of the G.W.V.A. to have him visit Peterborough under the auspices of that organization.

The idea had its inception among members of the Armistice Day Committee, and the officers of the organization imediately got in touch with the former premier by letter and cablegram. G. N. Gordon, K.C., M. P., had also written to Mr. Lloyd Keorge on behalf of the War Veterans, and the reply which he has received conveys every encouragement that the distinguished visitor will make Peterboro one of his stopping places. His itinerary has of course not been prepared, but Peterborough would be the logical stop on his way between Ottawa and Toronto.

The plans of the War Veterans were not announced earlier as the organization wanted to be absolutely certai that he would be here before any publicity was given to the project.

The City of Brantford and several others have been patting themselves on the back for inviting Lloyd George to visit them but the local War Veterans beat them to it by several weeks.

EUROPE IS SHUDDERING BEFORE POSSIBILITY OF A GREECO-ITALIAN WAR

Praying That Italy's First Anger May Subside, Permitting Negotiations or Intervention by the League of Nations.

BLAZE WOULD SPREAD

LONDON, August 31. — (United Press.) — Europe is shuddering before the Greeco-Italian situation, having in mind the catastrophic consequences of the Sarajevo incident of nine years ago, which it parallels in a striking way, and praying that Italy's first anger may subside, permitting negotiations or intervention by the League of Nations.

War between Italy and Greece would certainly not be confined to these countries. Conditions are such that one war-like step would lead to another until all Europe might again be involved in a devasting conflagration.

Italy would have no special object in subjugating Greece proper.

Italian gunboats might demolish Pierais and other seaports, but invasion of Greece by a military force would be extremely difficult.

Italy's Ambition.

Italy has long desired a foothold in Albania, and to fight the Greeks in Macedonia the Italians would be compelled to go through Albania. But Albania and Macedonia also offer severe military problems.

No power has effectually conquered Macedonia in 1400 years. The Serbs would never tolerate Italy converting the Adraitic into an Italian lake or Italian penetration to Salonica, which is the strategic aim of all Balkan wars.

If Italy should land troops in Albania for the purpose of invading Macedonia, the Serbs would probably promptly seize the Fiumjan-Dalmatian litteral and lends definite support to the Albanians ejecting the Italians.

In the event of threatened hostilities Italy will probably be warned that any offensive in the direction of Alabnia will make the Jugo-Slavs an ally of Greece.

Once hostilities opened the Bulgarians would then certainly make a dash towards Salonika in event of the Serbs assisting Greece, and the moment such an expeditron started Roumania would doubtless come in against Bulgaria.

Meantime the Turks would not be likely to overlook the opportunity to seize more of Thrace.

Russia Might Act.

Rusia might then be expected to seize the coveted territory in Bessarabia while Hungary would be figuring on recovering a few lost provinces from Serbia. Eventually Poland and the Baltic States might be expected to become involved.

In the light of these events, it would obviously be difficult to prevent the conflagration from spreading throughout Europe. This explains the frantic efforts of the allied diplomats to induce Italian moderation or submission of the entire matter to the League of Nations.

INSULTED GREEK FLAG.

It is stated in reliable quarters from Greece that the Government will await Italy's reply to the Greek note in answer to the Italian ultimatum, before having recourse to the League of Nations, of which both nations are members.

If an appeal to the league is considered necessary it will be based upon articles 13 and 15 of the covenant, by virtue of which the league must necessarily intervene, even if asked to do so by only one of the parties concerned.

The Greek government has protested through the Italian legation here against anti-Greek demonstrations in Milan and Triest, in which insult was offered the Greek flag.

BUSINESS AS USUAL.

Fascisti in Rome Display Hostility At Greek Consulate

ROME, August 31 Canadian Press). — Two hostile demonstrations were carried out to-day by the Fascisti, says the Corriere D'Italiano, in front of the Greek Consulate, the Italian demonstrators carrying away the shield bearing the Greek arms.

The Belgrade correspondent of the Corriere D'Italiano says that the Greek Charge D'Affaires there has conferred with the Acting Foreign Minister of Jugo-Slavia presumably about a controversy between Italy and his country.

MURDER SUSPECT NAMES SLAYER

Accused Springs Sensation at Probe Into Slaying of Game Warden Joseph Blaquieres.

RIMOUSKI, August 31. — A sensation was sprung at the preliminary investigation into the death of Joseph Blaquieres, former game warden, which opened here before Magistrate Fiset.

Girard, one of the two prisoners held in connection with the affair, stated that he was present when the game warden was killed. Pressed with questions he named the man he accuses of the killing.

His testimony was to the effect that on the evening of the murder he was canoeing with D'Aigle, who is also a prisoner, on the Metagama Lake, fishing for salmon.

"Suddenly he saw Blaquieres and another man on the shore," he said. "The man carried a rifle and we heard a scream. D'Aigle then shouted to me, 'they got him.'"

An order was given by the court not to make public the name of the man denounced and whom the police are now trying to locate.

According to Girard he had nothing to do with the murder and could not prevent it. His testimony was also in favor of D'Aigle, whom he claimed was only an eye witness. The Crown maintains that there was a plot organized against the dead man. An adjournment until Sept. 5th was granted by the Court at the request of Lucien Cannon, K. C., who acts for the Crown.

LOCAL NURSE BADLY HURT MOTOR CRASH

Two Hours Previously Had Received Diploma and Bouquet at Hospital Graduating Exercises.

MISS SADIE BROWN

Miss Sadie Brown, who last night was one of the class which received graduation honors in the G.W.V.A. Hall, is to-day prostrated as a result of an accident which occurred on her journey home. Miss Brown suffered severe injury to her face and mouth, besides serious bruises.

The young lady was driving with her two brothers towards her home on the Norwood Road, and was proceeding east on Smith Street, when a car occupied by George Evans and Herb. Kendry swung out of Armour Road and struck the buggy. The buggy was completely wrecked, and the car badly damaged. Evans, when interviewed by the police today, also complained of injuries.

Occurred at Midnight.

At nine o'clock yesterday evening Miss Brown, with six other graduating nurses from Nicholls Hospital, appeared on the platform of the G. W.V.A. Hall, spic and span in her crinkling white uniform, her arms filled with red roses, bright with the pride of achievement.

She received her diploma and medal, the seal of success after a course of three years, and in an address a speaker referred to the occasion as "the opening of a new era in life." It was, he said, "a night that would never be forgotten."

"I don't think I will ever forget it," Miss Brown told the Examiner to-day. "We were driving up Smith street when the car turned at the Oval. We were in front of Mr. Moffat's house when it struck the buggy. "The driver of the car," she asserts, "kept it on the left side of the road, and although we drove as close as we could to our own side, we had not a chance to escape."

Horse Injured.

The horse was badly cut about the chest and legs, but it is expected that it will recover. It is believed that when struck the horse reared and came down on the hood of the car, smashing the wind-shield. The front of the car was badly dented.

The automobile was not travelling at a very fast rate, Miss Brown said. The car lights appeared to be all right.

A constable who investigated the case informed the Examiner that the car which caused last night's accident is built up on the same chassis that Evans drove in the accident which resulted in the death of Orma Boyler on July 19 last year. No action has been taken by the police in this case.

TRUTH MISSION NOTICE.

Owing to sickness is the home of Mr. Robert Glover, the weekly prayer meeting of the Truth Mission announced to be held in his home, will be conducted to-night at the home of Rev. D. McKee, 262 McDonnel Street.

When Young Lady Smoked in Motor Peterboro Stared

Overshadowing the war crisis in Europe and the threatening coal strike was the appearance of a young lady on George Street yesterday smoking a cigarette.

"For land's sake, look at that" —this from a middle-aged lady whose mind until that moment had been taken up with the store windows drew attention to a passing automobile.

There, comfortably ensconced behind the steering wheel, was a debonair young lady. Coquettish-held between her lips was a cigarette, and with the sang froid of a hardened smoker, she serenely puffed at the cheering weed.

To all appearance she was indulging in nothing unusual.

SIXTY RUSSIAN REFUGEES SEEKING HAVEN IN CANADA

Rest of Thousand Stranded in Paris Hadn't Enough Means to Pay Ocean Passage

OTTAWA, Aug. 31.—(Special.)—Sixty Russian refugees who sought asylum in Constantinople on account of their opposition to Bolsheviki rule, and who were forced to leave that city after the Turk occupation, left Cherbourg, France, to-day for Canada, where they will live in the future.

Over three thousand of these people were compelled to leave Constantinople. The Russian Refugee Relief Association of New York, interested the Canadian Immigration Department in their plight and asked that a number of them be admitted to this country.

Upon receiving the report of their agent, the Department prepared to admit one thousand of Russian refugees on the understanding that the American Association defray the expense of their passage. When all arrangements had been completed the Association notified the Ottawa immigration officials that there were no funds available and the plans had to be abandoned, although sixty who left France to-day had sufficient personal means to make the journey.

TO DISTRIBUTE GOVT. PRINTING

Provincial Newspaper Men Petition Premier Ferguson in This Regard at Toronto Today.

TORONTO, Aug. 31.—(Canadian Press). — Requesting that Government printing contracts be spread around the entire Province rather than have the lump contract given to one Toronto firm, representatives of Ontario newspapers from various points of the Province, with the exception of Toronto, waited on Premier Ferguson this morning.

The deputation, which was headed by Charles Dingman, of the Stratford Beacon-Herald, pointed out that "blue books," Government reports and many other types of printing could be carried out by many of the smaller plants throughout the Province.

Premier Ferguson promised the publishers that he would enquire into the terms of the contract and see what could be done.

Representatives from Owen Sound, Kingston, Stratford, Peterborough, Woodstock and other points were present.

COMPLAINTS ABOUT TEARING UP WALKS

Ashburnham Merchants Also Say Bridge Has Been Kept Closed Too Long.

The paving of Hunter Street East has been the subject of complaints from many of the residents of Ashburnham, including the business men. They welcome the improvement this work will effect, but they contend that the bridge is being kept closed too long, that heavy trucks could easily be kept off it and that the passage of the lighter motor vehicles would not cause any damage to the new pavement.

They don't pretend to speak from engineering knowledge but they argue that George Street South was closed to traffic for only a few days. Another complaint is that the sidewalks, which have to be raised near the corner of Mark and Hunter Streets, were both torn up at the same time, to the inconvenience of the merchants and their customers, and with confusion to business. If the new walk on the south side of Hunter Street had been constructed first, they say, the week-end business would not have been interfered with so much. With a vacant frontage on the north side it could easily have been left to the last and no interests would have been affected.

HORSES PULL 14 TONS AND WIN FAIR CONTEST.

DES MOINES, Ia., August 31. — Two grey mares, 8-year-old Grade-shires, weighing 2,845 pounds, and owned by John Donaghy, of Slater, I., won first honours in the opening round of the horse pulling contest at the Iowa State Fair yesterday. They were entered in th "farm teams under 3,000 pounds" class.

The measuring device, called a "dynamometer," registered a traction full of 2,075 pounds for 49 feet and 2,100 pounds for 15 feet, equivalent the officials stated, to a force sufficient to move a load of approximately 14 tons over an ordinary cinder road.

ORDERS TENT FOR AYRSHIRE ENTRY

Marmora Breeder Evidently Bringing Big Exhibit—Poultry Building Doubled.

Although this was only the end of August and Peterborough's Exhibition is two weeks away, there were evidences at the Exhibition Park this morning of preparations for a show that will smash all local records.

The size and capacity of the poultry building has been doubled, twenty new sheep and swine pens are nearly completed, and a special order came through from an Ayrshire breeder near Marmora for a big tent, 40 feet by 80 feet, for the display and housing of his herd which is undergoing a test and should be kept by itself.

The new performance platform is ready to be fitted into place in front of the grand stand. Its parts are stored in the horse barn, and can easily be assembled and put together by two or three men. The platform was designed by W. H. Barry, and simply rests on the ground without a basement as in the old stand. It is collapsible, and can be removed almost as easily as it can be set up.

The poultry building, now 120 feet long and twice its size of last year, is almost ready for the Fair. The coops are all in place and marked, the interior has been thoroughly whitewashed, the feeding and drinking tins have been scalded as a precaution against any possible infection of the exhibited fowl.

The new part of this building was constructed out of used lumber that had been stored under the grand stand. The only material that had to be bought were the rafters and the supporting posts. It was an economic job, and members of the Poultry Association are doing their part by working at night in outfitting the building. Tom Darrah, Geo. Paxman, J. W. Nesbitt, Harry Lush, I. T. C. Lang, Fred Holmes, William Stewart, and others have put in a lot of profitable time, which should yield big results during the Exhibition.

The additional accommodation for sheep and swine was made necessary by last year's experience when the exhibits packed the pens and overflowed into the open.

The park is recovering from the dry weather, and is freshening with a new greenness that reaches over the entire thirty acres. The horsemen have the track in good condition, and are using it every day.

LOCAL NURSES GET DIPLOMAS AT EXERCISES

Over Five Hundred at Interest-Holding Event in Connection With Nicholls Hospital.

PRIZES AWARDED

The G.W.V.A. Hall was packed to the doors last evening for the graduation exercises of the Nicholls Hospital Training School for Nurses. Over five hundred people sat and stood and jammed the entrance of the hall for a brief hour, which was made very interesting by the varied programme of short addresses and music. The hall was attractive with its usual decorations of brightly-colored overhead pennants and large flags backing the platform, which was a bower of beautiful flowers and tall ferns. Masses of fresh, fragrant blooms in lovely shades, with quantities of the tall, superb gladioli and bowls of asters, decorated the platform, the table and the piano. The graduates, in their crisp white uniforms and caps, arms filled with deep red roses tied with the hospital colors of purple and gold, made a pretty picture against the floral background as they filed onto the platform to receive their diplomas. A number of nurses, also dressed in uniform, occupied the front rows.

In the absence of Mr. Richard Hall, through illness, the chair was taken, in his usual able manner, by Mr. John Crane. Mr. Crane, in his opening remarks, paid a tribute to the untiring efforts made by Mr. Hall through many long years as head of affairs at the Hospital. He also alluded to the recent inclusion of Nicholls Hospital on the list of standardized hospitals in Canada, with facilities afforded for the best of treatment of patients. Up to date, over two hundred young ladies had been graduated from the hospital's training school for nurses.

G. N. Gordon, K.C., M.P.

Mr. Gordon, the next speaker, remarked on the importance of the nursing profession. "There is no other profession that we have, not even the physician's, that requires such great qualities of head and heart, of patience and alert judgment in critical moments." A pleasing manner that would inspire trust in the patient was necessary, and an air of confidence, to meet the important demands made on the nurse. Mr. Gordon recommended that the graduates join any organization that had for its aim the bringing together of nurses in a body, and the establishment of a high standard in nursing.

"To keep that standard high means higher remuneration for the nurse and also better service to those who pay for it."

Speaking of the ethics of the profession, Mr. Gordon said: "These should be high. They are simply the rules of conduct adapted for securing and maintaining certain standards in mentality, morality and efficiency. The physician is entitled to complete fidelity from the nurse."

"You have burdens and responsibilities that sometimes may seem overwhelming, but the greater the burden, the greater the sacrifices, and also the greater the confidence and power which you will attain by reason of them."

Mr. Gordon concluded his address with a wish for the sincere and enduring success in life of the graduating nurses.

Affirmation and Presentation.

The affirmation of service, read by Mr. Crane and repeated by the nurses, followed. A diploma, bound with broad ribbons of purple and gold, was presented to each nurse, and their medals were pinned on by the hospital superintendent, Mrs. E. M. Leeson.

The address to the graduates was made by Dr. W. A. McPherson, whose speech held a degree of humorous reference that brought appreciative attention from the audience. The speaker extended the congratulations of the hosnital and voiced the appreciation of the staff of doctors for the work done by the graduating nurses during their three years' course, and for the help and comfort they had been to their patients. The doctor spoke of the discomfort endured by the probationers in their initial three months' try-out, and repeated the remark of one young lady, who said that all she seemed to be doing in that period was to "dust and sweep and scrub and clean and wash old men's backs."

The nurse's day was a long and a trying one, with ward and private

COAL DIGGERS WILLING TO RESUME PARLEY ON GOV. PINCHOT'S PLAN

Miners' Leaders Say His Action Has Paved the Way to Re-opening of Joint Negotiations Between Operators and Miners.

MAY AVERT STRIKE

HARRISBURG, Pa., Aug. 31. — (Special.)—The mine union leaders to-day informed Governor Pinchott they would accept provisionally his plan for settlement of the impending anthracite coal strike.

"We feel," said the miners in a statement, "that your action has paved the way to re-opening of joint wage negotiations between the anthracite operators and the representatives of the mine workers." Such a conference would take your wage suggestions for contract miners as a basis and by diligent application could probably make substantial promises in working out an agreement."

Operators Silent.

The men are dissatisfied with several particulars of the Governor's offer as made. Operators who entered the conference with the Governor temporarily withheld their response from publication.

The Wage Question.

The proposed ten per cent. increase in wages which Governor offered, the union the answer found to be satisfactory. It reiterated the demand for a "check off" collection of union dues.

No positive assurance was given that the union would withdraw the suspension order which takes effect at midnight to-day, but the union was declared to be ready to go again into joint conference with the operators on the Governor's proposition.

Washington reports that the United Sttaes' administration will make no move in the coal situation so long as there exists the basis for conferences along the line laid out by Governor Pinchott, it was announced officially to-day after a conference between Chairman Hamond of the Coal Commission and President Coolidge. The government plan for emergency distribution will be held in abeyance, it was stated, while the miners and operators exhibit a willingness to continue negotiations.

Miners Quit To-day.

Thousands of miners in the Wyoming Valley quit work to-day in obedience to the suspension order issued by the United Mine Workers because of the failure of union leaders to work out a new wage scale to replace the one which expires to-night.

Lamp Explosion Put End to Shaving and Burnt Up the House

(Special to the Examiner)

LINDSAY, Aug. 31.—While Mr. William Passomore, Thorah Island near Beaverton, was shaving himself on the afternoon of Wednesday last, a lamp which he had place on a shelf, upset and falling on the stove exploded. The entire residence was soon a mass of flame, and the members of the family only escaped with what they were wearing.

PRIZE WINNERS ON DOLLAR DAY

Number of Estimating Blanks Exceeded Those of Two Previous Events by 2,000.

The Dollar Day Box, when opened on Thursday morning, revealed the evidence of another big response by the people, to the semi-annual shopping-event that marks the close of each season, and an increase in the number of estimating tickets over the two immediately previous Dollar Days of two thousand or more.

Following a somewhat dull summer's business the general opinion of the shoppers, that the number would be less, was shown by the estimates running from 16,000 down to 11 and 12,000 on the vast majority of the filled out blanks. That the general opinion was incorrect, was proven when the official count disclosed the number of tickets to be 18,603. When the sorting was completed, it was found that the estimators who pinned their faith to an 18,000 figure were very few, but among them were the usual close ones which showed more cases of ties, than ever before, and, while no one hit on the actual figure four came within one of it, and no prize winner of the entire 15 fine cash bonuses, was farther than six away from the correct number.

The management in the seventy odd stores who featured the big event, were beginning to wonder if the people really appreciated the extent of the sacrifice required to make the Dollar Day the outstanding bargain day of the season, but the splendid response of Wednesday has encouraged them to continue the Dollar Day in future seasons, with renewed confidence. As Monday is Labor Day, the prizes will not be paid out, at the Examiner office until Wednesday morning.

AT M'CRACKEN'S LANDING

McCRACKEN'S LANDING, Aug. 31.—The large fire place which has been added to the attractions of the Victoria House this season has been useful as well as extremely ornamental during the chilly weather of the past week. There is always a silent invitation about an open fire and the comfy chairs which are grouped before it added to their silent appeal to the tired fisherman or hunter to sit down and enjoy the warmth. ## CROWE'S LANDING AND BURLEIGH

STONEY LAKE, Aug. 31.—The dance at Crowe's Landing on Saturday night was the closing event in their programme for this season though informal gatherings will continue and it is expected that there will be an increased number remain on through September. The Toronto Exhibition and the call of the school bell mean an imperative summons for many of the cottagers.

The Cottagers Association arranged a programme for the months of July and August which was very successful and gave many pleasant hours to both old and young and will, no doubt, be continued next season. Regular Sunday services were arranged, and were well attended. Children's services at 3.30 p.m. were held on each alternate Sunday with the adult services at 7.30 p.m.

Several ball games were included in the programme and were very popular. Soft ball was played in the field above "Belvidere."

An illuminated flotilla was held on August 4th and was very successful and extremely pretty. A euchre party, held once a month, was another attraction and the masquerade of August 8th added the crowning touch to the pleasant season.

The regatta was one of the best held at the landing and attracted a large crowd from all parts of the lake. The idea of the committee was a better and bigger season than ever before and success crowned their efforts.

YOUNG PEOPLE HAD FIELD DAY

Hastings Was the Scene of Annual Outing — Good Sports Programme.

HASTINGS, August 31. — Ideal weather prevailed throughout Wednesday, which was observed as the annual field day under the auspices of the young people of the Methodist Church. In the afternoon, ball games and races were held on the Athletic Grounds, when the locals played against a team from Peterborough and one from Warkworth, and although forced to acknowledge defeat the boys felt that the sport was much enjoyed.

At the conclusion of the afternoon sports, supper was served in the basement of the church to all the visitors, as well as the locals. In the evening an entertainment was held in the Town Hall. Those out of town who contributed to the programme were: A three-piece orchestra from Campbellford, Prof. H. Treneer, of Toronto, and Miss Bevin McConnel of Bethel.

The programme, which was a varied one, was much enjoyed by all, as evidenced by the applause and the excellent order which prevailed throughout.

The committee in charge have every reason to be pleased with the day's proceedings.

VANCOUVER PORT OPPOSES EMBARGO

Exporters Claim There is Still Room For Million and a Quarter Bushels of Wheat in Elevators.

VANCOUVER, August 31. Canadian Press. — Grain exporters in this port are making preparations to oppose the recently announced embargo placed by the railroads on all wheat coming to Vancouver, domestic or export, after September 1st, unless permits for cars have been obtained and space on boats arranged.

Exporters here claim that as there is space for 1,250,000 bushels of grain in the local elevator, it is too early to place an embargo on grain moving this way.

R. E. Beattie, of the Vancouver harbor commission, says that he sees in the new regulation an effort on the part of the Winnipeg grain exchange to discredit this port in the eyes of the shipping farmers by having the report circulated that there was an embargo on wheat moving this way. Fort William frequently has congestion, it is pointed out by the commissioner, but on embargo is placed that way.

The Vancouver Harbor Commissioners would be satisfied if the railroads would fill up the local elevator before placing an embargo.

Permit Issued For Huge Grain Elevator.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Aug. 31. — (Canadian Press.)— A building permit for the new two-million bushel grain elevator to be erected adjacent to the new government dock here by the Board of Harbor Commissioners, has been granted by the city. The structure will cost $1,200,000.

The completion of the foundation upon which work is expected to begin in about four weeks, the object being to complete the elevator so that it will be ready to handle part of the 1923 crop. It is estimated that it will take at least four months to complete the structure.

UNIFORM LAWS ARE NEEDED IN CANADA

Sir James Aiken Told Bar Association of Some of the Needs of Canada.

MONTREAL, Aug. 31.— (Canadian Press.) —Anglo-Saxon principles of local self-government should be sedulously preserved, but the disadvantages of such a system must be recognized and means taken to minimize discord between local or provincial laws if the people are not to suffer moral and material loss and damage, declared Sir James Aikens, K.C., Lt.-Governor of Manitoba, and president of the Canadian Bar Association in addressing the conference of commissioners on uniform legislation here yesterday. Much of such loss and damage could be avoided, he added, by the passage of uniform provincial laws and in that way preserving provincial jurisdiction from encroachment by the Federal. He pointed out that the work of the commissioners was two-fold, being in addition to securing from its uniformity of provincial legislation, also to obviate conflicting decisions on courts in different provinces upon the same questions.

To attain these objects he contended that the commissioners "must depend largely on the Canadian Bar Association for support and should in its work more closely cope with the association for the purpose of attaining the prime object of this conference which is at the same time one of the chief objects of the association."

A full report of the various matters on the agenda of the conference of commissioners will be presented at the annual meeting of the Canadian Bar Association which will be held here next week.

Confiscated Liquor Was Ordered Destroyed.

VICTORIA, August 31. Canadian Press. — Attorney General Manson, yesterday ordered the destruction of the biggest stock of confiscated liquor that has yet been in the possession of the government.

The stock included several thousand bottles of whiskey, some small quantities of wines and several hundred gallons of beer in every kind and in every size of container.

"It is necessary for us to destroy it because it is bootleg and of very doubtful quality, such as is usually distributed by the bootleggers," said Mr. Manson.

The liquor was confiscated during the recent operations of the provincial police in an effort to stop illegal liquor dealings.

Saskatchewan Yield Twenty to Thirty Bushels

REGINA, Sask., Aug. 31.—(Canadian Press.)— Estimate of wheat yields contained in reports from crop correspondents of the Saskatchewan co-operative elevator company give figures ranging from ten to thirty bushels an acre. The bulk of the estimates are in the neighborhood of 20 bushels an acre.

Rust danger is reported from widely scattered districts, but varies in intensity. Wheat cutting is general in most parts of the province and good progress is being made with the oat harvest in many sections. Some districts are practically ready to thresh and others will start threshing operations next week.

ASK AMENDMENT TO REGULATIONS

Elevator Owners Want the Regulations Changed to Allow Charge to Be Made For Cleaning of Grain.

WINNIPEG, Man., Aug. 31. — (Canadian Press.)—Owners of country elevators asked the Board of Grain Commissioners at a special meeting here yesterday for an amendment to the regulations which would permit them to make an extra charge of one half cent per bushel for cleaning grain. The present regulation provides a tariff of 1 3-4 cents a bushel for storing grade and dockage grain, and there is a clause that "grain specially cleaned will be subject to a charge of one half cent per bushel for each cleaning."

The grain Act however, provides a maximum charge of 1 3-4 cents for storing grain whether or not the elevator has a cleaner and the operators asked that the word "specially" be removed from the regulations. The Board decided that the regulations should stand but suggested that the elevator companies make representations for an amendment to the Act.

Members of the Board refused to say whether they would take any action in the event of the western voluntary wheat pools making contracts with elevator companies for a different tariff of charges than allowed by the regulations. The chief commissiner said the suggestion opened a big question and the Board would make no pronouncement until an actual case had been brought up.

Hon. J. A. Maharg, asked whether the farmer who delivered grain to an elevator was not entitled to warehouse receipts for the full amount. At present, he said, the farmer delivering a quantity in excess of a carload lot got a warehouse receipt for the quantity in the new car but not for the excess. The commissioners took the matter under considerataion.

FARM HELPER HAD ACCIDENT

Bethany Was Scene of Upset When Rack Turned Over--Fractured Limb Results.

BETHANY, August 31. — A serious accident happened on Wednesday afternoon on the farm of William Hannah, Sr., two miles west of this village, when a young man named Charles Burkett, who is engaged by Karl Sisson as a farm hand, suffered a fractured leg.

It appears that young Burkett was assisting Mr. Hannah to draw in grain, and in coming to the barn he was sitting on the front of the load, with his feet each side of the front stake of the rack.

In coming down a slight grade the horses commenced to trot, and it is thought that while pulling on the lines the stake broke, letting the young man down on to the whippletrees. This frightened the horses, and they ran away, upsetting the load on the young fellow.

It was found when he was removed that he was greatly injured, and Dr. Hamilton was called. He being in Peterborough at the time, Dr. Clarke of Peterborough was sent for, and after examination it was found the young fellow was suffering from a fractured leg. He was removed to Nicholls Hospital on Thursday morning. Much sympathy is felt for the unfortunate young man.

Commercial Dirigibles in the Near Future.

MONTREAL, Aug. 31. Canadian Press. — That the United States will have at least one line of commercial dirigibles within a few years was the prediction of Richard B. Moore of New York, in the course of an address before the 128th meeting of the American Institute of Mining and Metalurgical Engineers here yesterday.

The speaker's topic was "Helium, a National Asset," and this he described as an important commercial asset in time of peace, and a unique weapon in time of war. Outside of the United States, helium could be obtained only in Canada and Italy. In Canada it was obtainable in Ontario and Alberta, but the only large sources of supply were in the United States. With its aid he pointed out that 150 or 200 large dirigibles could be kept in the air over a period of four or five years and perhaps longer.

MANY BUFFALOES ARE TO BE KILLED

Accommodation at the National Park is Greatly Overtaxed So Two Thousand Will Be Slaughtered.

OTTAWA, August 31. — Canadian Press. — The Dominion of Canada has two thousand surplus buffalo and they are to be slaughtered. These unwanted members of a race of animals which had been showing signs of disappearing are now wandering on the range in the National Park at Wainwright. For some years the Dominion government has been paying special attention to the preservation of these animals and so successful has this work been that the accommodation in the National Parks is being overtaxed. Consequently two thousand of the Buffaloes are to be killed this fall and the meat and skins sold.

The contract for the slaughter of the animals has been given by order in council to A. S. Duclos of Edmonton, who performed similar services for the government on a smaller scale last year, when 250 head of buffalo were killed.

Australia Made Money in Phosphate Deposits.

OTTAWA, Aug. 31.— (Canadian Press.)—Australia has scored a financial success in connection with the phophate deposits on Naurn and adjacent islands, reports C. Hartlett, Canadian trade commissioner in Melbourne, who remarks that this is "in contrast to the results of some other commercial enterprises in which the Australian government has been engaged and in which heavy losses have occurred." These phosphate deposits were purchased in 1920 jointly by British, Australian and New Zealand governments and are worked by a commission representing the three governments. The purchase price was £3,531,500, of which Australia paid £1,483,230. An official statement as to the financial results indicate that over and above interest on capital and working expenses the profits for the last year's operations reported was £90,638, of which Australia's share was over £30,000.

Colored globes in chemists' windows were first displayed by Moorish druggists of Arabia and Spain.

W. E. N. SINCLAIR HEADS LIBERALS

Is Chosen Temporary Leader of the Farty in Ontario.

TORONTO, Aug. 31.—(Canadian Press).—By unanimous vote of Liberal members of the Ontario Legislature W. E. N. Sinclair K.C. member for South Ontario, was chosen temporary leader and house leader of the Liberal party in Ontario, at a meeting of members at Parliament Buildings yesterday. The same meeting selected J. A. Pincard, member for East Ottawa, to be the party whip succeeding Thomas Marshall, Ex-M.P.P. who was defeated in riding of Lincoln. F. Wellington Hay, late Liberal leader in Ontario, who was defeated in North Perth was present and addressed the members.

The new temporary leader is a liberal of non-compromising variety His criticism of his opponents in the House was always of a severer type than that of Mr. Hay, and particularly in his budget speech of last session did he flay Drury administration for what he deemed to be its errors of omission and commission.

Born in 1873, in Whitby Township Mr. Sinclair was educated at Whitby Collegiate and University of Toronto and Law School, attaining degree of O.B.A. and LL. B. He is a barrister and solicitor by profession, is president of South Ontario Agricultural society and member of the Thirty Club of Oshawa. He was first elected to Legislature in 1911, was defeated in 1914, in 1917 was Liberal candidate for Dominion election. He was elected to Ontario Legislature at General election of 1919, and again at last Provincial election after stiff fight in his riding of South Ontario.

Like his new chief Mr. Pinard, new Liberal whip, is a thorough going Liberal. He was first elected to Legislature in 1914, was re-electd in 1919 and again at recent contest.

THE PETERBOROUGH INDUSTRIAL.

The Peterborough Industrial Exhibition is only a couple of weeks away, and all indications point to a new standard of excellence so far as exhibits and entertainment features are concerned, and it is hoped, too, in respect to attendance.

Citizens generally can assist greatly in making this latter aim possible by attending themselves and by bringing the excellence of the Peterborough Exhibition to the attention of their friends.

Many people are expecting visitors. Why not have them come at Exhibition time?

There will be much for them to see at the Exhibition itself, the theatres will have special programmes and Peterborough's many stores will be full of seasonable goods ready for Exhibition visitors.

Try and have your friends come then when the matter of entertaining them will be taken off your hands by the Exhibition.

Peterborough should be proud of the Peterborough Industrial, proud of the progress it has made, proud of the beautiful grounds in which it is held, proud of its growth and development.

And they should be proud, too, to show their friends from outside of the city what energy, enthusiasm and stick-to-it-iveness can accomplish.

This year's Fair should be a record-breaker, and we want everybody in Eastern Ontario to be there.

Write your friends and tell them all about it.

THE VOTERS' LIST.

The resolution passed by the clerks and treasurers' section of the Ontario Municipal Association, calling upon the government to repeal that portion of the Voters' List Act, 1922, which requires the annual preparation by the municipalities of part three of the list which contains the names of those eligible to vote only at Provincial elections seems to be thoroughly justified.

Just why the municipalities should be called upon to bear the expense of preparing provincial lists every year when such lists are needed only every three or four years is difficult to see.

It represents considerable expense that has to be assumed by the municipalities and it involves much labour on the part of municipal officials.

In the first place there is no apparent reason why the preparation of such lists should be carried on at the expense of the municipalities.

And in any event the annual compiling of the list in question is a farce.

The Municipal Association does well to emphatically call the attention of the Government to the injustice of this lop-sided and unbusinesslike arrangement.

That section of the Act should be repealed by the next. It is clumsy and it is burden upon the municipalities.

WHERE IS THE COAL?

Hope of a settlement of the trouble between the operators and miners in the anthracite belt, thus averting a strike, would be brighter were it not for the fact that there is a strong suspicion that the mine owners have a formidable reserve of coal available and would prefer a strike because of the opportunity offered to make the public pay.

Newspapers across the line have been asking the question as to the whereabouts of the large quantities of coal that have been mined during the past few months.

They have investigated various sections of the United States and have failed to discover that the normal supply has been shipped in.

Here in Ontario we know that there is no coal to spare at the present time.

Yet there has been plenty of coal mined.

Where is it now?

The absence of a definite answer to this question is a disturbing factor in the situation and gives colour to the accusation that a strike would not be unwelcome to the operators in view of the opportunity that would be created of securing emergency prices for the large amount of coal on hand.

If that is a true representation of the situation, the public may as well get ready to dig deep down in its pockets when the coal weather comes.

Here in Ontario the endeavour should be to ostracize ourselves as far as possible from the effects of such a situation by making it feasible for Alberta coal to be shipped here in large quantities.

A LESSON FROM THE WORLD'S BANKER.

At a dinner given to him by the Lord Mayor of London, to meet that great city's great bankers, the British Premier, Mr. Stanley Baldwin, made a speech which has not been the subject of report or comment in the American papers. He made at least one general statement whih this country may take to heart:

"Credit alone cannot restore the trade of the world, cannot alone give us that export trade we need. For export trade, no less than for the home trade, whatever financial devices may be arranged and secured, all trade comes down to the end to there being a man in some country in the world who will buy what we make and, having bought it, can pay for it. What we are suffering from is the devastation that was caused by the war, and that for one reason and another none of the belligerent countries has been able yet to tread in that same stern path of rigid economy and self-denial—the taxation of the people—that we have trodden in for the last five years."

There is not a manufacturer or a farmer in the United States who would not be the better for prayerfully pondering that grave and simple statement of fact. It came not from a pessimist, but from one who was reporting progress to those who, of all others, could test the value of his assertions. Mr. Baldwin was able to tell them that the public expenditure of Great Britain, which was $10,000,000,000 in the year after the Armistice, had been reduced to $4,000,000,000. The staff in British Government offices had been reduced to within 10 per cent. of the numbers employed before the war, after allowing for all the additional care of dependents which the war created. In three years the national debt had been reduced out of income, which means taxes, by more than $2,000,000,000. The floating debt in 1919 was more than $7,000,000,000, and it is less than $4,000,000,000 now. All foreign debts had been wiped out except that to the United States and Britain has not only balanced her budget, but established a statutory sinking fund.

It is a great record, made by rulers who are business men first and politicians afterwards. Inflation might for a time have avoided unemployment, as it did in Germany, but deflation has established British credit and restored her to her place as the world's banker.—Barron's Weekly.

LOOKING AT THE BRIGHT SIDE.

The pessimistic press, with partisan purposes in the background, is just now engaged in a campaign which will not stand the test of patriotism. The writers of these "whisper of death" articles may believe they are operating on the side of God's service; but they are really doing a discreditable and a dishonest thing. It is never honest to present but one side of a story. The other side, fairly and frankly presented might completely alter the ultimate conclusion.

It may be admitted that the national debt is large, and that taxation is high. Neither condition is desirable; but there was an adequate cause and there is also a countervail. All wars have been costly, and the European war from which we emerged in 1919 was the costliest in all history. We could not stay out of it, and our present heavy debt is the unavoidable result. It accounts for $1,688,948,036 of a net liability of $2,422,135,802. It also accounts for nearly $95,000,000 of the $135,000,000 of interest charges which attach to the public debt.

* * *

Our national railway system has entailed a very considerable capital outlay, and quite unavoidably. It was not politics that led to the taking over of the roads which, combined with the old Intercolonial, now make up the Canadian National group. It was public necessity. There was no other way. The Canadian Northern and the Grand Trunk Pacific, both heavily guaranteed by Government, broke down. They could not be allowed to go into liquidation. The service they gave was essential to the continued development of the North West. To abandon them would have meant a heavier loss, from every point of view, than to carry them on. Nobody doubts that. To standardize them and put them in a position to be operated economically has cost several hundred millions, and, in the meantime, deficits have run into large figures.

The Canadian National Railway, however, will not be a permanent liability. During the three years following 1918, operating deficits made up more than half the annual loss. In one year the shortage on operating account ran up to nearly $50,000,000. That has been wiped out since 1921, and this year there is certain to be a substantial surplus. The fixed charges have, of course, been increased by reason of necessary capital advances; but for the current year there will be an operating surplus of probably $10,000,000 available for the reduction of interest. That will continue on a rising scale. There is every assurance that Sir Henry Thornton has the situation well in hand, and, if left to work out his plan of administration unhampered by meddling politicians, he will steadily pull down the annual draft on the public treasury. There is nothing in the situation to justify alarm.

Everybody who is disposed to be reasonable, and to ascertain all the facts before jumping to a final judgment, will see that our acceptance of the responsibilities of public ownership carries with it more ground for hope than despair. It is unquestionably a liability at the moment, and a liability which is onerous; but the day is nearing when it will be an asset. The "whisper of death" pessimists say nothing about that aspect. They stop at the presentation in lurid language of the facts with respect to the burden as it presses on the people today. They do not, as every consideration of fairness demands, utter a syllable about the bright prospects. In fact, they go out of their way to conceal the full truth of the matter.

* * *

Apart from our public debt and railway obligations, we have nothing to justify worry. Much less can there be any defence for seeking to stampede the judment of the common people by fear. A frightened man is always a danger to himself and everybody with whom he may come in contact. His power to reason logically and calmly has been taken away. If the whole country were thrown into a state of panic it would certainly do incalculable harm, while just as certainly it could not do a particle of good. What is needed is constructive thinking, and these "whisper of death" appeals are entirely destructive. They have their incentive in two things—a disordered vision and the desire to work mischief. Both are bad and unworthy.—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

In the celebration at Thedford on Monday there is a prize for the man having the biggest feet. It is understood the police force are barred from the competition.

The selection of Mr. Sinclair of Oshawa as leader of the Ontario Liberals will be pleasing to Mr. Sinclair's many Peterborough friends of all shades of politics.

The new order by Hon. Jacques Bureau will put out of business a lot of those small boats which leave Belleville for Mexico and back the next morning.

If Hon. Mr. Murdock and T. L. Church, M.P., get started in a campaign of newspaper statements the result will be worse than "The Whisper of Death."

Happenings in the Central Ontario Baseball League show that a good protest is sometimes more effective than a good pitcher.

Firpo declares that he will beat Jack Dempsey—if he can land a blow where he wants to. That does not, however, give the fans much of a line on the outcome.

Governor Pinchot's proposal for a settlement of the differences between the anthracite operators and miners offers the consumers some ground for hope. Just the same, however, they would do well to prepare for the worst.

TORONTO CATTLE.

TORONTO, Aug. 31.—Receipts at the Union Stock Yards was very small yesterday morning the run consisting of 300 cattle, 6 calves, 118 sheep and 299 hogs.

One local exporter reported the arrival Wednesday of 28 carloads of western cattle. Despite the 1,600 stale cattle still unsold to the stock yard, this dealer claims to be selling the westerners, admitting, however, that sales are slow. Lack of buyers seem to indicate that most of the stale cattle now on the market will be carried over the week-end. Their quality in the main is poor. Offerings in calves were very light, the prices remaining steady.

Lambs are steady at $13 to $13.50 with bucks at $11.50 to $12. The demand for light sheep is very good but not many are being offered. Hogs continue their steady position at $10.85 fed and watered.

Two members of the society for book exportation have accompanied the exhibit to Russia, and will supervise the arrangement in such manner that the books will give a definite idea of the historical development of Germany's publishing business.

GERMANY UNVEILS TRIBUTE TO AIRMEN.

Hindenburg in Role of Monument Unveiler and Troop Reviewer.

GERSFELD, Germany, August 30. (United Press.) — Field Marshall von Hindenburg appeared here today in his post-war role of "monument unveiler and troop reviewer."

The ocasion, the final day of the Rhoe glider contests and the unveiling of a shaft to the memory of German airmen who lost their lives in the World War and in peace, found Germany's flying heroes from all over the country gathered to honour those who died and those who lived to help Germany attain a place in the air.

The monument is the gift of German aviation organizations. The particular spot on the cliff from which German fliers have made such extraordinarily successful flights in their gliders during the last few years was chosen as particularly appropriate in view of the development of motorless flying since the Allies curtailed Germany's motor aerial development.

The flag covering the monument was lowered as the little Rhoen valley band played national airs and the former aerial officers stood at atention.

Past Memories

The following belated letter in reference to the recent re-union at Millbrook will find interest with many readers:

Mr. Albert J. Fallis, M.P.P.,
President Cavan and Millbrook Old Girls' and Boys' Association, Millbrook, Ont.

My Dear Mr. Fallis,—I sincerely thank your managing committee for an invitation to the Re-union. When I first read of your organization to plan for the great function, I mentally resolved to attend. It so happens, however, that circumstances over which I have no control appear at present to be likely to prevent my being a participant in the doings of that auspicious occasion. However, should the way open for me to go, I shall surely be there on one of the days, at least.

The memories of the two happy years, 1869 and 1870, that I lived on Fallis Line and taught the school in S.S. No. 10, at which your brother David, sister Isabella and yourself were, I well remember, among my best scholars, have often carried me back in imagination to the very enjoyable associations of those youthful days. I can truthfully say, after a period between of nearly 53 years, that those two years were as pleasant and happy as any others in my busy lifetime. Well do I remember still the cordial and sincere Irish welcome I invariably received when I visited the homes of my scholars, as I often did, and I had no warmer or truer friends while in Cavan than your own revered mother and father. I may add that in all my travels through life I have never met a more warm-hearted, friendly and hospitable people than those I learned to know in Cavan Township and the village of Millbrook. There are none better. To me, to-day, however, as I write this letter, comes the saddening thought that the adult people I learned to know and respect in those days have nearly all passed to their reward, also several of my pupils; so that could I be with you at this re-union, I should miss their kindly greeting once so familiar and satisfying. The major number of two generations have left the scenes, activities and associations of these early days for the life beyond.

Please accept my heartiest congratulations on your recent election to represent East Durham in the Provincial Legislature — a signal honor bestowed on a worthy son of a worthy people. — Respectfully yours,

M. A. James.

A Personal Note.

In a personal note to Mr. Fallis, Mr. James asked if he was aware that he had other reasons for being interested in Cavan and Millbrook. About 20 years ago William Angus White, M.D., a Cavan boy, brother of Mrs. George Fair and Miss Margaret White, of Millbrook, now one of New York's busy and successful practitioners, married their elder daughter, Mary Mosetta, and she and her two daughters often visited their Millbrook relatives. Mary Mildred graduated this year in Arts from Columbia University, and is spending the summer at "The Deerhurst," Lake of Bays, Muskoka. Mosetta Constance, the younger daughter, last spring won a special prize for public reading in competition with about 200 other students, and later was awarded a $400.00 scholarship for highest standing in the 1923 graduation class in Hunter College High School, making, in her final examinations, an average of 84 per cent., including all subjects. During the vacation since she has taken a summer course in a business college and won a diploma in shorthand, typewriting and business correspondence. She will enter Columbia University at the opening next month as an under-graduate in Arts preparatory to a medical course when she is old enough. This shows in a practical way that there is something superior in the breed of the Cavan Blazers.

GREEK CAPITULATION TO ITALIAN DEMANDS WAS UNSATISFACTORY

Government of Greece Accepted Four of the Seven Conditions--Rapidly Rising War Scare--Rumour of Mobilization.

SECRET ORDERS

ROME, Aug. 31. — (Canadian Press.)—The Greek government has replied to the Italian ultimatum embodying demands for reparations for the massacre of members of the Italian Boundary Commission at the Albanian frontier. Greece accepts four of Italy's demands with modifications, and rejects three of them.

Greece is willing to present official apologies at the Italian Legation at Athens for the murder of the Italian members of the Boundary committee, the highest Greek military authorities to present this apology.

Greece will accord the victims the most solemn memorial services in the Catholic Cathedral at Athen. The bodies will be accorded full military honors by the Greek fleet at Piraeus, which will meet the Italian naval division that is to bring the bodies back to Italy.

The Athens government will institute a most severe investigation of the murders under the supervision of the Italian military attache, for whose safety the Italian government holds Greece responsible.

Capital punishment is promised for those guilty of the killings.

But the clause of the Italian note demanding 50 million lire (about $2,150,000) indemnity fills the Greeks with perplexity. The Italian note has demanded that indemnity be paid in five days.

Greek Reply Unsatisfactory.

The newspaper Messaggero to-day says it is reliably informed that Greece's refusal to pay an indemnity of 50 million lire for the slaying of the Italian boundary commission and the request for the modification of the Italian demand regarding the saluting of the Italian flag are considered by the Italian government as absolutely unsatisfactory.

European War Scare.

LONDON— The English newspapers appear this morning exhibiting familiar signs and symptoms of rapidly rising European war scare due to the Italian demands upon Greece. Flaring headlines tell of the ultimatum served upon the Athens government, of rumors of troop mobilization and of reported secret orders to the Italian fleet. From Athens comes the reply of the Greek government seeking to satisfy Rome and at the same time uphold Greek sovereignty until an appeal can be taken to the League of Nations or some other tribunal. What is transpiring behind the curtain of diplomatic exchange is unknown, for the Italian news censor is apparently already at his post and Rome is silent as to the next steps she has planned to enforce her demands.

Is League Torpedoed?

The English editorial writers suggest several solutions of the difficult International incident which, in many ways recalls the event which plunged Europe into war in 1914. The League of Nations is generally fixed upon as a medium for reaching a settlement but in view of the fact that no word from Rome refers to the Geneva Tribunal, the Daily News asks: "Will Mussolini torpedo the League and fire new broadsides into Article Twelve and into the Greek navy at the same time?"

The Fascisti Premier is the object of much criticism in the morning papers. Some of this is in the form of friendly advice, but it is more often bitter. Thus the Daily Express says: "If this is Fascisti diplomacy it does not seem to differ much from International Bolshevism."

Mussolini Objects.

A Central News dispatch from Rome to-day says it is stated in authoritative quarters that "the Greek attempt to make the Janina crime an International question" will be resisted by Premier Mussolini, who will contend that it is a matter concerning only Greece and Italy.

KLUX KLANSMEN AND MOBS FIGHT

One Hundred Persons Injured in Fierce Battle on Streets.

PERTH AMBOY, N.J., Aug. 31.—(Canadian Press)—Battling between Ku Klux klansmen and mobs was resumed on the streets of Perth Amboy this morning as members of the Order tried to escape from the Oddfellows' Hall, where they had sought refuge during an attack on a Klan meeting last night, in which upwards of one hundred persons are reported to have been injured.

The fighting was even more fierce than that of last night. A hundred men armed with clubs and stones launched an attack as thirty clansmen, who had remained hidden in the lodge rooms, fearing to brave the mobs last night, dashed from the building in the hope of reaching safety.

The clansmen had to run the gauntlet of clubs and stones, and were severely beaten before they were able to escape their pursuers. Several were reported seriously injured.

Took an American 27 hours to swim the English channel. He ought to buy a motor boat.

Wheat Harvest is Almost Completed.

SASKATOON, Sask., Aug. 31. — (Canadian Press)—Wheat harvesting is 70 per cent. completed in the Melfort and Kinistino districts. Many farmers expect to begin threshing at the end of this week. Wheat should average 30 bushels to the acre.

Crops are heavier and cutting is further advanced in the districts east of Prince Albert than immediately around Prince Albert. There is practically no sign of damage from rust or saw fly. Only the very late fields are in danger from frost.

REGULAR MEET EDUCATION BD. CAMPBELLFORD

QUESTION OF WATER

CAMPBELLFORD, August 31.—At the regular monthly meeting of the Board of Education last night, the members in attendance were: Chairman Douglas, and Trustees Stephens, Birmingham, Arnold, Maj. Bygott, Loucks, Dr. Watson, Hoover, and Lynch.

On the motion of Trustee Loucks, Chairman Douglas, and Secretary Stephens were given authority to issue the cheques to pay Contractor Brown the monthly instalments for the building of the High School, on the certificate of Architect Coons that a certain amount of work has been done. The amount paid Mr. Brown to date, including the cheque for August, is $20,200.

An Ancient Landmark.

In the midst of the new High School site, there is a house and lot belonging to S. J. Moore, who purchased the property some time ago for $900. The residence rents for $10.00 a month, but the premises must be acquired by the Board, as the house stands close to the new building.

Mr. Moore asks $1,200 for the property. The Board offered to give him in payment two lots which they own on Market Street, but Mr. Moore will trade only if he is given $1,000 besides the lots. That was the situation as reported by the Building Committee last night, and it was added that Mr. Moore's terms were final. There was some talk of expropriation proceedings, Trustee Lynch explaining the legal steps necessary, but finally on the motion of Trustee Loucks, the Building Committee was given power to purchase the property and to dispose of the building and the lots on Market Street by tender.

The house in question is one of the first residences built in Campbellford, one citizen being authority for the statement that it was erected before he came to town 58 years ago.

Increase for Miss Watson.

Miss Mary Watson, teacher of the Junior IV. Class in the Public School, was, on the motion of Trustees Loucks and Arnold, voted an increase of $100 a year, which will bring her salary up to $1,100. It was felt that Miss Watson was entitled to this raise on account of the excellent work which she has done ever since taking charge of that department. Ten pupils from her class, taught entirely by her, except in the grammar subject, which was taken by Principal Haig, wrote at the recent entrance examinations, and all were successful. She has been offered $1,250 a year to accept a position in another town.

Mr. Nancarrow's Compensation.

John Nancarrow, who has been appointed to watch the construction work on the school building, in the interests of the Board, reported that so far everything had been done according to specifications and that Contractor Brown is carrying out all the terms of his agreement. Mr. Nancarrow is paid a salary of $36 a week, $15 of this being charged up to the architect who is relieved of part of the work of supervisor by the appointment of Mr. Nancarrow.

On motion of Trustees Arnold and Dr. Watson, the supervisor will be required to submit to the Board at each meeting a written report of the progress of the work of construction.

Question of Water Supply.

The plans of the new High school include a drinking fountain in each of the corridors and the next question is to secure a supply of water. Dr. Watson suggested that a well be put down and the water from this pumped throughout the building by a motor. It was stated that good water could be obtained at a depth of 15 or 16 feet as springs have been struck in the excavation for the gymnasium.

No action was taken on this question. There is a possibility that some time in the future the municipality will install a filtration plant, so that the town water can be used for drinking purposes. In the meantime the fountains will be in the buildings ready for service.

The usual budget of accounts were passed.

Work on the new building is progressing rapidly and Contractor Browne is advertising for bricklayers as will be seen by the advertisement in another column.

The schools resume next Tuesday. Principal Haig, of the Public school, asks that parents sending children for the first time have them there before the end of the week so that they may be registered and started in the proper grades.

HURON BIG CHIEF BURIED TOMAHAWK

Ovide Sioni Will Now Visit Unveiling of Memorials to Heroic Past.

PENETANG, Aug. 31—(Canadian Press).—Toward the middle of September a Huron Indian will leave the little village of Lorette, below Quebec, and wend his way to the homeland of his fathers on the shores of Georgian Bay. The traveller will be the Huron Grand Chief, Ovide Sioui.

Near Penetanguishene lies a huge boulder, rugged in shape and blood red in color. An inscription recalls that here, in 1921, Iroquois chieftains from the Five Nations met this and another Huron from Lorette, smoked the calumet and buried the tomahawk of a thousand years of war.

The purpose of the present errand of Chief Sioui is to lend his presence, with full dignity of form and circumstance, to the unveiling of beautiful memorials which Canada is erecting to the heroic past of his people. With Chief Sioui will come Rev. Father E. J. Denny, S.J., of Montreal, to render homage to the martyrs of his order.

Thieves Visit Garden

Petty thieving is coming to a sad pass in this district. One day recently Mr. Sly's garden at Port Hope was entered and his onion bed was practically stripped. On a previous visit a large quantity of early potatoes were bagged.

Decoration Day Services

The Decoration Day services this year at Bondhead cemetery, near Newcastle, were of particular interest, as the different societies—Orange Lodge and Sons of England—lined up and led by the Newtonville band, marched to the cemetery. The graves of the deceased members of these societies and of those who fell in the Great War were decorated, the occasion taking the form of a big community event, in which many participated.

The Fall Fair at Picton, which is one of the big events of the Bay of Quinte district, is to be opened this year by Major General Sir A. C. Macdonnell, commander of the Royal Military College at Kingston.

Two Barns Burned.

Two barns and a threshing outfit were destroyed by fire near Glen Miller and not far from Trenton a few days ago. The threshing machine, the property of Mr. Charles St. Clair, was at work at Mr. Grant's barn when the straw stack became ignited, and almost instantly the whole stack and barn were in flames. A spark from the fire ignited Mr. Chas. Munn's barn a quarter of a mile away, and it was also destroyed with its contents. Both farmers had some insurance, although Mr. Grant had none on contents. The threshing machine, it is stated, was not insured.

Shower for Prospective Bride.

Grain Turning Out Well.

The threshing machines are making their rounds in the district and grain is turning out well, notwithstanding the dry weather. The recent rains have greatly helped the root crop, but not more possibly than the apple crop.

LAKEFIELD VILLAGE AND THE DISTRICT

Albert Graham Lost End of Finger in Accident — Personal Mention.

LAKEFIELD, Aug. 31.—Mr. Albert Graham, an employee of the Canada Cement Co. of Lakefield, had the misfortune to lose the end of the little finger of his left hand, when engaged with others in loading a heavy coal tank on a lorry. Graham thought to ride the load and sat on the iron braces of the tank, holding on to an angle brace with his left hand. The car, hauled by horses, had only moved a few feet when it jumped the track, which caused the tank to cant to one side and Graham's finger was caught and severed between the nail and the first joint. No one was to blame for the accident, as he was not instructed to ride on the car. The accident was especially regretable, as only on Monday last the "no accident" flag had been hoisted at the plant because of thirty days with no lost time accidents. The company has adopted the safety first organization and each month a safety committee is formed with representatives of each department who inspect the railings, braces, scaffolds, etc., and see that they are in good condition.

For the past three years the company has carried this admirable system into practice with splendid results. Thirty days without an accident allows the plant to fly one flag, sixty days without an accident means two flags and ninety days means an honor flag. The plant of the Canada Cement Co. at Montreal, which employes 700 men, has established a record as they have had no lost time accidents in six months and are to receive a trophy from the Cement Association of America. The safety committee will have their expenses paid to Chicago to receive this trophy.

Activities in Church Circles — Ladies' Aid Social Quite a Success—Personals.

JANETVILLE, Aug. 31.—Services have been suspended in the Presbyterian Church during the past four weeks, affording a well-deserved holiday to Rev. Mr. Walker, the pastor. The church will resume its activities next Sabbath at Bethany, Belladuff and Janetville.

During the holiday season all the departments of the Methodist Church have been kept intact, with the exception of the young peoples' and boys' work, which will be resumed early in September. The missionary program last Sabbath, under the direction of Mr. Blatherwick, was an unqualified success.

During the absence of the pastor on a two weeks' holiday, the pulpit was occupied by Mr. Monk of Bethany and Mr. Weeks of Lindsay, who rendered excellent service. The pastor, Mr. Ross, was in his own pulpit last Sabbath, and was greeted by large congregations.

Ladies' Aid Social.

Last evening a lawn social was to have been held on the beautiful grounds of Mr. Wm. Jackson, but the rain interfered with the plans and the arrangements.

However, the church was opened for the occasion, and the ladies registered an excellent success. Messrs. Philips and Fallis delighted the audience with vocal and instrumental music, the Misses Magahy rendered very oithy readings. Messrs. Grandy and Jackson spoke briefly, while the pastor occupied the chair.

A Beauty Spot.

The Public Park has been enclosed by a most substantial fence, and is now ready for further improvements. This promises to become a real beauty spot. Then, under the able direction of Mr. Samuel Stinson, the improvements and extensions of cement sidewalks have been completed.

Mrs. John McGill has been ill for the past ten days, but is slowly recovering.

Pleasanter Summer Than Any Previous Year — Rotary Camp Closed.

KAWARTHA PARK, Aug. 31.—The season at Kawartha Park which is now in its last lap has been jolly this year and some of the old residents say its been jollier and more pleasant than any previous season. Most of the cottagers were able to be there for some time and some new people have been added to the happy family which lives at Kawartha Park.

In addition to the usual regatta and masquerade which were especially good this year, the committee added to the list of attractions an illuminated flotilla which was so much enjoyed that it will no doubt be placed in red lettering on next years' programme. Another event which was unique on the lake and created lots of fun and provided an afternoon's pleasure for the cottagers and their friends.

Rotary Camp Closed.

The Rotary camp was closed on Tuesday after a season which has allowed four camps of boys to enjoy the pleasure which the camp of fords. The Holy Name Society were the last group in occupation this season and judging by the happy face it was a most delightful outing

The gospel tent which has been in use as a place for Sunday services at Kawartha Park all summer, ha been taken down as the call of the school bell depletes the population at the Park very much, and only a small percentage can remain on for the delightful weather in September.

THE BIG STICK IS ADVOCATED

United States Government Should See to It That Public Interest Respected Re Coal.

By HARRY B. HUNT

WASHINGTON Aug. 30— The time has come for the government to use the "big stock" on the coal industry, in the opinion of John Hays Hammond, chairman of the United States Coal Commission, and other members of that body who have been laboring to prevent a walkout of anthracite miners Sept. 1.

Executive action, following emergency authorization by Congress, is suggested by Hammond and approved by other members of the commission, by which the government, in a situation such as exists today in the anthracite fields, would take over the operation of the mines and the transportation, distribution and marketing of the coal.

"The time has certainly come to establish control in the anthracite industry," says Hammond.

"Coal is quite as much a public necessity as gas, street railway service or other service or commodities that have been brought under public regulation.

Respect Public Interest

"The guiding principle in coal production as in these other enterprises must no longer be maximum profit to the owners, but maximum service to the public.

"What is clear in the present situation is that the public interest in the operation of the mines must be respected and served, and that this requirement places limitations on the rights of owners of coal lands, coal operators, mine workers, carriers and dealers alike.

"The president of the United States should be authorized by Congress to declare that a national emergency exists whenever through the failure of operators and miners in the anthracite industry to agree upon terms of employment or for any other reason there is a suspension of mining operations, seriously interrupting the normal supply of anthracite fuel and to take over the operation of the mines and the transportation, distribution and marketing of the product, with full power to determine the wages to be paid to mine workers, the prices at which the coal shall be sold and, subject to court review, the compensation to be paid to land and mine owners."

Special Session Doubtful

Whether this recommendation will result in the calling of a special session of Congress by President Coolidge, to ask for a grant of the specific powers outlined, or whether Coolidge will find some means of accomplishing the same result by different means, now seems uncertain. The need for prompt, vigorous action makes some alternative, if any such can be found, seem most desirable. For, on the basis of recent performances prompt action by Congres on so controversial a proposition would be most unlikely.

SNOW-WHITE PIGS LATEST FAIR FAD.

Women in All Colors of Rainbow Parade With Porkers.

ATLANTIC CITY., N.J., Aug. 30—(United Press). — "The Playground of America is literally packed with visitors, who will remain until after the beauty pageant, September 5, 6 and 7. The season is now at its zenith.

Fads and fancies of the boardwalk strollers are introduced every second of the day.

Canes have been discarded and the woman with the staff is having prominence. It was considered sensational when debs made their appearance leading monkeys, but the latest is the pig. Several young society ladies hav acquired little, snow-white porkers. Dressed with a bow around its neck, the pig trots along beside its fair owner.

Knitting has not been displaced in popularity here. Needles click morning, noon and night. Because the sweater is handy during the cool evenings, the industrious knitters seem to concentrate on that article.

Thousands pack the beach daily to "buck" the surf. The water has been ideal all season, with its temperature hovering around 74 degrees. Rolled tops are now allowed.

Japan Seeks Improve Highways For Autos.

TOKIO, Aug. 31.—(Associated Press).—Japan is carrying out a great scheme of road improvement, despite the opposition of landowners who have caused suspension of the construction of the new Tokio-Yokohama automobile road, and the difficulties caused by yearly heavy rains.

The Government has in hand at present the widening of the old Tokaido road, over which the Daimyos used to travel from the western provinces to the Shogun's court at Yedo, now Tokio, and which extends from the capital to Kayoto. This road, which for miles is lined by great trees and crosses the Hakone mountains, is being widened and substantial stone and concrete bridges are replacing the old wooden structures.

In time the road will make one of the finest drives in the East, through one of the most picturesque sections of Japan, touching Kodzu, a famous seaside resort; Odawara, another seaside city, Miyanoshita, well known to American visitors to Japan and Hakone Lake, where there is an Imperial Palace.

AT HALL'S BRIDGE AND THE DISTRICT.

Road Improvement Much Appreciated in Northern Townships—Jolly Picnic

HALL'S BRIDGE, August 31. — For many years past the crossway on the Buckhorn road, north of the locks has been in a disgraceful condition. During the months of high water this road owing to its condition, is submerged to a depth of from eight inches to two feet of water, with far less inviting depths on either side. Its narrowness, with the absence of a railing, together with the fact that after a short distance, in travelling north a turn in the road occurs, lends to it an additional peril constituting a distinct menace to traffic.

Repeated efforts to have the government assume a responsibility have been made in the past, but in vain. Local parties interested, on being told that the high water claim was settled, were almost persuaded that they had no further grounds for hope and were indeed surprised when through the effective work of our present Federal member, Mr. G. N. Gordon, a grant was secured.

Under the engineering skill of the supervisor, ex-Reeve Robert Shaw of Buckhorn, the work having been commenced a couple of weeks ago, is making a good showing, and it is expected that in the course of a month's time, will be nearing completion. The necessity of the task, and the quality of the work will more than justify the expenditure.

S. S. Excursion.

The Sunday school excursion of Lakehurst, Buckhorn and Deer Bay proved a decided success. On Wednesday morning universal sunshine prevailed, and during the day, the Weatherman continued his contributing smile, which only harmonized with the smile on the faces of about two hundred and fifty parents and children.

At Fenelon Falls a suitable and convenient field was found where the sports took place.

An interesting feature was the sharply contested football game between the rival teams of Lakehurst and Buckhorn. The game was very strenuous. Absence of science and abandonment of rules were the most prominent characteristics. The score was 1-0 in favour of Buckhorn.

WOMAN RIDES ON AN ENGINE TENDER

Chic London Lady, Short of Funds, Hopped on a Homeward-Bound Locomotive.

LONDON, Aug. 31.—Life's vicissitudes have varied results and prove too great a burden for some folks, while in others it brings to the fore that supreme virtue called courage and they surmount the difficulty in the manner which offers the easiest way out. In the case of Mrs. Evelyn she found her money gone, while paying a visit with friends in Chatham. Her pride made it impossible for her to ask for a loan with which to purchase railway transportation back to London, so she resorted to other methods of travel and mounted the tender of an engine pulling a train homeward. She arrived here during the early hours of the morning, only to be placed under arrest for trespassing on the C. P. R.

Mrs. Wiley, chic and dainty, explained the circumstances of her adventure to Deputy Magistrate Gladman and he allowed her to go in company with her husband, feeling that the cold ride from Chatham to London on the tender of an engine was sufficient punishment.

While visiting friends in Chatham, she said, her money was stolen and rather than ask for a loan of funds, she preferred to get back to her home here as best she could. Late at night she climbed on top of the engine tender and there she stayed until the train pulled into London early in the morning.

Other items in the plan include increasing four times the size of the campus swimming pool; construction of six baseball diamonds; two soccer fields; 26 tennis courts; eight basket all courts; six handball courts and two running tracks.

Two wings will be added to the present gymnasium and the present basket ball pavilion will be enlarged to accommodate 3,500 spectators.

THE DAIL EIREANN GOVT. HAS FORTY-THREE SEATS

DUBLIN, August 31 (Canadian Press). — Up to noon to-day the returns from the Dail Eireann election, with 496 places undecided, gave the Government 43 seats in the Dail Eireann, the Republicans 30, Independents 14, Farmers 8, Labour 9.

The result in Limerick was a surprise, the two sitting anti-Treaty members being defeated.

DALY SOLD 1,000 SHARES OF STOCK

Broker Says He Was Told This Year Home Bank Never in Better Shape

TORONTO, August 31. — Three months before the Home Bank of Canada closed its doors on 17th August, President H. J. Daly completed the terms of an agreement made with A. J. Pattison, Jr., a city stock broker, for the sale of 1,000 shares of Home Bank stock at 90. The agreement was signed on 4th January last, and it was arranged that the terms were to be completed by 10th May. It was admitted by Mr. Pattison that these shares were being resold by him as late as August, on the eve of the bank's suspension.

According to cancelled cheques now in the possession of A. J. Pattison, Jr., President Daly was paid $90,000 by cheques—two of them on the Home Bank of Canada and three on the Standard Bank of Canada.

Four days after the agreement was signed $98.50 was asked on the unlisted market locally for Home Bank shares. The list of shareholders published after the bank suspended gives President Daly as holding 2,114 shares, and A. J. Pattison, Jr., as the owner of 974 shares. Mr. Pattion, Jr., said yesterday that he still holds 2,000 shares.

No Statement From President.

President Daly is still reported to be in the North Country, where he was sent by his doctors to recover from a threatened serious illness. From the night that the bank announced its suspension there has been no statement issued by President Daly as to the suspension or as to the bank's affairs.

According to papers in possession of Mr. Pattison, Jr., the agreement called for delivery of 200 shares of Home Bank stock on 10th January, 1923, 200 on 10th February, and 200 on 10th May. The cheques issued by A. J. Pattison, Jr., point to the agreement having been concluded.

Explaining the circumstances leading up to the signing of the agreement, Mr Pattison, Jr., said yesterday:

"Col. J. Cooper Mason, then General Manager, called me on the telephone one day and told me that he had a deal whereby I might make a profit. He had the sale of 1,000 shares, and would give me the handling of it, the price to be at $90.00 a share.

"The General Manager later explained that they belonged to Mr. Daly, and I took the matter under consideration, and later told him I would sign the agreement."

"You did not suspect that there was anything wrong with the bank then, when the President was selling his own stock," Mr. Pattison was asked.

"I certainly did not, for I had asked the General Manager and he had assured me that the bank was never in better shape. So I told Col. Mason that I would accept the commission, and I immediately went ahead.

Sales Started Off Well.

"In January we, the firm, sent a great many letters and applied ourselves to seeing our friends and business associates to take up the stock. I sold about 200 shares in January, this was followed by 234 in February and 194 in March; then in April we slumped down to 49. May was not so good; but in June we disposed of some 72 shares, and in July I sold more, and in August, after they had declared the dividend, I sold 20 shares."

In explaining the mode of payment for the stock, Mr. Pattison stated that three cheques for $18,000 each were issued in January, February, and March, on the Standard Bank of Canada. The April and May cheques also for $18,000 each, were made on the Home Bank of Canada.

Explaining the latter two cheques, Mr. Pattison said he had an account in the Home Bank of Canada, and the last two amounts due H. J. Daly were paid on Home Bank account.

In further explanation Mr. Pattison admitted that Mr. Daly was paid out of the overdraft he (Mr. Pattison) was allowed at the Home Bank, and the amount was met by payments from outside clients buying Home Bank stock.

and operating-room work, with lectures and study. In the curriculum of the Nicholls Hospital training school, no branch was neglected, and a minimum of seventy per cent. was required to pass examinations. The nurses were well and carefully trained.

On their graduation day, which the doctor referred to as the most important day of their lives, with the exception of that day when they would graduate from single blessedness to another sort of blessedness, he recommended to their attention the various branches of their work; private, institutional and special nursing, public health and industrial service, school nursing and the endeavors of the Victorian Order of Nurses.

The first duty of the nurse is to her alma mater, the second to her patient, the third to the doctor, and the fourth to herself, to guard her health and well-being as much as possible, in the discharge of her onerous duties.

Prizes For Efficiency.

The presentation of two prizes for efficiency was made by Dr. N. D. Buchanan, who congratulated the graduates on the constant effort they had made to co-operate with the excellent training they had received. The prizes were awarded to Miss M. E. Neals, of Bethany, who obtained the highest standing in examinations, and to Miss L. Thompson, of Oshawa, for general proficiency.

A feature of the evening that was enthusiastically received was the entertainment programme. Vocal solos in splendid voice were given by Mrs. Ford Turner, contralto, and Miss Ina Allen, soprano, which received applause that brought the singers back for encore numbers. Mr. John Crane acted as accompanist. A "kiddie" reading in her usual inimitable style was given by Mrs. Gerald D. McClelland, whose encore number received a further enthusiastic ovation.

The programme concluded with a general vote of thanks extended by the chairman to the speakers and artistes of the evening, "also to the chairman and accompanist."

The nurses, who were brought to the hall by Mr. Crane in a gay-sounding motor, wound up the evening with a dance and reception, held at the nurses' residence.

Personnel of Class.

Names of the graduating class of 1923 from Nicholls Hospital Training School for Nurses are as follows: Miss Mary E. Neals, Bethany; Miss Edna I. Burke, Perth, Ont.; Miss Alice M. Wasson, Warsaw; Miss Larine M. Thompson, Oshawa; Miss Frieda McIlmoyl, Lakefield; Miss Margaret E. Tucker, Warsaw, and Miss Sadie Brown, Otonabee.

LINDSAY, Aug. 31. — W. H. Price of Orillia, a marble cutter, was found dead inside the gate of the Bailey Private Cemetery at Head Lake, Victoria County one day this week. He had just started to inscribe the late John Bailey's name on the monument, when death overtook him.

Dr. Johnston, coroner of Fenelon Falls, investigated the circumstances and decided that an inquest was unnecessary.

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY

Teresa Desmond (Terry), lovely and unbelievably innocent, has left her father.

Terrence Desmond, a selfish, unreliable man, the proprietor of the Blue Moon, a road-house, and has gone to

Juliet Divine, her beautiful half-sister—known as the Million Dollar Doll—whose sketchy career is unknown to Terry. No one knows of the girls' relationship and 'Julia' is careful to keep Terry, who is an exquisite counterpart of herself hidden from her (Julia's) fiance,

Manoel Fernandez, a South American millionaire of extremely jealous temperament.

Eustace Nazlo, is a wealthy Greek whose unwelcome advances caused Terry to run away from her father.

Miles Sheridan, Terry's 'Dream Prince,' furnished the money for her convent education when she was a child, partly to atone for a past rudeness of

Hartley Phillips, acting as Sheridans' medium, has offered Julia twenty thousand dollars to take a yacht trip with Sheridan in order to facilitate Betty's obtaining a divorce. Unable to go herself, Julia persuades Terry to go in her place, posing as the Million Dollar Doll. Terry does this because of her desire to repay 'the Prince' for his generosity.

Julia marries her South American and goes away while Terry waits impatiently for the cruise when she will see her 'Prince' again.

Suspicious of Julia's long silence, Phillips calls at her apartment and Terry, assuming her new role, informs him that she finds him coarse.

Much amused, Phillips leaves Julia's flat and has an encounter with Betty Sheridan.

Terry goes aboard the "Silverwood." Mrs. Harkness, Sheridan's old nurse, views her with stern disapproval.

CHAPTER XXIX

They're Off!

Terry's heart sank. Nobody had ever looked at her so relentlessly, not even Father in one of his rages. She tried to hope that it was only the expression of the woman's somewhat rugged features, and that it meant no personal feeling against herself.

Why should Mrs. Harkness dislike her? There was no reason, and it couldn't be true; so she smiled with a yearning to win kindness.

"I wonder if you are Irish, Mrs. Harkness?" she said. "I am—half. My father's Irish."

"Yes, I am Irish, Miss. Or do you prefer I should call you Madam?" was the reply, without a sign of an answering smile.

Terry blushed. "Oh, no, I'm not—not 'Madam'," she exclaimed; then recalled hotly that Juliet had been "Madam" to Emmeline, and hoped that she had made no bad blunder.

"Well, I'd better bid you goodbye and wish you good luck, Miss Divine," said Phillips. "I must have a look around for Sheridan, if he's come on board—as I expect he has by this time. You're supposed to sail in about half an hour."

He hadn't especially meant to shake hands with the Million Dollar Doll, but somehow he found himself doing it; and though she deserved no sympathy he couldn't help feeling a qualm of compassion for the creature left to the untender mercies of that old puritan, Mrs. Harkness.

Between the Ulster woman and Miles Sheridan in his present hunted-animal mood, the girl stood to have a pretty hard time on board "Silverwood." So she was going to be paid high wages, but, on the whole, Phillips thought she would earn them.

"I daresay you will wish to see your cabin, Miss," the old woman roused Terry from her wistful longing to keep Phillips—by almost any excuse—Phillips the late enemy who now seemed the only friend.

The girl wondered why she had ever been angry with him or thought him insulting. He was really quite kind.

"Miss" from the lips of Mrs. Harkness was almost a serpent hiss. But maybe it was only because of the emphasis, after being told not to say "Madam." There was nothing in the words to offend, and Terry answered as cheerfully as she could.

The girl had not known that a cabin on a yacht could be so luxurious, and so like a pretty room in a house. There was a charming bed, like a divan, with an embroidered coverlet and many cushions. The chairs and window-bench were covered with rose-patterned white chintz, and the window had curtains of the same.

Terry liked the snug, simple little room better than the splendid one where she had slept in Julia's apartment.

"What a darling room" she exclaimed. "I didn't think there could be anything so nice on shipboard. I shall love it."

"It is well you are pleased, Miss," said Mrs. Harkness, a little stiffly. Then added, for the honor of the yacht; "of course, Mrs. Sheridan's cabin—that is, the one she used at one time—is much finer, as it was fitted up especially for her. But it is closed at present; and yours is the next best."

Terry had no wish to occupy quarters designed for Betty Sheen, and felt in no sense ill-used because they were not given to her; but under the decent politeness of the woman's type was a righteous contempt which even she was not too inexperienced to detect.

Terry was not angry, however; she was only hurt and sad, as she had been at the convent if rebuked for some fault she had not committeed. Naturally Mrs. Harkness was shocked, just as the nuns would be, because she had come on board to go on a trip alone with Mr. Sheridan.

Terry hated to be looked at and treated so eeverely, and wished Mrs. Harkness could know that she was here for Mr. Sheridan's own sake. But the truth was impossible to explain. She must just try to win some kindness as time went on, by behaving very nicely.

"If there is anything you want me to do for you, Miss, you have only to touch that bell," and Mrs. Harkness indicated one of two electric buttons on the white wall. "If there is nothing you require now, I will leave you till your luggage comes down. I shall be pleased to unpack for you, whenever you wish."

"Thank you very much" Terry tried to put cordiality into her voice, but she was promptly snubbed with all due respect. No thanks were needed, said Miles Sheridan's old nurse.

She was obeying her master's orders, and would continue so to do without fail, she hoped, during the voyage.

Terry longed to go on deck again, but had been too completely subdued by Mrs. Harkness to dare leave her cabin. She reflected that perhaps Mr. Sheridan was up there with Mr. Phillips, saying goodbye.

She had better not run the risk of interrupting them. Probably Mr. Sheridan preferred meeting her for the first time when his friend had gone; and she would be sure to see him at luncheon.

The very thought set heart and veins throbbing. She could not keep quiet.

While she glanced at the books—half of them French novels—on the shelves above a little writing desk, her two trunks and suitcase and dressing-bag (all legacies from Julia) were brought down by a couple of men.

Nothing would have induced the girl to ring for Mrs. Harkness, and she was unpacking when a ferocious steam whistle startled her nerves. Again it roared, and again. Then the yacht trembled like a live thing, and began to move. For better or worse, they were off.

There was a big wardrobe with mirror doors, built into an end wall of the cabin, and Terry had stowed the last of her belongings away when a knock sounded at her door.

A sleek man in a white jacket announced that luncheon was served. Terry had read books about sea voyages and thought that bugles summoned the passengers to meals: but that was evidently not the custom on board "Silverwood."

She glanced almost timidly into the mirror, her heart pounding. Now—she was going to see him . . No matter how kind he was—(of course he would be kind )—she must not let him guess that he had ever seen or heard of her before, under another name than Juliet Divine

BOGS INTO GARDENS IS BAY STATE PROPOSAL

BOSTON, Aug. 31. (Associated Press).—The transformation into pastures and market gardens of hundreds of acres of swamp lands and submerged areas, is forseen by John W. Plaisted of the Massachusetts Department of Agriculture, under the state drainage and reclamation law passed by the 1923 legislature.

The wet lands of the state, it is estimated, cover from 300,000 to 500,000 achres, and range from small-sized bogs to one large swamp of 1,000 acres. Many accessible swamps can be drained and tilled, Mr. Plaisted points out, and the soil may be made to produce crops of hay, vegetables or pasturage, thus helping to meet an ever growing need for agricultural land in these days of rapidly expanding towns and cities.

Financing has been the main problem in former reclamation projects in Massachusetts. The present law provides three separate methods: Funds may be raised by assesments in a given district, and deposited with the state treasurer; the members of the district may vote to incur debt, to be liquidated according to the terms of the law; or the old method of financing by apropriations by county commissioners may be adopted.

The law is held also to apply to lowlands in need if irigation, and it is believed that such territory may be developed with the district meahods outlined. The intent of the act is declared to be to help the peaple to help themselves. It is a private matter supervised and encouraged by the state, and according to agricultural authorities represents a movement of the greatest promise.

THE INGENIOUS BOY

"Worms for sale, fresh worms. All kinds, angleworms, dew-worms, nice and fresh!" A small boy, freckled, bare-legged, comes down to the wharf at Mount Julian and cries his wares. An elderly gentleman, bound for a belated holiday at his brother's island farther up, climbs stiffly out of the boat and purchases a supply. At seventy-five cents a hundred they come, a wriggling mass of potential fish bait, done up in a baking-powder can, holes punched in the top for air, and supplied with a qhantity of soft soil which is supposed to keep them alive for three or four days, if necessary.

Little boys are ingenious. They take advantage of a want and supply it, if possible. To go out on a dark night with a lantern and find on a dew-sprinkled lawn the shiny, slippery things that are so necessary to an ardent fisherman's success, is only play to selling their catch.

Another enterprising little boy has conducted a thriving business in cats this year, not pedigreed Persians by any means, but the mere, ordinary type of domestic puss, guaranteed to work havoc and destruction among thriving mouse colonies. The residents at Stoney Lake are plagued with mice at times, and the little boy advertises "Cats for Hire. Ten Cent a Month," and makes money out of his lively employees. It is understood that board and lodging are included in the bargain, and that the cats shall be returned in good condition.

Another story that drifted down from Stoney Lake some time ago was the account of a barn fire, caused by a blazing hen. Little boys, looking for eggs, were unable to dislodge the industrious biddy from her nest, and proceeded to set fire to the obstinate fowl. The result of their experiment was a burned barn.

The other day, on a city side street, a number of boys tied a collie pup to an enormous kite, and sent it up in the air for a novel ride.

Wild Fluctuations on the Stock Market.

NEW YORK, Aug. 31.—(Canadian Press).—Visions of another corner in the stock market arose in Wall Street yesterday when Davison Chemical made a sensational jump of twenty points to 872 a share and then fell back 22 points in half an hour of excited trading on the New York Stock Exchange to 55, and throughout the rest of the session fluctuated within a four-point radius of that figure.

The wild gyrations of the stock attracted a large crowd of brokers to Post 29, where the stock is traded in, and brought about an informal investigation by the business conduct committee of the exchange. No action was taken by the committee, which announced later that the erratic movement was the result solely of purely technical conditions.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

FARMER BROWN'S SICKLE

"Oh, goodness!" gasped Snookums, and turned to run away.

One day Farmer Brown came along with a sickle in his hand.

"I'll have to cut down all these burdocks," he said to himself and yet loud enough for a hundred little ears to hear. "They aren't a bit of good in the world and when they go to seed they'll spread next year more than ever. Oh, pshaw! My pipe's gone out and I'll have to go back to the house for some matches. I'll just leave the sickle hear until I come back."

Under the burdocks, the tiny Pee Wee Landers were too dismayed for words. If the burdocks were cut down where would Pee Wee Land be?

"What shall we do?" cried King Snookums.

"Yes, what shall we do, indeed!" repeated Mister Codger.

And every Pee Wee Lander looked at his neighbor and said miserably, "What are earth are we going to do?"

Nancy and Nick stayed by, not saying a word but thinking hard. They would have to help their nice little friends, there wasn't a doubt.

Suddenly Nick's sharp eyes noticed Farmer Brown's sickle lying where he had left it, and he whispered something to Nancy.

And then the Twins said something to King Snookums.

"But how can you?" said the little king in surprise. "You aren't any bigger than the rest of us."

"Why, we're as big as anything," laughed Nick. "We are only little when we are with tiny folk like you. It's our magic shoes, you know. We can wish ourselves any size at all."

"Show me!" commanded King Snookums curiously.

Instantly the Twins were their own size, like any other little boy or girl.

"Oh, goodness!" gasped Snookums and turned to run away, and so did Mister Codger and all the Pee Wee Landers.

"Why, we won't hurt you," exclaimed Nancy. "We only want to help you. Nick and I are going to hide Farmer Brown's sickle in the high grass where he can not find it and Pee Wee Land will be safe."

And so they did, and to this minute the burdocks are there and you'd never, never guess what was underneath.

Your Health

By DR. CLIFFORD C. ROBINSON

CONSTIP ATION.

During the summer vacation many people travel long distances. This brings a decided change in climatic action and weather conditions. The children as well as yourself must carefully guard against any change in conditions of air, temperature or moisture until these are overcome or thoroughly understood.

Constipation is the parent source of many ills. Do not let yourself become a victim of this trying and dangerous affliction.

Be careful of all drinking water. If the water at home has contained chiefly sulphur or mineral salts, be careful of water containing lime or iron, until your system becomes accustomed to its action. Water in general is a great aid to digestion and in overcoming constipation. If the water is different from your home supply, go slow and learn its effects.

Change in food must also be an item of constant care and supervision. Don't forget the vegetables. Take them preferably as salads with oil. Olive oil is best, as it has a fine laxative effect.

Constipation frequently brings on headaches and colds, and should be fought against at all times by careful diet and exercise. Don't forget to be regular in carrying out bowel function. Using of drugs to aid elimination is a bad habit.

The best way to prevent constipation is to be careful and reasonable from your youth in habits of eating, health and exercise. Intestinal poisoning is frequently caused by decomposition of protein matter in the colon.

INDIANS COMBAT SAVAGE LEGENDS.

Pow-wow Planned to Demonstrate Advanced Life of Indian Brave.

CHICAGO, Aug. 31. (Associated Press).—A campaign to eliminate any existing belief that the primitive methods of the American Indian are still employed, will be started at the pow wow to be held here September 24-30, which will bring together the leading members of the remaining Indian tribes.

"It is for the purpose of showing the people of the country that the American Indian, who always has been looked upon as a scalp hunting tribe, is only a kind, intrepid and educated brave, enjoying life in his own simple way, that the pow wow is planned," according to Miss Catherine Cook, Indian worker establishing closer relations between the Indians and the Department of the Interior.

"From many Indian reservations of the country will come the Indian braves and squaws, not in their native attirement, but in the habiliments of civilized people. They will formulate plans whereby they can have better representation and better conditions. These tribal leaders seek a relationship with the interior department which will not keep them inconspicuous because of their inability to deal directly with the department. They desire a method of procedure which will be one of co-ordination."

Indian activities, at present widespread, will be coalesced here, if the plans of the convention are realized. Several Indian teams of lacrosse players will start East several weeks before the pow wow here, playing an elimination series en route. The two teams surviving the series will clash here for final honors.

One of the forest preserves adjacent to Chicago will be named during the convention. An Indian village will make its appearance therein during the convention. Indian music, displays, and other exhibitions of Indian lore will be held during the week.

Belleville Lost Game But Won Protest--Draw For Tennis--Sport

DAINTY IS FOUND TO BE INELIGIBLE TO PLAY IN OSHAWA

Belleville's Protest Sustained By Committee and Trunks Are Declared the Champions.

PLAY OTTAWA NEXT.

While Oshawa fans were preparing last night to give their victorious ball team a fitting reception on their arrival home from Peterboro, the Protest Committee of the Central Ontario League was in session at the Empress Hotel here considering the protest entered by the Belleville Club against Dainty, the Oshawa pitcher, as not being eligible under the residence rule.

As a result of that meeting the good work of the Oshawa crew on the diamond was wiped out. Dainty was held to be ineligible and on that account the games were thrown out and the championship awarded to Belleville, who will play in Ottawa tomorrow.

There was no other course for the committee to take, in spite of the admiration felt for the fine work of the Oshawa team.

Dainty himself appeared before the committee and admitted that although he had visited friends in Oshawa last December and had been offered a job and arranged for a room he went back to Detroit before New Year's Day, and did not return to Oshawa until March.

The residence rule requires a player to be a continuous resident of the town he represents from January 1st and on the player's own evidence he had plainly violated that section of the rules, leaving the committee no alternative but to declare him not a bona fide resident of Oshawa from January 1st.

Oshawa have the satisfaction of knowing that they gave Belleville two bad beatings in the three game series and won out on the field.

E. Gus Porter, M.P., represented the Belleville team at the meeting, which was presided over by President Dedman of Lindsay. The members of the protest committee present, were: Sandy Lockington of Port Hope and F. D. Craig of Peterboro.

Johnston will face James O. Anderson, the Australian captain, and Tilden will oppose John B. Hawkes in the initial singles encounters. The U. S. stars, supreme in international play for the past four years, are favorites to win but tennis experts regard the Antipodeans as formidable challengers because of the impressive form they have shown so far in this country. The Johnston Anderson match will start at 2:30 p.m. and be followed immediately by the Tilden-Hawkes contest.

Adanacs to Play Exhibition Game

The Adanacs have a good game scheduled for Monday morning when they will stack up against an All-Star aggregation from Oshawa. The game is called for 10 o'clock and will be played at Riverside Park. This game should be a good one and should produce some snappy ball. The Adanacs, though they lost out in the race for the Junior honours nevertheless showed themselves to be a fast team and will prove a handful for any junior team that Oshawa can produce.

EASY VICTORY FOR OSHAWA IN THIRD GAME OF THE SERIES

Dainty Came Right Back and Beat Belleville, Allowing Them Only One Unearned Run in Game at Riverside.

THE SCORE WAS 8-1.

Belleville may be committee room champions of the Central Ontario League but Oshawa in the play-off game at Riverside Park yesterday afternoon made the B. section winners look like a hatful of German marks, the team from the motor town winning by 8 runs to 1.

It was a great win for Oshawa and a triumph for Dainty, the crack left-handed heaver of the winners who, pitching his third game in five days and his second in two days had the Trunks thoroughly subdued throughout the piece. Dainty's work was the more remarkable in that he was hit on the pitching arm in Belleville on Wednesday and had a lump on his wing that under ordinary conditions would have kept him out of the game. Handicapped as he was the portsider using a curve and change of pace to good effect kept the Belleville safeties well scattered, allowed only one walk and won a clean cut victory. He was materially assisted by Reg and Walt Fair in centre and right field, the two brothers roaming all over the park to snare four flies each in spectacular style. Outside of Rowden who had a bad day at second the Oshawa crew all performed faultlessly in the field.

Oulette who did the gunning for Belleville was hit hard at opportune times and his support was very shaky, the Trunks failing to show the brand of ball they usually have exhibited against the Petes. In fact they have never looked worse and on the day's play Oshawa were decidely the better team.

Only the Mills brothers and Williams at third performed brilliantly for the losers. Peeney Mills had three hits in four trips to the plate and Harry accepted sixteen chances at first base without a skip while he hit safely twice. Tyson and Dainty each with three hits were the leading swatsmiths, while Reg. Fair had a triple and a double.

In spite of the short notice nearly 2,000 people saw the game, there being a large representation of out-of-towns fans present.

GIRLS WILL PLAY EXHIBITION GAME

C.G.E. and Otonabee Girls Will Clash at Central Park Saturday Evening.

The C.G.E. girls defeated the Tigers 16 to 9 in a fast girls' game played at Central Park last evening. Both teams turned in an exceptionally good game but the pitching of the C.G.E. aggregation was just a little too much for the Tigers. The Tigers have shown great improvement during the second half of the schedule and have been unfortunate in losing several of their games, being nosed out by a narrow margin.

The girls have two big games scheduled for Saturday. At 5 o'clock the C.G.E. girls will play the team from the Sixth line of Otonabee and at 6.15 the Woollens and Tigers will clash. The Sixth line girls are one of the strongest girls' organizations in this district and have cleaned up every team in the East Peterboro section. Like Alexander they are now looking for other worlds to conquer and have turned their eyes toward Peterboro. They will meet worthy opponents in the C.G.E. girls.

The second game of the evening between the Woollens and the Tigers should also be a good one as both these teams have been playing first class ball.

FOOTBALL NOTES

On Saturday afternoon, the Woollens and Quakers meet in a league game at the Oval. Kick off at 3.30.

After many interesting discussions with regard to the Plenty Cup, the Association decided to enter the series. They are trusting to good luck to be favored with a home game.

A handsome trophy has been presented to the local Junior Football Association by Mayor W. H. Taylor for competition amongst the juniors. The cup is a large design, with two protruding loop handles, also beautiful floral design encircles the top rim, which gives excellent effect to the trophy. The inscription is "W. H. Taylor Trophy, presented to Peterboro and District Junior Association 1923." It is in Warne Bros window at present.

The Vets are declared winners of the Peck Cup by reason of the Woollens not having a team for Labour Day. Many of their players will be out of the city during the week-end and according to the rules they must play on Labour Day, so they have no alternative but forfeit the game.

The series of Taylor Challenge Cup games will be commenced on Saturday, September 8 and continued throughout the months of September and October until completed. It is the intention of Junior Association to play the games at King Edward Park at 1.30 before Senior games at 3.30.

FISHERMEN'S RACE WAS NOT FINISHED

Henry Ford Was Two Miles From the Finishing Line When the Time Limit of Six Hours Expired.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Aug. 31.—(Canadian Press.)—The Henry Ford of Gloucester, showed her heels to two rivals yesterday, but lost a race against the clock when the six hour time limit set for the open fishermen's race for the Lipton and Prentiss cups expired with the leader still two miles from the finish line. The race, the feature event of Gloucester's 300th anniversary celebration, will be run off to-day with the rest of the anniversary programme already finished. Yesterday's postponement was the second, the start having been called off on Monday because of fog.

The Ford, gaining on the Elizabeth Howard and the Shamrock on every leg, until she was alone in the race, justified the faith of her Gloucester admirers who fitted her out with a new main-sail so that she might enter. But the dramatic element in yesterday's unfinished contest was furnished by Captain Marty Welch of the Shamrock and Captain Ben Pine of the Howard. On the second leg of the race, a seven-mile run in light shooty airs, the two already distanced by Captain Clayton Morrissey's Ford, engaged in three luffing matches in which Marty bore off the honors. The Shamrock, blanketing the Howard while their crews exchanged deep sea compliments, stubbornly resisted every attempt by Pine to get through her lee. Twice the two vessels manoeuvred far from the course in their duel of luffing, while Morrissey in the Ford kept on increasing his lead.

"Marty will go all the way to Europe before he will let 'Piney' through," the watching fishermen, recalling Marty's exploit at Halifax in 1921, when he held the Canadian Blue Nose back for 27 miles of the course, said.

On this leg Pine did not get through. It was only at the second mark that the Howard at last went ahead of Marty's boat. At the buoy, the Howard was nearer the mark and had the right of the turn. She rounded the buoy 30 seconds ahead of the Shamrock and after that remained second in the race. But it was Shamrock against Howard. The Ford was running a race of her own, a mile or so ahead. When the race was called off Morrissey was over two miles in the lead.

A fresh north to east wind promised well but the breeze after varying constantly, finally died to nothing on the fourth leg, the hardest of all, a seven mile beat northwest to Milk Island buoy, and it was here that the contest died.

WOOLLENS WON PECK SEMI FINAL

The Quakers were defeated by the Woollens, 3 goals to 1, in the Peck Cup semi-final last evening, at the Oval, before a fair crowd of spectators. Throughout the game the Quakers played nice combination but their finishing was poor and Woollens took advantage of every opportunity to score.

Quakers won the toss and were the first to make an attack that failed at the opportune moment by Pellow. Shaw and Lauchlin travelled down the left wing to give Gaskill an easy chance to beat Griffin for the opening goal. Twice in succession Pellow outwitted the Woollens' defence and running into goal missed the upright by inches, to his own surprise. All the forwards of the Quakers peppered Woollen's goal-keeper with hard shots which he handled in quick style. They got four corners at this period without any success. Reid sent out to Mitchell who sent in an oblique shot that Griffin handled but the ball rolled out of his hands to go through for second goal. Play travelled from end to end without any further scoring. Half time, Woollens 2, Quakers 0.

The next thirty minutes started at a fast pace with the Quakers' forwards down in the Woollens area but could not find the goal. Chambers relieved upfield where Shaw converted but was ruled offside. At the other end, Mayette struck the upright from a corner-kick to go past. Time and again, the Quakers would penetrate the Woollens' defence but their finishing was poor in front of goal. Two corners taken by Mayette was unproductive. At this stage, Quakers confined the play to Woollens area without achievement until Reid punted forward to Shaw, who evaded the full backs in a quick movement and steadying himself gave Griffin no chance to save his parting shot. Darkness made it hard to follow the game but finished within the time. Woollens 3, Quakers 0.

Quakers—Griffin, goal; Honour and R. Willshaw, backs; W. Logan, Hepburn and Shaw, half-backs; Mayette, Montgomery, J. Willshaw, G. Logan and Pellow, forwards.

Woollens—Griffin, goal; Chambers and Reid, backs; Roberts, Willis and Sawyers, half-backs; Mitchell, Crowe, Gaskill, Shaw and Lauchlin, forwards.

Referee—J. Russell.

EIGHT-OARED RACE WON BY LEANDERS.

Finished Length and a Quarter Ahead of the Undines.

TORONTO, August 31 (Canadian Press. — Leanders, by a length and a quarter, last night won the International Invitation Eight-oared Race at the Exhibition course after a magnificent struggle, over the Undines, of Philadelphia ,the national champions.

At no stage during the mile and an eighth was there very much to choose between the two crews.

Leanders did not catch the water as quickly as the Undines at the start, but when settled they spurted and gained a slight lead, with both crews at the end of the first half-mile rowing thirty-nine.

The two came out of the breakwater into the open lake so close together, that for a short period it looked as if a foul might take place.

However, they straightened away, with the Leanders putting on a short spurt.

The Undines were not to be denied, and they hung on with bulldog tenacity, and while the English crew were enjoying a lead a quarter of a mile from home, the Undines were far from a beaten crew. They spurted and were met in turn by a Leander spurt.

This was the Undines' final kick, the Leanders finishing much stronger than their opposition, athough both crews were a out at the finish.

The time for the race was 5m. 56 2-5c.

POISON GAS.

CLEVELAND, August 29. — Gas wounds received in the World War have wrecked the major league career of Louis Guisto. The big first baseman who, during the spring season, gave promise of becoming one of the best in the game, has returned to the Pacific Coast, having been given his unconditional release by the Cleveland Indians on recommendations of his physician.

Guisto became a member of the Indians in 1916 Then came the war, Guisto seeing service in France, where he was gassed. He returned to America in poor physical condition. Since then he has been unable to stand the eastern climate.

After playing the Oakland team in the Pacific League during the 1919 and 1920 seasons, Guisto reported to the Cleveland club at the spring training camp, but his health failed to stand the strain, and he was permitted to return to Oakland.

He again joined the Indians in 1922, and remained with the tribe the balance of the season. He was given a chance to break into the game when "Stuffy" McInnis was hurt, and played splendid ball until he met with an injury which kept him out of the game many weeks.

It was on his showing that Manager Tris Speaker decided to part with McInnis last winter. Joining the Indians at Lakeland this spring, Guisto made a great effort to fulfill Speaker's expectations. His play during the spring training trip was a feature of the Indians' work.

Guisto was sent home when the team reached New Orleans to consult the club physician. He got into the game when the season opened, but was unable to get back into the stride he had shown in the south, and eventually was replaced at the initial bag by Frank Bower.

TRICK BAT TABOO IN AMERICAN LEAGUE

Babe Ruth's Four-Piece Slugger Started Agitation Which Swept All Trick Bats Out of the Game.

CHICAGO, Aug. 31.—The trick bat is taboo in the American League. Babe Ruth's four-piece bat which started all the agitation over the trick bats has extended to many other quarters.

Ruth believed that his bat would pass inspection since it is made of hard wood, round, and within the proper dimensions.

The rule says the bat to be official must be made of wood, which is singular and not sections of wood. Ruth's bat is plural, made of four separate pieces glued together. It has been decreed that it will not pass muster in the American League. That's final.

With Ruth's four-piece bat goes the plugged bat. This style bat is used by Kenneth Williams, slugger of the St. Louis Browns, as well as many other crack hitters in both major leagues.

Desiring to get a bat as large as possible at the desired point of contact, players have been having the bat factories make their bats to the desired dimensions. Such bats usually are a trifle too heavy.

In order to get them to the required weight, a hole is drilled in the center of the bat, removing as much of the wood as necessary to get the stick to a weight that best suits the batter. The bat is then plugged with a piece of wood or cork.

The plugging of a bat makes it possible for a player to get a much larger bat without being handicapped by the extra weight.

Several years ago, filling the bats with small nails was a popular pastime with the ball players. One player in order to get more drive into his bat drove about 100 steel victrola needles into his bat within a certain limited space, regarded as the best possible point of contact on the bat, when properly held.

The Ruth bat has started a war on trick bats in the major leagues. From now on all bats in the American League must be round, of one piece, of hard wood and conform to the required dimensions. The use of any bat that fails to come within the rules will automatically suspend a player for five days without pay.

Since a great many National League players have been using four-section bats like that of Ruth, also the plugged variety of the Williams type, similar action will no doubt be taken as to the trick weapons.

A PENNANT RACE OF 15 YEARS AGO

Chicago and Detroit Battled to the Last Game For the American League Title in 1908.

NEW YORK, Aug. 31.—The apparent runaway race the New York Yankees are making this season, in deep contrast recalls the great finish in the same circuit back in 1908. For the dash for the afig that year was without a doubt the most sensational ever witnessed in either of the two major loops.

In that hectic campaign there were no less than four clubs fighting for the leadership way into the month of September. And it was an even battle all around. Detroit, Chicago, Cleveland and St. Louis, the contesting teams, each had an equal chance to cop.

The situation was of further interest in that it was a purely "western affair," the four Atlantic seaboard clubs all being left out in the cold.

Down the home stretch came the quartet like so many race horses. It looked like a blanket finish. But with about two weeks to play, the St. Louis entry faltered, and was outdistanced, leaving the other three to wage it out. And what a merry old battle it was.

But with the final wire almost in sight, Celevland, likewise, found the pace too hot, and fell back, though still remained in the running, should either or both of the other two slack up momentarily. The Indians, in other words, retained an outside chance.

On to the last series of the season went the trio, with Detroit and Chicago almost neck and neck. Thus with only three games to play, the Tigers were due in the Windy City to wind up the chase and incidentally decide the pennant winner.

Detroit needed but one on the contests to grab the gonfalon, Chicago had to sweep the series, providing that Cleveland didn't win all four of its games from the Browns, in which case the Indians still had a show. But Cleveland was put out by St. Louis in the opening tilt, thus giving Detroit and Chicago a clear field.

Seemingly to make a sensational finish to an otherwise sensational race, the White Sox captured the first two games, leaving the championship to hinge on the final encounter of the season. Victory for either club meant the pennant, and a chance to get into the world series.

Needless to say, that last game was watched with intense interest throughout the country. Baseball fans were all "het up." For a championship was at stake. And championships aren't won in a day.

But the Tigers, with their backs to the proverbial wall, and on hostile soil, aided by the great pitching of "Wild Bill" Donovan, turned back the chesty Chicago gang, and won their second pennant in as many seasons. Not a single run did the White Sox get off the offerings of Donovan that day, so well was the "Smiler" the master of ceremonies, while the Tigers almost annihilated the Chicago hurlers, leaving no "ifs and ands" as to the rightful victor.

And thus ended the 1908 pennant race in the American League. A campaign that no doubt ranks without parallel in the history of baseball.

PUZZLING PLAYS

THE PLAY

When the umpire declares infield fly, what bearing does it have, if an outfielder ultimately handles the ball?

With the bases filled and one out, the batsman hits a high fly to short. The umpire thinks the ball can easily be handled by an infielder, and immediately rules it an infield fly, protecting the base runners.

The left fielder, playing in close, comes tearing in. The shortstop is all set to make the play.

The shortstop keeps calling that he will make the play, but it is unheeded by the left fielder. The shortstop at the last moment, to avert a collision, steps aside and permits the left fielder to make a play.

The left fielder muffed the ball and gave it a regular drop kick as it struck the ground. All three runners scored and the batsman reached second.

The team at bat claims the handling of the fly by an outfielder makes void the umpire's ruling of infield fly.

What about it?

THE INTERPRETATION

If, in the opinion of the umpire, the shortstop was able to make a play on the fly ball, and he declared it an "infield fly" the batsman was cut under the rule, even though an outfielder actually handled the ball and then muffed it. The three runs, of course, scored.

SISLER MAY NOT PLAY BALL AGAIN

Great St. Louis Star is Worrying Over the Slowness With Which His Right Eye Responds to Treatment.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 31.—George Sisler will not play any baseball for the St. Louis Browns this year. He does not even intend to don a uniform and work out.

At the opening of the season Sisler planned to get back into the game by August 15. It was his hope to get into the final series with New York here. His attending physicians had assured him there would be no doubt about it.

But Sisler still isn't playing. The doctors now tell him there isn't a chance for him to get into the fray this season.

While St. Louis fandom and baseball enthusiasts the country over are disappointed because Sisler's condition has not improved enough to permit his playing, no one regrets the situation more than Sisler.

"I am beginning to worry over the slowness with which my right eye is responding to treatment. I felt sure I would be back in the game long before this," says Sisler.

"Physically I am in perfect condition. I can play a good game of golf. Hitting the stationary golf ball doesn't bother me, but following the flight of a baseball even as a spectator is often confusing.

"Up until now I have been very optimistic as to my chances of getting back into the game shortly. The improvement in my vision, however, has been of such a slight nature in the last eight or ten weeks that I am beginning to worry.

"I am positive that baseball is out of the question as far as 1923 is concerned. Next year is also debateable. I get hundreds of letters daily from well wishers. Some merely express sympathy and good wishes, but a majority offer cures and suggestions as to what I should do. It would take me years to try every remedy that has been offered me.

"Of course, I hope to get back into baseball some time in the near future, but that is as positive as I can be about my chances."

There are some medical experts who express grave doubts as to whether Sisler will ever play again. They are of the opinion that the condition of the paralyzed nerve will always remain such, that baseball will be out of the question.

Unquestionably Sisler's mental state is not what it would be were he showing gradual improvement. For that reason it is not believed that he will accept the management of the club unless he is able to play and do his bit.

Dundee Works Hard For Coming Battle.

BY BOB DORMAN.

ORANGE, N.J., Aug. 31.—Johnnie Dundee is working harder at his training now than he ever worked before.

Not even the licks he put in when he was getting ready for Criqui equaled the work he is now doing in preparation for his bout with Benny Leonard.

Dundee is smart enough to know that the stories that have been printed about Leonard's weight (which stories have been attributed to him) have only served to make the lightweight champion furious.

He knows that Leonard, despite the fact that he was in the best shape of his career when he met Lew Tendler a few weeks ago, is going at it more strenuous than ever, in order to be in the best possible condition, so that he may eliminate Dundee once and for all.

Yet Dundee does not show any signs of nervousness.

With a wad of chewing gum stuck away in his mouth, he calmly goes through his daily stunts.

"Why should I worry?" he asks. "I have faced Leonard in the ring eight times, and he never has been able to more than shade me.

"And in those fights he never had to make weight for me.

"I believe that if he makes the lightweight limit this time that I will be able to get the decision over him, the same as I got it over Criqui.

"I have always wanted to hold the two titles and always some misfortune or other has intervened to prevent me from even winning one. But now my luck has changed, and with the featherweight crown in my possession, I feel sure that my other ambition is to be realized. I'm confident I'll win the lightweight championship."

More "Full o' Pep" than ever. Canada's foremost character comedian "Red' Newman will be here again in all new material at the Grand Opera House, Monday (Labor Day) and Tuesday Sept 3-4 with the world famous Originals in "Rapid Fire" (The cast including 15 members of the Original Dumbells).

REPRISALS ARE THREATENED BY OSHAWA CREW

Are Protesting That Oulette and Brownscombe Are Not Bona-Fide Residents of Belleville.

OSHAWA, Aug. 31.—Amid scenes of wild excitement the conquering Oshawa baseball team returned here last night, only to be informed that their victories over Belleville had been thrown out by the Central Ontario Baseball Association, and that Belleville, beaten in two games out of three by the locals, have been declared champions and ordered to play against the St. Patrick's team of Ottawa in the O. B. A. A. series. Now Oshawa will protest two of the Belleville players.

When the train reached the station three thousand fans were on hand to applaud the locals. Pitcher Dainty, the storm centre and who has been declared ineligible, was given a vociferous welcome. The fans crowded into the Armouries, where laudatory speeches were given by Mayor Trick and other local officials. The Ontario Regiment Band provided the music.

The Executive officers of the Oshawa Club are very incensed over the decision arrived at by the C. O. B. L., and charge that Secretary Nott, who resides here, is largely to blame. Neutral followers of the sport, however, are willing to admit that the C.O.B.L. Executive and Secretary Nott merely followed the O.B.A.A. ruling in regard to the residence rule. Dainty has admitted that he does not qualify.

But down in Belleville there are two players in the same situation as far as local officials can learn. Pitcher Oulette and Infielder Brownscombe are the men, and the local club has protested that they do not qualify under the January 1 residence rule. The Ottawa St. Patrick's team and the O.B.A.A. Executive have been informed of the action taken by Oshawa.

GOOD BALL BILL FOR SATURDAY

Cobourg and Leafs in O. B. A. A. Semi-Final at Three O'clock.

Maple Leafs wind up their training for the first game of the O.B.A.A. semi-finals, with a workout this evening, and the team will be in good shape for Saturday's contest with Cobourg at Riverside Park. "Chuck" Bradley, the Leafs' pitching ace, and Ab. Delahaye, his catcher, are going good and the fans should see some smart battery work. Cobourg will be represented by a strong team.

The game will start at three o'clock. As the winner of the series enters the finals for the Ontario championship, it is hoped that the ball fans will turn out and support the Leafs in their efforts to get away with a win.

CURLERS TIE UP MIDGET SERIES

Catch Masterson Off His Stride and Win Easily by 15 to 6.

Curlers caught "Casey" Masterson, a "thousand miles" away from his usual form, and won an easy victory over Sacred Heart last evening, the score being 15 to 6. The win gave Curlers the second half of the Midget series and the two teams will now battle for the championship.

Curlers won the toss and Sacred Heart opened the contest with three runs, Masterson driving in two with a double. Curlers scored six runs in their half MacDonald and Barrie batting twice. Masterson was going so badly that he forced in a run on a charity his fourth pass of the frame.

Wood developed a wild streak in the second passing three batters, and was lucky to survive with only one run being scored.

Curlers scored again in their half, and missed another when McLeish failed to touch third base.

Sacred Heart were held away from the plate in the third but Curlers got three runs on four, hits Barrie getting a double.

Two runners went home for Sacred Heart in the fourth without a hit, O'Brien stealing over the plate, with the assistance of Baker who had an interference play called on him.

Curlers came back with three runs Baker starting the rally with smash over the stone wall. The ball hit a barn and bounded out to the playing field.

Sacred Heart went out in a row in the fifth. Curlers scored two, with McDougal pitching, Barrie was passed and stole. He made third and went home when O'Brien let a throw get away. McLeish tripled to deep centre and scored when Kenneally allowed the throw in to pass on.

THEATRES

Pilo Entertainment

"The Spoilers" is at the Capitol Theatre, and anybody who ever read Rex Beach's Alaskan gold rush will want to see the screen version of his compelling story. Little has been changed in the photographing of the tale, and the result makes an exceptionally interesting picture, vital, intense, dramatic with action and life in every minute, from the beginning when Glenister rescues Helen Chester from a pursuing boat in her wild dash of escape from the smallpox stricken "Ohio," to the final mad episode, in a fistic battle which has probably no parallel in screen annals. An observer would come to the conclusion that here is one movie play fight that has nothing faked about it.

When Glenister, the defrauded owner of the "Midas" gold mine, and the "spoiler," Alex. McNamara, finally come to blows, there are two red-blooded men to deal with, and the result makes the spectators sit up and gasp. It is one of the bloodiest and most spectacular fistfights ever staged. Glenister's "buddy," old Dextry, stands guard with a revolver to keep would be intruders at bay, and the two men fight it out. With a wreck office behind him, clothing in rags, Glenister finally breaks his antagonist's arm, and rests content, broken and gasping.

Action, swift and thrilling, is the keynote of the picture. The Alaskan gold rush forms the background for an absorbing story of greed and graft, of romance and jealousy and passion. Milton B. Sills is ideal as Roy Glenister, the hero of the piece, and Anna Q. Nilsson takes the second place as Cherry Malotte, familiar to Rex Beach's readers as the large hearted adventuress of "The Spoilers." Miss Nilsson's characterization is marred somewhat by her passion for dress. Even in the mud and storm of the Alaskan night she appears gowned like a society debutante, and there is also a small discrepancy in the attire of the heroine, Helen Chester, played by the beautiful and new Barbara Bedford. In the scene in which a gasping husky goes mad with the heat of the short Alaskan summer, the young lady appears with a heavy coat, cap and scarf. Otherwise the picture's detail work is perfection.

Alaskan dance halls, in the reign of Gold, Alaskan mines, blown to pieces by infuriated owners, Alaskan manners and custom, dominate a red-blooded and vital picture, played with force and passion, and thrilling from start to finish.

There is a good comedy to accompany the feature, a fantastic affair revolving about the adventures of a kidnapped baby, "Bjork," prize-winner at a baby show.

AT THE ROYAL.

Riot of Color in Feature — Entire Production Well Done

For sheer pictorial beauty few motion pictures have ever approached the perfection reached in the production of Bertha M. Clay's immortal romance, "Thorns and Orange-Blosoms," which opened yesterday at the Royal theatre.

The story transpires in Madrid where luxuriant gardens, shadowy patios and tropical sunsets, delight the eyes. Estelle Taylor, who plays Rosita, the facinating prima donna contributes a Spanish type of beauty which off-sets her gorgeous costumes of richly embroidered shawls, high combs, lovely fans and mantillas of rare lace.

Nor is the lovely setting lessened when the plot moves the action to Louisiana. Here the audience sees the dignified and colonial home of a southern gentleman with all the atmosphere of plantation life. Edith Roberts as his daughter is the idealized type of American girlhood, and makes one of the most charming young brides ever to grace our screen.

But while the mounting of the feature and the quality which Mr. Schulberg has given to the production is a continual delight, the audience is carried along with a story of fine drama and tense reality. To divulge the plot would be an injustice to those who are to see the film but it is sufficient to say that it is the story of a young American merchant who is brought to choose between an infatuation for a famous opera singer and the love of a childhood sweetheart. One fails to this season in the revue at the London Hippodrome.

The box office is now open and patrons are reminded to make early reservations.

One fails to wonder that the story has long been a favorite with Canadian readers and that the stage play has held a record for popularity.

The comedy "The Four-Flusher" caused many laughs and "Jack Mulhall in the Social Bucanneers" seemed to please the audience judging from the reception it received. This program is repeated to-night and Saturday at 2.30 and 8. The "Sporting Earl" is being advertised for the holiday attraction.

"THE SPORTING EARL."

Monday will be a big day for theatre-goers as the big English production, "The Sporting Earl," will start its four days' run at the Royal. "The Sporting Earl" is one of the most popular English pictures that ever came over to Canada. It is somewhat on the style of the former big American successes, "Mickey" and "The Whip," having all the delightful comedy of the one and the hurricane action of the other. The story of "The Sporting Earl" concerns Sir Horace Pilkington, Baronet, who leaves an eccentric will, by virtue of which one of his nephews inherits his entire fortune, and the other nephew, afterwards known as "The Sporting Earl," is left the Baronet's racing stable. "The Sporting Earl," without a single ha'penny to his name, is the possessor of a stable of horses which includes "Cheerio 'Arf a Mo'," known throughout English sporting circles as the fastest and gamest horse that ever went over the Ascot water jump. The picture is full of laughs, thrills, fights, steeplechases; includes a big fire, and centres around the story of the Baronet's will, which is nothing short of whizz-bang.

The cast includes Victor Herbert as "The Sporting Earl," and Lillian Hall-Davis as the girl in the case.

GREEK REPLY IS UNSATISFACTORY

Decided the Italian Cabinet at a Meeting oday—Martial Law in Greece.

LONDON, Aug. 31.—(Canadian Press).—The Italian Cabinet at a meeting to-day found the Greek reply to its ultimatum to be unacceptable, the Stefani Agency says.

An ultimatum from Jugo-Slav Comitadjis (irregulars) demanding that the Internatonal Commission engaged in delimiting boundary between Albana and Jugo-Slavia suspend its work forthwith has been received by the Albanian Legation in Rome, according to an Exchange telegraph despatch from the Italian Capital. The Albanian Government it adds has protested to the Italian French and British governments and also to the Ambasadors conference in Paris, which has charge of the delimitation work.

MARKET STEADY UNDER A CLOUD

Acted Well in the Face of trike Menace and Balkan Tempest.

NEW YORK, Aug. 31.—In view of the strained relations between Greece and Italy and the probability of the suspension of anthracite production at midnight, stocks acted well in the early dealings. Davison Chemical had an abrupt drop of 3½ points to 51½, but this was not unnatural, taking into consideration the extent of its recent advance.

Among the industrial leaders the decline was more orderly; Baldwin dropped a full point, but losses in Steel, American Canadian and Studebaker were fractional. Rails continued to display a steady tone, with Northern Pacific leading. Stocks steadied after the initial selling had been absorbed, and a rallying tendency ensued throughout the list.

With the speculative leaders stronger, pool operators were encouraged to resume activity in their favorites, and a number of sharp advances took place in specialties.

Willys Overland Pfd., which was reported to be under the same auspices as Davison Chemical, emulated the latter's example by spurting five points on light sales. Hendee Mfg. was another prominent specialty with a net income with a gain of several points on a few transactions. At 17 the stock was still about twelve points below the recent high. In the fiscal year ending this month Hendee will show about $3 on the Common. The directors meet in October, and it is anticipated the stock will go on a $2 dividend basis.

Opening prices included: Utah Copper 59 3-4, off ¼; North American 22¼, off 1-8; New Haven 13 1-8, off 1-8; United States Steel 92 3-4; General Motor 15⅜; Consolidated Gas 62¼, off 1-8; Reading 75⅜; Northern Pacific 50¼, up ⅜; Anaconda 40, off 1-8; American Can. 97 3-4, off 3-4; Bethlehem Steel 53⅝ ex-div.; Baldwin 123 3-4, off 1; Texas Com. 42 3-4, up ¼; Studebaker 105¼, off 3-4; N.Y. C. 99 3-4, off ¼; Davison Chemical 51¼, off 3¼.

AUNT AND MAID HELD ON CHARGE OF SLAYING BOY

Woman's Garter Gives Clue to Murder of Lad Found Bound With Head Crushed.

THE AUNT'S STORY

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—Anna Sobin, 16 years old, a maid in the household of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rothenberg, and Mrs. Esther Litt, of Brooklyn, aunt of Howard Rothenberg, 7 years old, were held by the authorities of Greene County as material witnesses in connection with the murder of the Rothenberg boy at Windham, N.Y., early Wednesday morning. It was said, however, that Mrs. Litt probably would be released shortly.

The body of the boy, who was the son of a rich Newark hat manufacturer, was taken home by his parents for burial in Newark. The Rothenbergs, prostrated at their loss, were attempting to fathom the mystery of the death of their son, and announced after a day in which they were constantly in touch with the Greene County authorities, that considerable progress toward the solution of the crime had been made.

The little boy, who had been spending his vacation at Windham with his parents at a summer boarding house, was found murdered in bushes a few blocks from the boarding house after a search had been instituted by his mother when he did not return home for lunch on Wednesday. The body was found behind an old sawmill, the head crushed, apparently by a blunt instrument, a gag tied over the mouth and the hands tied tightly behind his back.

When her son's body was found Mrs. Rothenberg became hysterical and cried out that she knew who had committed the crime, but at the inquest later in the day she was unable to aid the authorities to any great extent because of her emotion. It was not until Thursday, it was learned, that she recalled points which the authorities said had greatly helped them in their investigation.

The boy's father was not in Windham when the body was found, and while hastening to the up-State town in an automobile his car crashed into Motorcycle Policeman Edward Bonnet in Newark, who was chasing a speeder. Bonnet was killed, but Rothenberg was exonerated of blame for the accident and continued on his way to Windham.

Mrs. Rothenberg told Sheriff Albert W. Pierce, District Attorney Charles Coffin, and State troopers conducting a search for the slayer, that the boy had left the house early in the morning without awakening her as had been his custom. Each day, she said, little Howard, who occupied the same sleeping quarters as Anna Sobin, the maid, ran into her room and kissed her. Mrs. Rothenberg said she occupied a room with her daughter, June.

"I awoke at 7.30 o'clock," she said in Newark, "and discovered that both Howard and Anna were not in the house. I waited until 8 o'clock until Anna came back and then asked her what had become of Howard. She said she had gone out with the boy to mail a letter and had left him down the road. She said he was going fishing. The letter she said she mailed was to her step-mother, who lives in New York."

ROYAL THEATRE CHANGES HANDS

The official opening of the popular Royal Theatre, under the management of the Dominion Films, Ltd., takes place on Monday. An orchestra has been secured, and Peterborough theatre-goers can now see the pick of the recent bigger British productions.

The feature for Monday, "The Sporting Earl," will be the first of these.

"Rob Roy," now at Massey Hall, is booked for an early showing, also "A Royal Divorce," "Me and My Gal," "Squibs Wins the Calcutta Sweeps," and "Dick Turpin's Ride to York."

Among the American productions booked for the near future are "The Girl Who Came Back," "Main Street," and the choice of all the independent producers' products.

Proper attention will be given the musical interpretation of the photo-plays ,and many new novelties are promised.

SERIOUS ISSUE BEFORE LEAGUE

Greeco-Italian Situation Will Be Taken Up Today Greeks Ask For Intervention.

GENEVA, Sept. 1. — (Canadian Press.)—The League of Nations will take up the Greeco-Italian situation this afternoon. Greece's demand for intervention by the League was received at League headqaurters before the opening of the morning session and the assembled representatives of the various powers were immediately informed that the most serious problem with which the League has yet had to deal would be presented later in the day.

The Greek appeal to the League was dispatched before the occupation of Corfu by the Italians. It asks for intervention under Articles 12 and 15 of the covenant.

The League is informed from its own sources, however, that a number of refugees were killed and wounded in the Corfu bombardment.

What was the cause of the pursuit the pursuers refused to say, but he dashed from his store, hatless and coatless, and gave the boys a merry run.

The chase took a course down George Street, via Hunter and Alymer Streets to the boys' home, near Simcoe. Spectators say the boys led a narrow margin all the way.

FALL OF GREEK GOVERNMENT IS NOW PREDICTED

Pressure of Occupation and Killing of Greek Citizens by Shells May Force Resignation.

WOMEN KILLED

ATHENS, Sept. 1.—(Special). — The fall of the present Greek Government appeared imminent to-day under pressure of the occupation of Corfu and the killing of fifteen Greek citizens by Italian shell fire.

Former Premier Zamus is expected to be asked to form a new Government.

The Greek Government is wildly excited over the bombardment of Corfu. Several women were included among those killed by the Italian shell fire. They had taken refuge in the Police Station when the bombardment opened. A shell then hit the Police Station, killing and wounding many in the building. Meantime Italian Ambassador Metagna notified the Greek Foreign Office to-day that the Italian occupation of Corfu will continue until Greece has met all conditions of the ultimatum delivered by Premier Mussolini.

Deport Greeks.

It is reported that the Italians plan to deport all Greeks from Corfu, transporting them to Italy.

The Cabinet met with Premier Conatas to-day, going over the serious situation that has arisen in detail. The Premier declared that he would not reply to Italy's second note delivered yesterday, but would comply with any decisions that might be rendered by the League of Nations. It is understood that the Greek protest forwarded to the League at Geneva declares that the Corfu bombardment was in complete violation of international law.

A separate protest has also been forwarded to the Allied Governments.

Near Greek Panic.

The internal situation meanwhile is growing increasingly serious. The drachma fell heavily to-day, creating a near panic in the banks.

The Greek troops which were stationed in the Corfu fortress have been withdrawn to the interior of the island.

The Prefect and Greek officials who remained in the fort were arrested by the Italians.

WAR REPORTS HAD NO EFFECT

Efforts to Capitalize Developments on Stock Market Bore Little Fruit.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Sept. 1.—(United Press.)— Professional efforts to capitalize the war-like developments in Europe bore little fruit in the brief session on the stock market which closed the week. Davison Chemical experienced a headlong decline, an occurrence which probably had a more disturbing effect upon the general list than the foreign dispatches or the domestic labor difficulties. But even this factor failed to give any material assistance to the bearish cause and losses among the standard stocks were confined to a comparatively narrow area.

Rails held up especially well under selling pressure, reflecting the optimism of several leading executives who this week expressed the belief that traffic would continue in about its present large volume for the remainder of the year, but without reaching such proportions as would bring congestion and abnormal operating expenses.

The railroads are carrying more freight than they ever did before, but they still have considerable reserve capacity, thanks to the extraordinary efforts to put all facilities in first-class condition and accelerate car movements. On the whole 1923 will be the best earnings year the railroads have had since 1915 and this fact is reflected in improving credit. Davison Chemical', however, in the drop, unsettled the whole market at the start of the second hour and selling was renewed among the individuals. American Can declined to 79 7-8 and similar recessions took place in other leaders. Colorado fuel, however, retained most of its recent gain, which was attributed in speculative circles to reports of oil discoveries on its property.

One transaction of 5,600 shares in Davison Chemical at 46 represented the lumping of a number of stop loss orders above 48, when the price was reached at which these orders became effective, the specialists called members of the business conduct committee of the exchange into the crowd and 46 was agreed on as a fair price.

Stocks opened at general recessions, reflecting the beginning of the anthracite strike and the opening of hostilities between the Italians and the Greeks. Baldwin, Can, Bethlehem Steel, Studebaker and other industrial leaders showed fractional losses on the initial transactions and the active rails also started lower.

ITALIAN NAVAL UNITS ARE NOW HEADING FAST FOR ADRIATIC WATERS

But Italian Government Officially Announces That Occupation of Corfu Will Probably be Limit of Italian Advance for Present.

BLOCKADE NEXT

ROME, Italy, Sept. 1.—(Special). — Italian naval units which have been stationed at Spezia and Venice, now are steaming for southern Adriatic waters in full war status and eight transports are held in readiness in case there are further eventualities

The Italian government has officially announced that occupation of Corfu probably will be the limit of Italian advances for enforcement of sanctions, and that there consequently will be a short breathing spell.

Occupy Samoas.

The next movement against Greece will be occupation of the Island of Samos, it was reported in Rome today. Occupation of Corfu and Samos will then be followed by a general blocade of Greece according to reports.

A report comes from Athens that Samos has been occupied by Italians.

Tantamount To War.

LONDON, Sept. 1.—Italy's action in bombarding and occupying Corfu, in contravention of neutrality of Island, guaranteed in perpetuity by treaty of 1864, in which Great Britain ceded Corfu to Greece, is considered in military and diplomatic quarters in London as tantamount to declaration of war upon Greece and as constituting flagrant violation of international law.

The gravest apprenhension is felt over possible further moves by Italy. If the government should ignore intervention of the league of nations and the independent efforts of the Allied Council of Ambassadors for an amicable solution of the crisis military experts see danger of war spreading throughout South Eastern Europe.

It is recalled that Jugo Slavia is linked by Royal marriage to Greece and moreover that Greece received from Jugo Slavia only a few months ago certain promises of support in event of being attacked by another country. In return for which Jugo Slavia was given the use of Saloniki as a free port of entry for arms of war and merchandise.

Continued Enmity.

Allied observers also refer to continued enmity between Jugo Slavia and Italy over Fiume and Dalmatian questions, which they regard as an important factor in favor of Greece if open hostilities should ensue between Athens and Rome.

Rumania also has dynastic ties with Greece, it is pointed out, and in case of a declaration of war by Italy on Hellenic kingdom, the Bucharest government might be expected, in the opinion of military men, to lend active support to Greece

Two Classes Reserves

Italy plans to call out two classes of military reservists according to advices here. Italian reservists in London have been ordered to hold themselves in readiness for service.

Allied diplomats in Athens are preparing to present a note to the Greek government urging acceptance of Italy's ultimatum without reservation, a central news despatch reported to-day.

Paris says that owing to the possibility of trouble in the Balkans, growing out of the Greeco-Italian situation, Queen Mary of Roumania is enroute to Bucharest to-day, the Queen left Paris hurriedly last night, cancelling all engagements.

PAINT REMOVER.

Strong liquid ammonia or a strong solution of potash or washing soda, will dissolve paint or varnish.

Great Britain is Awaiting Results of League Action

LONDON, Sept. 1. — (Canadian Press).—Great Britain will intervene actively in the Greco-Italian imbroglio only if Italy refuses to accept arbitration by the League of Nations, the Council of which meets at Geneva at four o'clock this afternoon to consider the whole critical situation.

It is announced that the Government thus far has not instructed the British Ambassador at Rome or the diplomatic representative at Athens to use their good offices toward the settlement of the dispute, it being felt that the controversy for the moment is one for the League to settle.

CLAIM ISLAND BEFORE DYING

Bottle Found on Wrangel Gives Sovereignity to King George—Sought Mainland.

NOME, Alaska, Sept. 1.—(Canadian Press).—An Eskimo woman, named Ada, the only surviving member of the Crawford expedition to Wrangel Island, and whose husband, Black Jack, died here, said that Allan Crawford, of Toronto, leader of the expedition; Frederick Maurer, New Philadelphia, Ohio, and Milton Galle, New Brauenfels, Texas, went over the ice last winter, seeking the mainland, and never were seen afterwards. This left in the party only Lorne E. Knight, McMinville, Oregon, and Ada. Knight, died of scurvy June 30, 1923, and his body was brought here by Captain Noice on the Donaldson.

Claimed the Island.

The first thing the Noice party found on the island was a bottle in a deserted camp. The bottle contained the names of the party, with the declaratjon that they claimed Wrangel Island in the name of King George of Great Britain.

The Donaldson arrived at Wrangel Island August 20 and left Sunday. She was forced to halt nine days, 55 miles north of the island, on her way to it, and after the weather cleared, bucked her way through the ice for the 55 miles.

While bucking the ice the Donaldson stove a hole in her bow. This was repaired by placing a large walrus hide around the bow. The journey was completed in a heavy fog, the Donaldson lying near Herald Island, east of Wrangel.

JEWS TO HOLD CONFERENCE.

NEW YORK, September 1 (United Press). — A national conference of leading Jews of America to consider the condition of Judaism in this country, to strengthen its religious and cultural institutions, and to draw the younger generation closer to the synagogue, will be held here on 7th October.

The men who are issuing the call for the conference feel that the time has come for the Jews of America to give serious thought to the problem of Judaism in this country which had to be neglected since 1914, when they gave themselves over to the task of helping their co-religionists in Eastern Europe and Palestine, for whose relief they have raised upward of $60,000,000.

Seize Plane Near a Liquor Fleet; Called the Observer for Rum Row

NEW YORK, September 1. — What Federal Prohibition agents described as an "eye" of Rum Row, was closed yesterday, when the crew of the Coastguard cutter Seminole seized two men and a hydro-aeroplane near the liquor rum-running fleet off the Jersey Coast.

The prisoners, who were later paroled for hearing this morning at the Custom House, were William Hughes of 9 Harding Terrace, Newark, and E. A. Shaw, Manhattan, and the Raritan Inn, Keyport, N.J. They said they were ex-pilots of the Royal Flying Corps.

According to the Federal officers, Hughes said that he had purchased the plane for $2,000, and had made several trips with passengers from Keyport to the liquor flotilla. The agents also said Hughes told them that he had furnished information to two men, called "Freeman" and "Hogan," about the exact location of certain of the rum ships. He said that he was paid for the information at the rate of $75.00 an hour.

The mission yesterday, the agents said, was to locate the French steamship Grebevillier. According to the agents, Hughes said he "picked up" the ship and the wireless had told him that she was about to turn back to her home port because of a disabled propellor. The ship was two days overdue. The charge for their information, the pilots said, according to the agents, was to be $275.00.

A monkey wrench, however, dropped from the side of the engine and into the propeller of the plane, breaking it. This forced them to come down to the surface more than 500 feet from the nearest rum runner.

The agents said that no evidence of liquor was found in the aircraft, and that both men denied ever having been on one of the ships.

Their plane was towed to Fort Hamilton and placed under guard.

LOTS OF FOWL GRACE MARKET THIS MORNING

What They Do Not Sell the Farmers Take Home to Eat—Corn in Evidence.

LISTLESS BUYING

In the basket section of the farmers' market, buying was listless this morning. Fowl was very plentitful. There were ducks and chickens and hens, the two latter in all ages and all shades, from a deep yellow to a pale white. Some of them were all dressed up with garniture of parsley. With legs stiffly trussed, with and without heads, they waited in long rows for purchasers who did not purchase to any great extent.

A young lady who stuck fast at an opening price that had been lowered all around her by two or three cents declared firmly that she would take her eggs home and pack them, if they remained unsold. Asked what she would do with a plentiful supply of butter that remained unsold, she said she would "eat it," which is one way of disposing of one's products if they remain unsought-after. Having no fowl for sale, she didn't say what she might have done with it, but the presumption is that she would probably eat that too, with a nice butter sauce. Such a condition of affairs arouses in a casual mind a vision of a fat and well-fed rural community consuming its own produce with gusto and satisfaction, while a lean and hungry urban population looks on in despair, either unable or unwilling to pay the prices asked.

Butter opened at 40 cents a pound, but dropped by degrees to 37 cents. Eggs were 33 cents a dozen in the beginning, receding by degrees to a low-water mark of 26 cents. Chickens ranged in price from 35 to 29 cents a pound, and hens were 25 cents. Duck was 30 cents a pound.

Downstairs Brisk.

Downstairs, there were plenty of buyers under a hot sun. Corn was much in evidence, not all of it, however, of a very good quality. Much appeared of a stunted type, and sold for 20 cents a dozen. Golden Bantam was 25 cents a dozen, "with one extra for the baby," as a cheerful dealer phrased it, as he popped a baker's dozen into an open basket. Apples also were much in demand. A good quality of Wealthy was 50 cents a peck, Maidens' Blush was 35, and a variety called a Strawberry apple, with an exterior whose one side showed green and the other side red, was also 50 cents a peck.

There were plenty of plums, green gages and purples, at 10 and 20 cents a quart or 85 cents for a large basket. They had a good sale.

Tomatoes, in small and large baskets, were 50 and 70 and 75 cents; small cauliflowers, whose owner regarded them with a disparaging eye that made them look poorer than ever, were 10 cents apiece; a big pie squash was 20 cents, and potatoes were down to 50 cents a peck.

Little pigs sold for $9 a pair. A small boy regarded with a curious eye the enquiring-looking duck head that thrust itself from a crated box. Three lively inmates were listed as an Italian Runner, a white yellow-bill worth $2.50, and two ducks of Rouen breed, with deep green feathers showing through their mild brown plumage, were $1.50 apiece.

Crabapples Present.

Early crabapples were on one cart at 50 cents for a large measure.

Honey, clear greenish gold, was 35 cents a glass, the amber variety with dandelion basis, was the same price, and 5-pound cans were 75c and 80c. Honey in the comb, protected from the sun's rays, was 30 cents.

A pure-bred White Wyandotte rooster in a crate had a price of $2.50 on his head, and the hens were $1.00 a-piece.

Gherkins in a large basket were $1.00, and vegetable marrows 20c a-piece.

A serious-looking gentleman whose one aim in life seemed to be the acquisition of cucumbers, had quite a time in locating some, at 75 cents for a large basket, and a Celestial restarauteur was interested in the long "telegraph" variety without seeds.

Green and red peppers, shiny and fresh, were 40 cents per dozen.

One vendor had wild grapes at 75 cents a basket.

In the entry ,two small boys whistled over their crisp celery bunches, and the foreign fruit dealer cried peaches at $1.50 a basket.

Flowers were many and various in both sections this morning. An eye for artistic arrangement brought many admirers to the car where gypsophila, or baby's breath, made lovely the feathery astera in delicate shades, prominent among them the new and beautiful pale yellow.

In his button-hole, the auctioneer wore a white and rose-splashed

GEORGE EVANS WAS ARRESTED

Charged Today With Driving an Automobile While Intoxicated—Remanded.

George Evans, charged with driving an automobile while intoxicated, was this morning remanded by Magistrate O. A. Langley until Tuesday, September 11. J. F. Strickland prosecuted and M. J. O'Brien appeared for the accused. Bail was set at $2,000, with two securities of $1,000 each.

While the police were reported inactive in the matter yesterday they were quietly gathering evidence, and about 5 o'clock Evans was taken into custody. He was later released on $1,000 bail, and appeared in police court this morning.

Investigated Immediately.

When intelligence of the accident in which Miss Sadie Brown, a nurse in Nicholls Hospital was injured while returning home from the graduation exercises on Thursday night, was received by the police yesterday morning, detectives were immediately despatched to investigate. County Constable Pearson was instructed to interview the young lady, her home being in Provincial territory, and members of the police force interrogated Evans.

The injured young lady rested well last night and is reported much improved this morning.

TORONTO, September 1 (Canadian Press).—Service to the people is the watchword of Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission. Financial soundness, coupled with ever growing accomplishment, is already finding its reflection in greater benefits to the people of this Province.

Today the Hydro-Electric system, together with the municipalities, has a reserve of $24,000,000. Financial soundness is the keynote of the whole enterprise."

COTTAGERS ARE CLOSING UP AT CHEMONG PARK

School Reopening Bringing Many Families Into Town in One of Loveliest Months.

MASQUERADE DANCE

CHEMONG PARK, Sept. 1st — (By Staff Reporter). — Chemong Park went to the masquerade dance at the Renderzvous Pavilion, last night. The summer residents and dancers from the city one-stepped and trotted through a long, mildly warm evening, and the rest of the Park people sat and stood outside and watched them.

There was a good attendance at the dance, with the majority, however, in ordinary attire. Some fifteen or twenty came in fancy dress and provided lights of color in the shifting kaleidscope of light-hued frocks and dark suits.

Miss Columbia, with gilt helmet and flag draped over her white frock, was there, and Jenny Lind in crinoline and pale green satin skirts. An ebony negro with red buttonhole rose stepped with a harem lady in flowing purple satin trousers and orange veil, and a gallant cavalier wearing plum-colored velvet suit and tricotine hat escorted a pretty lady in blue velvet. Oriental costume, with tinsel bands and long Titian curls.

There were gypsies in reds and yellows, 'little girl" types with rolled stockings, huge hair-bows and all-day suckers, a Wild West cowboy, a bride in full regalia of white, complete with veil, gloves orange blossoms and bouquet, and a pair who attracted a great deal of attention did a "pasha" dance in languishing fashion throughout the entire evening. The gentleman was a fierce Arabian shiek, with purple cloak and grey burnoose, and the 'lady' wore a marvellous black coiffure, a pink satin gown with bustle, and long white pantalettes.

The Prizes.

Prizes, boxes of chocolates, went to the following:—Miss Clara Dreher, of Philadelphia, as a Harem Favorite, (Miss Dreher is a guest of Mrs. A. A. Perrin), to two resideuts of the Park, in Miss Margaret McFarlane of Toronto, as Jackie Coogan, and Jerry Coulthard as a negro, and to the two city boys who impersonated the Arab shiek and his early Victorian lady friend; Ken Greene and 'Bud' Sage. Judges for the occasion were Mrs. W. R. Morris, Mrs. F. P. McNulty, Mrs. E. J. McCarthy, Hunter street, Mrs. F. Whitehouse and Mrs. R. Jones.

Dainty Things For Chic Women

(By Hedda Hoyt.)

NEW YORK, N. Y., Sept. 1. — (United Press.)—"Half a leg! Half a leg! Half a leg onward!" shout the half-socked devotees of the tennis courts. Some of them are wearing no stockings at all, preferring the cool comfort of bare limbs. The contrast between the white tennis shoes and the sunbrowned ankles is attractive to say the least.

Among the new sports attire for early fall wear are little suede jumpers made in dull colors and trimmed in colorful appliques, or steel nailheads. These slip on over the head with a front opening which laces together with a narrow suede cord. Collars are smart little standing affairs, done in color to correspond with the hip border. There is one of brown suede with a hip band of appliqued motifs in colors orange, black and dull green. Cuffs and collar likewise use the colored decoration The girl who does a great deal of walking through the country roads and byways will find these little jaunting jacquettes ideal.

Little yachting coats made of white suede are creating quite a sensation at the smart Long Island resorts. They offer a relief from the over-popular sweater and as for chic and warmth, they prove worthy rivals. White serge skirts, made on simple lines, are generally worn with them, although the season's favorite, the pleated skirt, is also in evidence.

Canadian Leader Died

Allan R. Crawford who met his death on Wrangel Island, on which he at the head of Stefansson's advance party, landed on September 15, 1921, was only 22 years old and was a son of Professor J. T. Crawford, 168 Walmer Road, who was deeply affected last night when the tragic message came. "This is terrible news," he said, adding that he had received no word of any kind from his son since a letter came bearing the date of landing upon Wrangel Island.

Allan Crawford, who was born in Hamilton, had lived in Toronto for eleven years prior to his leaving in 1921 on his mission to the Artic regions. It was considered by his many friends in Toronto and elsewhere that a remarkable honor had been done him in his appointment at the age of 20, he having had no previous experience in Artic exploration, to command the party which left Seattle, Washington for Nome Alaska.

Allan Crawford was a third student in the chemistry and mineralogy course of the University of Toronto. in 1918, he took the University of Toronto School's Matriculation Scholarship in Science and Mathematics. His only previous experience in scientific exploration was a member of one of the geological survey parties in Northern Ontario.

EMPLOYMENT OFFERED PENNILESS BRITISHERS.

Stranded in Calgary, the Canadian Pacific Officials Looked After Them.

CALGARY, Alta., Sept. 1.—(Special)—The positive statement was made to the Herald on Thursday by Arnold George, the Canadian Government immigration agent here, that there is not one single British harvester who has arrived in the city out of employment.

Some time ago he had reported to Winnipeg that there were twenty-five of these men here who had come into his office stating they were penniless and were unable to pay their fare to preferred jobs. When the matter was brought to the attention of the Canadian Pacific the men were immediately offered work on the construction, the company offering to feed them while en route to their work and provide them with blankets. Mr. George explained, however, that in the meantime the men secured work as harvesters, some of the farmers advancing their fares, and while in other cases they were sent to farms close to the city limits.

No British harvesters who have reported to me are now out of employment said the immigration official with emphasis.

THE MAINTENANCE MEN ALONE USE TOOLS TODAY IN HARD COAL DISTRICT

Company Officials and Workers Have Not Prepared for Long Suspension—155,000 Men Idle for Second Time in Year and Half

STOPPAGE IS COMPLETE

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 1—(Canadian Press).—There was an optimistic feeling through the anthracite coal regions of Pennsylvania that the suspension of mining which became effective to-day would not be long continued. For the second time in year and half the production of anthracite is suspended while the leaders of the union miners and representatives of the coal companies struggle at Harrisburg to reach an agreement on a new wage scale.

Reports from anthracite fields indicated total suspension. Although the hard coal fields are not( 100 per cent. organized, every man and boy is expected to refrain from work until differences are adjusted. In suspensions and strikes in recent years little trouble has attended the shutting down of the mines because no attempt has been made to operate them. So far no company has announced its intention to mine coal, while the unions' suspension is in effect.

May Resume Soon

If the suspension is lifted as a result of developments in Harrisburg, to-day the Mine workers would not resume operations before Tuesday. As Monday is Labor Day, which is always strictly observed throughout the hard coal fields about 155,000 men and boys are idle. The only men at work to-day, were maintenance men numbering about 4,000. They are pump runners, engineers, boiler house men and fan men. It is their duty to keep the mine free of water and gas and to prevent cave-ins.

The feeling that the suspension may not be long continued is shared not only by many mine workers but also by company officials This was indicated when no preparations were made for a long suspension such as bringing out the mules, dismantling the machinery and bringing company tools and supplies out of the workings. Tools and supplies belonging to the miners were taken out by the men, when they left their working places yesterday. From Pottsville came a report that miners took even their dynamite with them, and put it in safe places in their homes. The dynamite belongs to the men, as they have to purchase their own explosives.

This ship and her sister-ship, the Repulse, were built on the theory that speed was above armament but after the performance of the similar ship, the Invincible, in the battle of Jutland, this theory has been put in the waste basket.

The estimated cost of putting the Renown on a level with the best ship in her class will cost $4,000,000. She cost originally $15,000,000.

It is announced that the Board intends to begin the hearings of appeals as soon as the necessary machinery can be organized. ## ALBERTA MINERS IN UGLY TEMPER

Three Mines Are Closed—Men Didn't Consult the Union Officials.

CALGARY, Alta., Sept. 1.—(Canadian Press.)—Information received here late this afternoon from Drumheller, where trouble devlopd Thursday between striking coal miners and provincial police, indicated that while the situation had improved, the miners were still in an ugly mood.

Constable M. J. Light, who was badly beaten up on Thursday night, was much improved yesterday. No arrests have been made yet by the provincial police.

The Midland, Western Gem and Hygrade Mines are closed and are being closely picketed.

LABOUR DAY.

The place occupied by labour in the world is fittingly recognized on this Continent by the setting apart of the first Monday of September as an annual holiday in which all work shall as far as possible cease.

It is a recognition of labour in which everybody is glad to join, and although locally there is nothing in the way of a demonstration, the day will be observed in various centres by parades and games and speeches.

To Canadians Labour Day is a source of pleasure and regret, intermingled, the pleasure because it affords an opportunity to get out into the open air for the last holiday of the summer, and the regret because it signifies that the long winter is not far away and that the golden summer is almost passed.

At the Canadian National Exhibition the day is not only marked by speeches by notable labour leaders, but also by the largest day's attendance during the Exhibition.

The Examiner trusts that its readers will enjoy the holiday, wherever they may be, and that the weatherman will send his choicest brand of sunshine and blue skies to grace the occasion.

THE EXHIBITION.

The Peterborough Industrial Exhibition, which will be held during the week after next, is expected by the directors to attain to a new level in all departments.

Nothing that promises to add to the success of the Exhibition has been neglected, every member of the Fair Board has thrown himself into the preliminary work with even more than the usual enthusiasm, there have been steady and energetic efforts to improve various features of the Exhibition, and at this date the complete success of the annual undertaking would seem to be assured.

The only thing needed now—in addition to good weather—is the co-operation of the people of this district, both of the city and the country.

The Exhibition is not merely a Peterborough affair—it is an event in which every resident of the district has a vital and direct interest; they are all practically shareholders in the enterprise, and it is to their advantage to do everything in their power to ensure success.

And in the long run, it depends upon them.

The directors can work and plan and prepare, but if the people do not do their aprt as exhibitors and patrons then all the work and preparation in the world could not put the Exhibition over the top.

That they will co-operate as they have in the past the Examiner has no doubt, and because of that confidence looks forward to the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition setting a new record.

THE BANKING SITUATION.

The prophecy of Sir John Aird following the absorption of the Bank of Hamilton by the Canadian Bank of Commerce that further mergers may be anticipated has caused some fear as to the danger that a banking monopoly is approaching.

There does not seem to be any solid foundation for apprehension on that score.

There are still plenty of banks in this country, and even if one or two more were to drop out of existence via the absorption route there would be enough left to leave ample competition in the realm of finance.

On the other hand, amalgamations when they take place under circumstances such as those which surrounded the last merger improve the financial situation.

It is infinitely better that an institution that has been weak for some time should pass off the scene through amalgamation with some stronger bank than that it should continue to struggle on until the inevitable collapse materializes.

Anxiety over the general situation so far as the Canadian banks are concerned is not justified by the existing situation, and it is a pity that some faint-hearted depositors have worked themselves into a panic on the strength of foundationless rumours in regard to the financial institutions of this country.

THE ROTARY CAMP.

The Rotary Camp at Clear Lake was closed for the season at the beginning of this week after having housed four different quotas of boys during the summer.

The season has been a great success. The camps conducted by the Y.M.C.A., the Rotary Club and the Holy Name Society have been operated without accidents, and many boys have not only had a most enjoyable holiday, but have learned to take care of themselves both in and on the water.

The camp plant furnished by the Rotarians has been most complete, and the camp stands as a monument to the interest of the members of the club in the boys of this community.

No one movement on behalf of the boys of Peterborough has accomplished so much as the establishment of this splendid camp has been able to bring about, and the Rotary Club and the individuals and firms who have co-operated with them in various ways have earned the thanks of the community.

It is hard to estimate the value of this outing to many of the boys—in some cases, it may have meant the turning point in their lives.

The decision of the Rotary Club to provide such a complete camp site was an inspiration that has meant and will mean much to Peterborough.

SUBSIDIES AND THE BRITISH IMMIGRANT.

Canada as part of the British Empire is concerned not only with schemes of immigration designed adequately and successfully to populate our underpopulated country, but with schemes of migration the object of which is the more even distribution of British "blood" throughout the countries of the British League of Nations.

Since the war, more obviously than before it, the Empire is faced with the fact that within her borders millions on millions of acres of land are crying to be planted with homes, while one acre, here and there, is so congested that it is impossible for the dwellers therein to lead a decent, civilized life.

Since the war, more obviously than before it, the Empire is called upon to deal with the problem of unemployment in one section and scarcity of labor in another—the problem of the mateless woman in England and the lonely male emigrant at the other side of the world—the problem of the overworked mother on one hand and the out-of-work woman living on state subsidies at the other—the problem, say, of the Canadian farmer sorely in need of a "hand," and of the British agriculturist minus the money to bring himself out, to say nothing of his wife and children.

These problems must be faced and solved if the Empire is to remain preponderately British; if the United Kingdom is to be relieved of its burden of overpopulation and underemployment; if the Dominions are to be actually "settled."

It thus becomes of immense importance to Ontario, not only on her own count, but as part of the Dominion of Canada and of the British Empire, that our immigration policy should be lively and active enough to secure us such benefits as may be accruing to us in the way of immigration of state-assisted agricultural workers and domestic workers under the provisions of the Overseas Settlement Act passed by the British Parliament.

THE WESTERN HARVESTERS.

Twelve thousand men have been brought from the Old Country to help in the harvest fields of Western Canada and the employment officials of the Federal and Provincial Governments announce that every man willing to work has been given employment.

This is a fine record and credit is due to the Government officials and to the staffs of both railways not only for the energy with which they have tackled their task, but for the efficient manner in which the details of organization have been carried out.

When the annual conference of railway officials and employment commissioners was held at Winnipeg early in the summer it was estimated that fifty thousand farm hands would be required to gather this year's wheat crop. It was generally admitted that it would not be possible to draw such an army of harvesters from the Eastern Provinces and British Columbia. The Star, which has been conducting a campaign for many months past for more settlers to the Dominion, urged that the shortage of available labor in the Dominion opened the door to an experiment in immigration of infinite possibilities. For the first time in the history of Canada officials charged with the work of colonization and settlement went to Britain for the surplus labor. Of the 12,000 who answered the call a handful arrived in Winnipeg without funds to maintain them for the few days until employment was found for them or to transport them to the places where the grain was ready for cutting. Assistance was at once given to these men by the Federal Government and the transportation companies.

It was not likely that twelve thousand men could be rooted up from the only homes they had known and transported to a different country more than five thousand miles away without a few showing signs of discontent and dissatisfaction. It is unfortunate that a good deal of publicity has been given to the disgruntled few and exaggerated stories of men stranded and starving have come out of Winnipeg and other Western cities. These stories are cabled to Lancashire and Linlithgowshire, where they do incalculable harm.

Some rubbish was written about farmers not being willing to hire the newcomers on account of their lack of experience in agricultural work. There is not the slightest reason why a man coming from Great Britain cannot put up stocks just as efficiently as the man from Quebec or Ontario. Perhaps if the stories had been probed a little, the malignant hand of the Little-Canadian who wants to shut the door against all immigration and especially that from the British Isles, would have been discerned.

In the old days many roseate stories of fortunes quickly made in Canada have been told by the agents of the transportation companies to possible settlers. While we do not believe that such fables are repeated today, yet perhaps some of the glamor that surrounded the Canada of pre-war days which was intensified by the halo of the heroism of Canadian soldiers, still lingers. Nevertheless, the men who have saved their hundred dollars out of low wages and have risked much to come to Canada, staking all that they have and are on the future of the Dominion, are not the men to be deterred because some of their swans prove to be geese after all.

It may be hoped that the majority of these newcomers will make their homes in Canada. To them we extend the glad hand of fellowship, the Canadian grip of the brotherhood of Empire.—Montreal Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The biggest days of this month from a Peterborough standpoint are Sept. 12, 13, 14 and 15—the dates of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition.

Answer to Thirsty and 135 others: No, we don't know how you may obtain permission to visit the Cuban warship at the Toronto Exhibition.

The Oshawa ball team were champions of the Central Ontario League for a little over two hours—but even that is some satisfaction for the Motor Town.

J. J. Morrison declares that the farmers should never have drifted into politics. If he convinces the U.F.O. of that fact Ontario will be unanimous in that opinion.

The Globe's warning that there is no need of apprehension concerning the banking institutions of Ontario is timely and necessary.

The Lindsay Post tells of a big fish being landed by a woman at Rustic Bay. The species is not mentioned, so that it is difficult to figure whether this was a matrimonial or a piscatorial triumph.

On the other hand, as the Detroit News puts it, a man will look back a little later, while bending over a snow-shovel, and be willing to admit that it wasn't such a bad winter after all.

TORONTO CATTLE.

TORONTO, Sept. 1.—Quietness has marked the week's trading, particularly in cattle, at the Union Stock Yards. With the total cattle run almost a thousand head less than last week there remains over 1,600 stale cattle in the yards which will be carried over till after Labor Day. About 1,100 westerners have been received during the week and demand for them has been fair.

Total stock receipts at the Union Stock Yards for the week ending August 30th are as follows: Cattle, 7,215; calves, 2,323; hogs, 7,362; sheep, 4,583.

Export trade was very slow. At the first of the week there was a little buying for export but it dropped to practically nothing towards the choice. As shipments are to be resumed next week via White Star Line, it is expected that buying in this line will be quickened again.

All classes of sheep and lambs sold stronger this week although there was a light run. Choice ewes and wethers sold from 13 to 13½ cents with $1.50 per hundred off the bulk lambs. Cull lambs brought 8 to 9 cents, choice light sheep 6 to 6½ cents, choice yearlings 8 to 9 cents, heavy fat sheep and bucks 3£ to 4½ cents. Cution should be observed on the heavy fat sheep and common thin lambs, as demand for them is light.

The hog market has remained fairly steady throughout the week at $10.85 fed and watered.

The following quotations show the lowest and highest prices offered during the week in the various lines.

CHICAGO WHEAT.

CHICAGO, September 1 (Canadian Press). — European news of a bullish character, along with higher cables and strength in the hog market gave a firm tone to the wheat market yesterday. Toward the close, however, support fell off and values failed to retain advances established earlier in the day. At the finish wheat was unchanged to 1-4 cent lower with December 104 7-8 to 105 and May 110 3-4 to 110 3-4 to 7-8.

Corn was up 1-8 to 1 1-8; oats 1-8 to 1-4 cent higher; and provisions gained 5 to 15 cents.

Trade was light, commission houses being moderate buyers. The seaboard confirmed sales of 300,000 bushels of hard winter wheat to the United Kingdom, and it was expected that 200,000 bushels more would be worked before night. Sales of 100,000 bushels of wheat was made to go to store.

Corn was firm with the September delivery leading the upturn, strength in the cash market being an influence to some extent. Buying was scattered by some profit-taking on the advance.

Buying by a leading cash interest was a helpful factor to higher levels in the oats market.

Provisions were strong and higher in an active trade.

STONEY LAKE AND DISTRICT

STONEY LAKE, August 31. — The service at St. Peter's Anglican Church was well attended as usual on Sunday morning, Canon C. W. Hedley, of the Church of the Transfiguration, Toronto, being in charge of the service.

A red cedar prayer desk, donated by Mrs. William M. Graham, of Lakefield, as dedicated "To the Glory of God and in Memory of William M. Graham of Viamede."

Mr. Graham was keenly interested in St. Peter's, and was a devoted member of this summer parish since its beginning, being at the time of his death a church warden. The desk is of red cedar, which corresponds with the cross erected on the altar.

Canon Hedley has been the rector in charge for the month of August, Canon Tremayne, of Mimico, being in charge during July.

For the first two Sundays in September Rev. S. C. Jowett, of England, will be in charge.

The addition to the church, which was found necessary owing to the number attending the services, has been very acceptable, and has added greatly to the appearance. The belfry has been a great improvement also.

Fires Subdued.

The fires in the north country have been subdued, after several weeks of great anxiety and hard fire fighting. Many farmers lost their season's cut of marsh hay, and in some cases their grain crop. Men in the threatened ditsricts were physically worn out when the heavy rain of last Tuesday extinguished the last of the fires.

In some places the fire had burned down from one to two feet into the ground. This year was one of the worst years for forest fires for some time, 1908 and 1913 were also very hot, dry seasons, and the fires were very threatening.

Greatest relief is felt at the rain which ended for the present the anxiety of so many people.

Load of Lumber.

A scow load of lumber passed down the lake last Friday that, according to the foreman in charge, was a record-breaker. There were 95,000 feet of lumber on the scow, which was the greatest quantity taken down in one load this season, according to the lumbermen.

Leaves Turning.

There is just a suggestion of the leaves turning in some parts of the lake, and probably very soon the vivid colourings which give September its attribute "crimson" will soon appear. Last week there was undoubtedly a touch of frost or "near frost," but glorious weather follows the first frosts, so those lucky people who can stay on into crimson September and golden October are to be envied.

Gulls Increased.

The number of gulls on the lake this year shows a remarkable increase as they are protected by the Government, and appear to be well aware of the fact. They are beautiful birds, and add a special touch to the scenery. Isolated rocks at various points on the lake are known as Gull Rock, and are well named, as it is no uncommon sight to see the rock covered with them. They are useful as well as being extremely ornamental, as they are nature's scavengers.

Your Health

By DR. CLIFFORD C. ROBINSON

LIFE EXTENSION

Today the healthy man at 40 has the average chance of attaining 65 or 66, before he shuffles off. The woman of the same age is granted about two years longer.

Science is gradually conquering diseases. With preventive medicine developed to its maximum within the coming decade, centenarians may become as numerous as bootleggers under prohibition's protection.

Current newspapers and medical journals have astonished the world in the past few months by their announcements of medical skill victories over disease. I am not announcing these "wonder" cures as conclusive, but the statements, as given out, seem to warrant a strong belief that a new medical day for mankind is dawning.

During the year, diabetes has yielded to the discovery by Dr. Banting of Toronto. It is almost a modern miracle. It allows children and young adults a new lease on life. jection of pancreatic extracts.

Professor Wagner-Jauregg, of Vienna, a leading neurologist, only last June announced the cure of 299 patients out of 300 treated for one form of paralysis. The treatment is by injection of malaria germs and after a fortnight the patient is inoculated with neo-salvarson. Paralysis has been considered incurable up to this time.

Here is another that strikes nearer home. Dr. Donald Butts of Philadelphia states that cancer can be cured. Think of how many lives this will save if his treatment works out successfully.

Only last month, two Italian physicians of Rome announced the isolation of the bacillus of scarlet fever, and the effective use of a serum treatment. If this actually has been done it is the greates disease preventive since the first use of diphtheretic serum.

FEDERAL PENSIONS

with according to urgency rather than in the order received, it being felt that where the appellant is in a serious state of health the appeal should receive preference.

As correspondence already received indicates that there is misapprehension as to the grounds upon which an appeal may be heard, it is pointed out that the appeal board has power to deal with appeals only in the following classes of cases:

(A) Those where the Board of Pension commissioners has decided that the disability is not attributable to, aggravated by, or incurred on military serbice and has refused to award disability pension.

(B) Thos, where the Board of Pension commissioners has decided that the death of an ex-member of the forces was not due to a disability attributable to, aggravated by or incurred on military service, and on this account has refused to award dependents' pension.

(C) Those where the department of soldiers' civil re-establishment has refused to authorize treatment with pay and allowances.

A further limitation in the act is that appeals may be dealt with only upon the evidence and record upon which the decision complained of was given. Persons who have new evidence in regard to their claims should, it is announced, therefore forward this evidence to the Board of Pension commissioners or the department of soldiers' civil re-establishment, as the appeal board cannot deal with such a case until a new evidence has been considered by the authorities who gave the decision.

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

American Visitors Motored Here From Cleveland, Ohio — Collector for Seymour Appointed —Personals.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 1. — There is no branch of the Home Bank in Campbellford, so that the suspension of that institution has excited nothing more than a passing interest here, and no panic has resulted among those who have deposits in the local banks. So far as known there is only one resident of Campbellford who is a shareholder in the Home Bank.

A short time ago this town was flooded with circulars, sent out by a Toronto broker, offering for sale stock in the embarrassed bank, in which it was claimed that this was one of the best enterprises in which people of large or small means could invest. The stock was offered at par and a 7 per cent. dividend was guaranteed.

It is now believed that this was the same stock that was recently disposed of by President Daly of the Home Bank, and which, according to the news despatches of yesterday, was put on the market a short time before the bank suspended.

Autoed From Cleveland.

Another party of American visitors reached here by auto yesterday. Mr. and Mrs. Fred Jeffreys, of Cleveland, Ohio, made the trip from their home city by way of Buffalo, and through Ayr and other towns in Western Ontario. The visitors are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ackerman.

The Seymour Council has re-appointed Henry Dunham tax collector for the township, this being the third year that Mr. Dunham has held the position. Residents of the township will find that their taxes will be probably the same as last year. The township rate is a trifle higher but this is offset by the reduction in that of the county.

GREB WON FROM JOHNNY WILSON

Pounds His Way to Middle Weight Title of the World.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.— (Canadian Press.)—Harry Greb, the Pittsburgh speed boy, became middleweight champion of the world here last night by pounding Johnny Wilson unmercifully for fifteen rounds. Greb absorbed some little punishment himself and Wilson fought gamely for the last two rounds with his left eye closed, but the challenger had by far the better of at least ten of the rounds, and two or three were even. Fifteen thousand fans witnessed the battle, which was boxed at the Polo grounds.

The bout was not a good one to watch, it was a clinching affair most of the way. As a matter of fact, almost every lead was followed by a clinch, but it was at close range that Greb did most of his damage, hammering away at Wilson every time they were in close. It was apparent early that Wilson's crown was slipping from his grasp. He could not fathom Greb's mode of attack. Wilson probably never before met so many punches in his life. Greb tried to keep the play in his hand at every turn but he ran into a surprise in the sixth round when Wilson unbuckled a choice selection of blows which slowed up Greb for a time. Again in the seventh Wilson jumped out in the front and again hammered Greb with some sharp left jolts to the stomach. There were many who thought that if Wilson had played more for the Pittsburghers mid-section he might have done better.

Greb did not appear to relish these lefts to the wind.

HASTINGS LOST TO ST. SIMONS

Clapper and His Lacrosse Boys Went Down to Defeat by 15 to 13.

HASTINGS, Sept. 1.— On Friday last, the St. Simon's team lead by W. Wigmore went to Hastings with the expectations of scalping the lacrosse natives and returning with the laurel wreaths.

Dad Clapper and his brave knights failed to conquer and were even glad to leave the lacrosse field with a remnant of the reputation which they had built up laboriously against Havelock. But such is fate that dame fortune, comes along drops a bomb on their self esteem and St. Simon's won 15 to 3.

Shortly after three o'clock, the slaughter commenced with C. Parkinson, referee, helping the St. Simon's on the attack.

St. Simons scored the first two points and then Cowell gave the enemy's net a nudge with a nice shot.

St. Simons came back again with two more and the first quarter ended with 5 to 1 for the Westerners.

Gould notched Hastings counter in the next period and Hastings looked to have a chance St. Simons came back with tht next two. Hastings scored the next, Kenny Cruickshanks carrying the ball well up the field and passing it to Clifford Baker who did the needful.

Then came the final periods and Dad and his knights who labored like men steep in wine and with no effort with all.

Hastings lead in the field by young Cowell kept up the bombardment and when the final smoke cleared away St. Simons had entirely annihilated the man from the Trent.

Hastings with 13 goals to overcome feel they have a chance and will leave Sunday night with a sleeper attached to the C. P. R. train at Norwood for the final game at Riverdale Flats on Labor Day morning at 10.30.

The line-up:

Goal—Lambert, Point Cochrane, Cover Trent, Saunders; 1st Defence Dodd; 2nd Defence Archer; Centre Flint, 2nd Home, Cruickshanks, 1st Home, Gould; Outside Cowell; Inside Baker.

Subs—Way, White, Walsh.

Field Captain—W. Clapper.

PRESENTATION AT MISSION SOCIETY.

Mrs. E. J. Wagar Honored By St. James' Church Ladies.

The Womans Missionary Society of St. James Methodist church met at the home of Miss Emerson, 23 Aylmer street, on Thursday evening, when the president, Mrs. J. N. Welbourn occupied the chair. The first part of the evening was spent in discussing ways and means for the coming season's work, and a splendid program was outlined by the secretary, Miss Kidd.

The president then read the following address of appreciation of the work of one of the most faithful members Mrs. E. J. Wagar, who with her two daughters is moving to Toronto, and Mrs. Wm. Jollitt presented her with the Womans Missionary Society life member's pin, after which a social hour was spent and refreshments served.

Address to Mrs. Wagar.

As the time approaches for your removal from our midst, we have a poignant realization of the void it will leave in our Missionary Society. We feel that many special features of missionary work are greatly indebted to your fertile brain and sympathetic heart, and by your genial courtesy and splendid executive ability, you have left an impression which can never be effaced, always embracing every opportunity to work in the Master's vineyard.

However, we have the assurance that, in whatever circle you may move, your varied taelnts and winning personality, will gain for you a host of friends.

We wish to express our greatest appreciation of your work in Auxiliary, Circle and Band, ever since their inception in St. James church, and ask you to accept this pin, emblematic of an organization, which has always received your capable, efficient services.

May all your anticipations for the coming year be fulfilled, and the loving arms of "Our Father" be round and about you always.

(Signed on behalf of St. James Auxiliary).

AUGUST BUILDING WAS BIG INCREASE

Construction Contracts Throughout Canada Were 26 Per Cent. Higher Than Last Year.

TORONTO, Sept. 1.—During August, construction contracts awarded in Canada, according to MacLean Building Reports, Limited, amounted to $27,488,700, compared with $25,187,500 a year ago. Residential building accounted for 31.3 per cent. of the August total and amounted to $8,630,900. Business building amounted to $7,762,500 or 28.2 per cent.; industrial building, $1,778,500 or 6.5 per cent.; public works and utilities, $9,316,800 or 34 per cent. The value of contemplated new work reported during August amounted to $32,374,900.

Construction contracts awarded during the first eight months of 1923 amounted to $223,654,400, compared with $184,333,700 during the corresponding period of last year. The increase amounts to $49,320,700 or 26.2 per cent. Residential building during the first eight months shows a falling off of 4 per cent., compared with last year, but continues to dominate the various types of construction with a total of $68,326,400 for the year to date. Business building shows an increase of 17 per cent. and the industrial group reflects the steadily improving economic situation with an increase of 66 per cent. over last year. Public works and utilities have been undertaken in large volume and record a gain of 55 per cent. for the period under review.

Ontario continues to show the greatest activity, and during the first eight months accounted for 50.7 per cent. of the Dominion total, compared with 36.3 per cent. during the same period of 1922. Quebec has had a very substantial rise in activity, the percentage of the Dominion total being 31.2 per cent., compared with 22.8 per cent. last year. Construction in the Maritimes has fallen off from 7.9 per cent. of the total last year to 2.7 per cent. this year. The Prairies and British Columbia remain at approximately the same percentage of the total, viz., 15.4 per cent. for 1923, as against 16.7 per cen. for 1922.

Prosperiy In View.

The trend of the business cycle with regard to the building situation indicates that new construction will continue in considerable volume. There is a great deal of work in prospect and a long continued period of prosperity in view for the building industry. Prices and wages are sufficiently stabilized to make it safe for contractors to bid on new work with the assurance that it can be carried through to completion and yield a reasonable profit. The mortgage market is still comfortable enough to permit a good volume of financing. Labor is fully employed at good wages.

From the outbreak of war until the beginning of 1922 the construction industry passed through uncertain years. Freaky markets and scattered demand created very trying conditions. During the years of and immediately following the war, construction costs advanced tremendously and much divergence in the cost bases of the various commodities and materials existed. However, since January, 1922, these costs have been approaching a new average level, higher than 1913, it is true, but evidently constituting a new level on which business may be soundly transacted. This new level will gradually recede during the next decade or more, and there will undoubtedly be frequent fluctuations during that period. While, as just said, the level of construction costs will probably recede for ten or twelve years, this recession will not be sufficiently great to pay prospective owners to postpone contemplated projects in anticipation of this reduction in costs. In fact, the price level today is economically sound, and it will pay owners to proceed with construction. One has only to reflect upon the steady, and at times, rapid advances in material costs during the whole decade proceeding the war, to appreciate that war or no war, inflation or no inflation, normal 1923 prices were bound to be well above the 1913 prices. And between the level implied in the phrase "normal 1923 prices" and the level which has now been reached after three years decline, there is no more disparity than can probably be accounted for permanently by the economic upsets of the war.

Statistics compiled by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics indicate that building and construction material costs reached the peak in April, 1920, when prices were 129.4 per cent. above 1913. The subsequent deflation reached its ebb in April, 1922, when costs were 59.5 per cent. above 1913. Since then pronounced activity in new construction carried costs in June of this year to a point 71 per cent. above 1913, shading off to 69.8 per cent. in July. In calculating this index number the Bureau of Statistics "weighs" each of the thirty-two commodities entering into compilation in proportion to their importance in the market.

NEW USE FOUND FOR MOLASSES.

Used As Culture Medium in Production of Yeast.

HONOLULL, Sept. 1.—(Associated Press).—New uses which have been found for molasses, mainly a waste product of the Hawaiian sugar plantations since the enactment of the prohibition act, are expected to exhaust the supply this year, according to an announcement by the Sugar Factors, which handle most of the Hawaiian crop.

Prior to prohibition, the plantations derived a considerable income from the molasses shipments to the mainland which were used for the manufacture of alcohol. Since then the molasses, which has a sugar content of one-fifth, has been used as fuel or thrown into the ocean.

A discovery that molasses may be used as a culture medium in the production of yeast, has created a considerable demand recently. It also has been found that molasses makes a valuable feed for stock, as, it is said, it has about twice the energy value of any other feed tested. These two developments are expected to utilize most of the molasses produced by the plantations.

The new demand is expected to add approximately $1,000,000 to the income of the Hawaiian plantations

Oberlin Grads Join Tree-Planting Army.

WASHINGTON, September 1 (United Press).—All the old "grads" of Oberlin College at Oberlin, Ohio, were called to-day to join the tree-planting army this fall and register their trees with the American Tree Association.

A letter and application blank, the association announced to-day, has been sent to every former student, urging each to plant a tree this fall and thus answer the Tree Association's call to celebrate the centennial of Arbor Day in 1972 by planting the trees now.

According to the files of the college, the call is going to about 26,000 graduates and former students.

Hon. Theodore E. Burton and E. H. Dan Fossan will have charge of the tree planting here.

President Henry Churchill King, of Oberlin, writes Charles Lathrop Pack, the president of the association, "celebrating the centennial of Arbor Day in 1972 is a programme in which Oberlin and her former students can well have a part."

Oberlin has graduates in China, Siam, Turkey, Japan, and many other parts of the world. There is a particularly heavy representation in New England and the Middle West.

The "Oberlin Elm" will be planted wherever possible in honour of the elm that stands at the corner of the campus at Oberlin, said Pack.

YOU CAN'T TELL UNDER WHAT TITLE YOU MAY SEE A NEW MOVIE

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 1.—Why titles are changed is one of the great mysteries of Hollywood.

An early explanation was economy of length, so that titles could be played in larger letters on posters and could be set up in the illuminated letters on theatre marques.

Then, when many new titles were physically longer than the originals, the producers said they were compelled to make the title alluring enough in itself to fill the theatres.

Now there is a perfect frenzy of title-changing. Titles are often changed before the camera starts turning, are changed once, twice—even three times—during the course of production, then may be given another title in New York.

Take "The Faun," in which William Faversham played so successfully on the stage for years. When William De Mille started directing it for Lasky he called it "Mortal Love." Half way produced it was retitled "Spring Magic." Now it's "The Marriage Maker."

* * *

Someone out of curiosity recorded the various title changes. In the past two months there's been 44 of them.

There is a certain merit to the idea of choosing a title that is self-attractive and self-selling to the amusement seekers.

Most picturegoers select their evening's entertainment, deliberately or subconsciously, from their reaction to the title. Unless they are rabid fans for some particular star (and the genus fan is rapidly dying out) the actors are not taken into consideration in choosing the show to see. And it would require a film enthusiast with a flair for detective work to keep track of a favorite story or author through the maze of title changes.

So the title's the thing.

But if a title will sell thousands of books, if it will attract thousands of persons to hear spoken plays, why should not the same title attract photoplay fans?

There's the mystery.

* * *

Producers are certain the photoplay fans are only interested in such fundamental things as Girl, Love, Woman, Marriage, Hate, Wife, Lure Fool, Heart, Sin Soul, Lie.

Therefore "Marriage Morals," "The Marriage Maker," "Modern Marriage," Therefore "Other Men's Daughters," "Other Men's Money," "The Other Woman."

And the great question series—"What Wives Want," "What Women Want," "What Is Your Daughter Doing?" "Whose Baby Are You?" "Why Do We Live?" "What Love Will Do," "What a Wife Learned" and Ben Turpin's "Where Is My Wandering Boy This Evening?"

After once discovering that a tempting title may mean only a mediocre picture, the screengoing public may suddenly "go cold" on box office titles. When it does, the title-changing frenzy will be over.

SHAPELY ARMS AND SHOULDERS

By ANNE DOLAN.

The sleeveless costume has evidently come to stay for a while, so we may as well prepare for it. We can no longer conceal a too pudgy arm under flattering draperies or non-committal long sleeves. They must be reduced—or developed as the case may be—and beautified if we wish them to be attractive with the fashionable frocks.

It is difficult to reduce the arm perceptibly without reducing the weight considerably, but there are several effective exercises that reduce the shoulders and keep little pads of fat from appearing beneath the arm.

One way is to stand erect with the arms outstretched at right angles with the body. Then raise the arms upward, pulling upon them as though you had a heavy weight on each arm.

Another one that is very reducing is to throw the arms straight out in front of you, and describe circles with them, first to the right and then to the left.

Scythe Exercise.

The best all-round exercise I know for shoulders, arms and waist muscles is the scythe exercise—you remember how the farmer cuts his tall grass with swinging strokes?

Of course, you haven't a scytne, but you can get a broomstick, I'm sure. Grasp it with each hand about a foot apart, dividing the space of the stick into thirds. With the feet well apart, start with the stick high on the left side, swoop down just escaping the floor with the broomstick and come up high on the right side.

You won't care to do this many times the first day if you do it with the force you should. But increase the number from time to time. Besides beautifying your shoulders and upper arms, you are squeezing your liver in a way that is beneficial for that organ and will keep it functioning as it should.

At Housework.

And when you are using the broomstick in its other position—in the course of your housework—try to put rhythm and grace into your strokes and make a beauty exercise out of a necessary task.

Of course, swimming, tennis, golf and practically all outdoor sports develop the muscles of your arms. But remember that the arms should be developed or reduced with the idea of beauty and grace rather than of muscle.

For training the arms to be graceful, nothing is more effective than the arm technique taught in the study of the ballet.

Change of Water Change of Diet Change of Climate Cause DIARRHOEA

Mr. Fred Palmer, 217 Dalhousie St., Brantford, Ont., writes:—"When I first went out to the North-West the water played havoc with my bowels, and being in a remote spot I could not get anything to give me relief for any length of time.

I wrote and told my wife about the time I was having and she sent me a bottle of Dr. Fowler's Extract ot Wild Strawberry, and I cannot speak too highly of it for what it did for me.

Whenever the children have any bowel trouble from eating fruit or drinking strange water, which they have done for the past five years, living in the country. the only remedy we use is 'Dr. Fowler's', and nobody should be without it as it cannot be beat for instant relief."

Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry has been on the market for the past 78 years, you don't experiment with now and untried remedies when you buy it, but be sure and get 'Dr. Fowler's' when you ask for it, as a substitute may be dangerous to your health.

Keep a cat in the kitchen. When you spill something kicking the cat helps wonderfully.

ON WASH DAY.

Except in the case of very soiled clothing, extended soaking is a hindrance rather than a help. An hour is enough to dissolve dirt and will not set it all through the garment.

WHERE YOUR U.S. ANTHRACITE COAL COMES FROM

Here is the top view of a mining property showing the tipple scaffolding and power plant. Far underground work the miners who do the digging in utter blackness with only a tiny safety lamp to guide them.

Fish Recipes

Fish is an excellent summer meat and lucky indeed is the housekeeper who can include it in her menu two or three times a week.

In composition fish and meat are similar, the strength-giving properties being much the same. It is less nutritious, pound for pound, than meat, and less stimulating, but much more easily digested.

Remember that fish is largely a proteid and must be carefully cooked to preserve this element. It should be subjected to intense heat at the first instant of cooking, then simmered slowly at a reduced temperature. This seals the outside of the protein cells, preventing the escape of the valuable juices and the slow-cooking jellies, the cells making them easily digestible and tender and keeps the whole fish from cooking "to pieces."

Always serve a fruit dessert with fish.

Fish steaks are especially nice to serve as they contain no small bones. Herring is a cheap small fish that can be boned. Whitefish contains no small bones and there are an infinite number of small fish with few bones unattached to the backbone that have a delicious flavor and are inexpensive.

Halibut Steak Baked With Milk.

Two pounds halibut cut an inch thick, ¾ cup milk, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon paprika, 1 lemon, 1 hard-boiled egg, ½ cup breadcrumbs, 1 tablespoon grated cheese (optional), 1 tablespoon butter.

Dip the edges of the steak in boiling water and scrape skin. Season with salt and put in baking dish. Pour around milk. Bake until fish separates from bone. This will take about half an hour. Baste often with milk. Remove bone and fill cavity with bread crumbs moistened with milk from the pan.

Dot with bits of butter, crumbs and fish both. Sprinkle cheese over crumbs and return to the oven to melt the cheese and brown the crumbs. Garnish fish with slices of hard-boiled egg, sprinkle with paprika, garnish platter with slices of lemon and serve.

Salmon Steak.

Oil broiler well with olive oil. The fish may be broiled under the gas flame or over a bed of red, live coals. If broiled under the flame broil and brown first on one side and then on the other. If broiled over coals turn often. Sear one side and turn and sear the other. This prevents the escape of juices. On the hot coals they would smudge and smoke the fish.

When cooked through serve on a hot platter. Season with salt and pepper and rub with butter prepared in the following way. This will be enough for two steaks:

Lemon Butter.

Two tablespoons butter, 2 teaspoons lemon juice, ½ teaspoon powdered sugar, ⅛ teaspoon paprika.

Work butter with a fork till creamy. Beat in sugar and paprika and slowly add lemon juice, beating constantly. Beat until the butter and lemon juice combine smoothly. This is a delicious dressing for any fish and a little goes a long way.

Whitefish is delicious planked. The fish is carefully cleaned and split to lay flat on a well oiled plank. The plank should be heated. Put fish, skin side down, on plank. Bake in a hot oven 25 or 30 minutes. Baste often with one or two tablespoons of the following:

Three-fourths cup boiling water, 1 teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon paprika, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, 1 tablespoon butter.

As whitefish is a fat fish more butter makes it too rich. Garnish plank with sprigs of parsley and quarters of lemon.

AID FOR BURNS.

Mix together one gill of lime water and one gill of sweet oil, and keep in the kitchen to apply to any burns.

CREAMY PUDDINGS.

All puddings that should be smooth and creamy when baked, such as custard, bread, rice and tapioca, should bake or steam slowly.

LIKE TO TAKE A RIDE ON HONEYMOON SPECIAL?

Members of the California National Guard, during target practice along the coast near Los Angeles, have a great sport. They name each shell before it is fired by giant mortars. This one is called the "Honeymoon Glide." It does a mean glide, too.

Are You Fat? Just Try This

They reduce steadily and easily without tiresome exercise or starvation diet or absurd greases and salves.

STEINACH POOR 1 MEAL A DAY

Rejuvenation Scientist Is Working on Theory Under Hardship — One Student.

By CARL D. GROAT

BERLIN, Seps. 1 (United Press).—Penniless but undaunted, Prof. Steinach, successful Ponce de Leon, is working 14 to 18 hours daily under almost despairing conditions on his new rejuvenation researches.

Having sunk his crown, yet too proud to ask aid, Steinach is digging in, with only the aid of a poor student, hoping in a few months to startle the world by his results.

The student, it was hinted to the United Press by Dr. Peter Schmidt, is responsible for supplying the Steinach laboratory with dogs or other materials for experimentation.

Guinea pigs are beyond Austrian or German medical pocketbooks these days.

So the student gets his dogs and cats—well, Dr. Schmidt didn't make it just clear where. But, anyhow there are homeless cats and dogs enough if one hustles for them.

Steinach, 55, active and enthusiastic, starts his day at 9 o'clock and works until late evening with only one meal in that time. He intends keeping on—somehow—if his faithful student friend is willing to stay along for the price of experience.

Steinach, Schmidt hinted, will one day be Steinachized as he wants to live long, be active, and he does not hesitate "trying his own medicine."

So far none of Steinach's many successfully rejuvenated patients have helped him with gifts. Only one gift has come—that was about $500 from a delighted Japanese, who had been rejuvenated by the famous Steinach disciple, Prof. Sakaki of Japan. The patient wanted to show his appreciation for the boon the Vienna professor has made possible. Incidently Sakaki ranks second only to Dr. Schmidt in the number of successful Steinach operations performed.

ONCE LUXURIANT CRIMEA IS NOW HOPELESS WASTE

Formerly Known as the Russian Riviera, It Has Been Devastated By Civil War and Famine.

ALUSHTA, Crimea, Sept, 1 .—(Associated Press).—The Crimea, the beloved health resort of the old days and known as the "Russian Riviera," once filled with beautiful palaces surrounded by flowers, vineyards and magnificent fruit gardens, lies now flowerless and ruined as a result of the civil war and last year's famine.

Many of the owners of these villas, vineyards and fruit gardens belonged to the upper classes and lived in central Russia, coming here for their relaxation. Large numbers fled the country years ago, while others, having thrown in their lot with General Wrangel, became the scapegoats of his acts after his defeat and paid the death penalty during the terror which followed the second occupation of the Crimea by the Bolsheviks.

Vineyards Depleted

The Crimea has not escaped the effects of nationalization, confiscation and requisitions, and while nominally the immense vineyards and magnificent gardens have been declared nationalized, as a matter of fact they are nobody's property. Vineyards and gardens stood unguarded for several years, with the result that everything went to the dogs. The wine-stocks dried, and a majority of the best fruit trees died. Thousands of acres of almond, apricot, peach and pear trees and vineyards are today absolutely worthless, and many a year will have to pass before they can be brought to life again.

The same is true of agriculture and industry. Despite the reconstruction work carried on by the Crimean "Independent" Soviet government, Crimean agriculture and existing minor industries are in a deplorable condition. The number of cattle has diminished by 75 percent, the total number of working horses being today only 30,000. The sowing area is only 40 percent that of 1916. This year's harvest will be very small.

Industries in the Crimea are insignificant and play an unimportant part in the economic life. They consist largely of the curing of tobacco, tanning, and preserving. They all languish. There is no market for the local salt, and Crimean wines go begging. The people are impoverished and seem content to live with insufficient food, no comforts or pleasures, and with little hope for the future.

Fair Sex Going Back To Grandmother's Day For the New Styles

By HEDDA HOYT

NEW YORK, N. Y., Sept. 1 (United Press).—Styles never stay put in Paris. "As you were" has no meaning in the fashion world, but "as you wear" has sufficient meaning indeed.

The attempted return to the early Victorian styles comes as a complete surprise to womenkind. Mannequins of gown houses of Paris are parading at the big races and on the boulevards of Longchamp in wide crinolined taffeta and organdy gowns with tight-fitting bodices and tiny puffed sleeves. They wear old fashioned poke bonnets, trimmed in lace and ruching and they carry small lace parasols. It is as if the ghosts of our grandmothers tripped among us.

Instead of bobbed hair, corkscrew curls peek from under their bonnets and bob about pretty fresh cheeks. Longer curls dangle over the shoulders. Shoulder shawls of lace and net worn over slender bodices tie in fischu fashion in front. Mittens of sheer lace recall the belles of other days, as do patent pumps with white silk stockings.

Whether the crinolined gown will really become a set fashion or not is difficult to say. If the Parisians have their way it will have a fixed place in the fashion world this coming season. The slender silhouette has been so popular that it has become a fixture and for street and every day wear it will in all probability hold its own for some time. Evening gowns and gowns for dressy occasions, however, are doomed to a change. Hence, the sponsoring of the crinoline.

Popular Paris Shades

Changeable taffetas lend themselves beautifully to bouffant, crinolined effects. The most popular shades in Paris at present are blue, green, rose, lavender and bronze. Skirts are often a mass of frills from hem to waistline.

Bodices are figure-molding, sleeveless or with puffed sleeves and the off-the-shoulder neckline predominates.

Organdies are very popular at Parisian resorts just now, due to the warm weather. They follow the crinolined effects in such shades as yellow, rose blue, mauve and other pastels. Small poke bonnets trimmed in moss roses and long velvet streamers are worn with them.

Needless to say, the crinolined frock is long. Skirts reach the ankle and are usually three or more yards in width. Waistlines are either placed at the normal waistline or just a trifle lower. There is a tendency to droop the bodice in front and back. Owing to the higher waistline, corsets are demanded, as the fitted bodice with normal waist is unsuited to the corset less figure.

New York will probably see the crinoline only in evening models this Fall. It will depend on their popularity as evening frocks as to whether they will become the current style for next year.

PLASTER CASTS.

A LABOR DAY MESSAGE URGES PRESBYTERIANS TO AID IN REFORM

Bring Labor and Capital Together in the Right Relation to Welfare of the Community — Grab Get and Keep Rule Criticized.

SAFEGUARD WORKERS

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—(Associated Press).—A call to the people of the United States to bring all American industrial groups—labor, capital, the management and public—together in "right relation to the welfare of the whole community," was issued by Dr. John McDowell, Secretary of the Presbyterian Board of National Missions, in a Labor Day message to the Presbytery of America.

Dr. McDowell's communication, entitled "The Church's Challenge to Industry," was addressed to 10,000 Presbyterian churches, which represent a membership of 1,800,000. Special Labor Day services will be held in most of these churches tomorrow.

Explaining his choice of subject, Dr. McDowell said "the time has come when the church must lead, not follow industry; must challenge, not wait to be challenged by industry."

He criticized the "rule of grab, get and keep," and declared that the church must challenge "everything that is unChristian in industry today."

Establish Authority.

"The church must establish the authority of Christ in all human relationships—domestic, civic, commercial, industrial, educational, political, national and international," Dr. McDowell's message said. "Righteousness cannot be excluded from any department of our manifold life.

"Much of our present industrial unrest," he continued, "is due to the failure of the church to insist that if Christ is to be Master anywhere, he must be Master everywhere. Had the Christian Church insisted from the beginning that Christians cannot exclude their business, their politics, their industry, their national and international interests from Christ's sovereignty, the present industrial and international unrest would have been impossible.

"The present industrial unrest is a direct condemnation of the church for not insisting that 'His Kingdom ruleth over all'—over all railroads and coal mines, over all steel mills and cotton factories, over all stores and schools, over all congresses and churches, over all national and international life. The Christianity entrusted to the church for the salvation of mankind is a law for the regulation of society as well as a way of salvation for the individual.

Church's Obligations.

"The church will never win for her Master the allegiance of the strong men of this world until she shows them that Christ has the power and the purpose to rule the shop, the factory, the counting house, the labor unions and the manufacturers' associations as well as the church and the home. Charged with these inescapable divine and human obligations, the church should be the first to see what justice demands, what honor requires and what the Christian spirit dictates in the realm of industry.

"While the church is not prepared to advocate the employment of any particular industrial system, it does affirm the Christian fundamental principles and challenges industry to embody them in all of its operations. The church challenges industry to declare:

"1. For the application of Christian principles to the conduct of industrial, agricultural and commercial organizations and relationships. Among these Christian principles are:

"A. The sacredness of life and the supreme worth of personality, so that a man must always be treated as an end and never as a means.

"B. The brotherhood of man, demanding for every worker a democratic status in industry, and mutual understanding ,good will, co-operation and a common incentive among all engaged in it.

"2. For the right and duty to work, since human society cannot endure unless each of its members has the opportunity and feels the obligation to serve the common good to the extent of his ability.

"3. For a worthy and just return to every man according to his contribution to the common welfare, and for a social order in which no man shall live on the fruits of another man's labor and no man shall be denied the fruits of his own labor. 'The laborer is worthy of his hire.' Worthiness of return for honest work is measured today first of all by the standard of 'a living wage' by which is meant a wage adequate to maintain the worker and his family in health and honor, and to enable him to dispense with the subsidiary earnings of his children up to the age of sixteen.

"4. For the protection from exploitation in industry, agriculture or trade and from work that is dwarfing, degrading or morally unwholesome.

"5. For such regulation of the conditions of occupation of women as shall secure an adequate living wage and at the same time safeguard their physical and moral health and that of the community and of future generations.

"6. For the safeguarding of working people from harmful conditions of labor, dangerous machinery and occupational disease, and for the education of the workers in avoiding hazards in connection with their employment.

"7. For the assumption by industry of the burdens entailed by industrial accidents, disease and death, and for the training of injured workers for continued production and self-support.

"8. For the release of every worker for rest one day in seven, which, wherever possible, should be the Lord's Day.

"9. For the ordering of the hours of labor to secure at once sufficient production and sufficient leisure for the physical, mental and moral well-being of the workers.

"10. For the employment of the methods of investigation, conference, conciliation and arbitration in industrial disputes.

"11. For the inviolability of agreements, both in letter and in spirit, since good faith is the foundation of social and industrial stability and progress.

"12. For the right of wage-earners to organize and to deal, through their chosen representatives, with the management of the industries in which they work, because an adequate representation of all parties (labor, capital, management and the public) in industry is needed for production and to secure attention for the human factors involved."

WOMAN SO ILL COULD NOT STAND

Says Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her Well and Strong

Glens Falls, N. Y.—"For over two months I was so sick I was not able to stand on my feet, and my husband did my housework. The doctor said an operation might be necessary. I read testimonial letters about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and began to take it. Before I had finished taking the first bottle I saw what good it was doing me. I am now well and strong, doing all my work for a family of four, all my washing and my sewing, which I think is remarkable, as I had not dared to run my sewing machine, but had done all my sewing by hand. I truly feel that were it not for your medicine I would not be here today as my case seemed very serious."—Mrs. GEORGE W. BURCHELL, Glens Falls, N. Y.

RHEUMATIC SUFFERERS

May Obtain Relief by Enriching the Blood Supply.

In the days of our fathers and grandfathers, rheumatism was thought to be the unavoidable penalty of middle life and old age. Almost every elderly person had rheumatism, as well as many young people. It was thought that rheumatism was the mere effect of exposure to cold and damp, and it was treated with liniments and hot applications, which sometimes gave temporary relief, but did not remove the trouble. In these days there were many cripples. Now, medical science understands that rheumatism is a disease of the blood, and that with good, rich red blood any man or woman of any age can defy rheumatism. There are many elderly people who have never felt a twinge of rheumatism, and many who have conquered it by simply keeping their blood rich and pure. The blood enriching qualities of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is becoming every year more widely known, and the more general use of these pills has robbed rheumatism of its terrors. At the first sign of poor blood, which is shown by loss of appetite, dull skin and dim eyes, protect yourself against further ravages of disease by taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They have helped thousands—if you give them a fair trial they will not disappoint you.

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

GUARD BABY'S HEALTH IN THE SUMMER

The summer months are the most dangerous to children. The complaints of that season, which are cholera infantum, colic, diarrhoea and dysentery come on so quickly that often a little one is beyond aid before the mother realizes he is ill. The mother must be on her guard to prevent these troubles, or if they do come on suddenly to banish them. No other medicine is of such aid to mothers during hot weather as Baby's Own Tablets. They regulate the stomach and bowels and are absolutely safe. Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

MRS. OLIVER STEVENS HAD SURPRISE SHOWER

A very enjoyable evening was spent on Wednesday, August 29, at the home of Miss Helen Madden, when a number of the friends of Mrs. Oliver Stevens (nee Elsie Northcott), one of Peterboro's recent brides, gathered to present her with a miscellaneous shower.

Mr. and Mrs. Stevens, each in a few well-chosen words, thanked all for their many gifts. The evening was spent in games and music, after which dainty refreshments were served. The gathering dispersed by all joining in singing "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows," and three cheers were given for the happy couple.

CHAPTER XXX

French Novels and a Convent Maid

She knew where the dining-saloon was and went to it. No one was there, except a white-jacketed steward who stood behind the chair evidently meant for her. To the girl's surprise there was but one place laid at the table—quite a large table, big enough for four.

She glanced swiftly at the one other table in the room. It was of the same size, but no places were laid. It was decorated only with a large bowl of flowers.

Terry had worked hard and fast at unpacking and the work had made her youthfully hungry—so hungry that she had felt ashamed.

As the steward showed her a menu, however, she found that the thought of food had become repulsive Still she must eat; and scarcely looking at the elaborate list she chose one or two dishes at random.

"What kind of wine will you have, Madam?" enquired the steward, indicating the two or three brands on the card. "Claret, Hock—Champagne? We have got outside the three mile limit"

"No wine, thank you," replied Terry. "I shan't want any ever You see, I've never even tasted it."

"Very good, Madam," returned the man whose name was Roberts—statue-like in his ndifference. But within, he boiled with interest in the young woman and the situation.

He and his companions had been told no more than that Mr. Sheridan would have one guest on his Mediterranean cruise; but on a yacht rumor runs as in an Indian bazaar.

Mrs Harkness' face alone would have been enough to betray the fact that Something Outrageous was going on. Here was the Something. There was no doubt of that fact. Yet it said that it had never tasted wine.

Roberts was looking forward with interest to the voyage.

Terry took coffee, but refused cigarettes again to Roberts' silent surprise. She wished to ask if Mr Sheridan was not well, as he hadn't lunched, and the words got as far as her lips, but no further. She bit them back, instinct bidding her not to question a servant; still, she couldn't settle down to spending the afternoon in her cabin.

Perhaps she ought not to go on deck until she'd had some message of welcome from Sheridan? But the temptation was great. She slipped into her coat and ran up the brass-studded steps of the companionway.

Out on deck a sweet wind was blowing. Pulling Julia's dark blue Tam well down over her hair, she started to walk forward.

Past the saloon she went, with a glance at the waving curtains. Beyond were more windows with curtains of a different sort. They were not drawn across, or they had blown apart; and without consciously meaning to look, Terry saw a man seated at a table, eating luncheon

His back was turned to her, but she knew whose was the smooth black hair with a faint ripple in it. Miles Sheridan was lunching up here alone because he wanted to avoid her.

Terry did not go on deck again while the light held.

'Silverwood" had begun to rock gently in the swell of the great waters where the path to Europe lay; but Terry did not mind that. She imagined that the motion and the thought of romance that made music in it might have been exhilarating if she had not felt sad and "snubbed."

As it was, she had not the heart to walk past the windows which were doubtless those of Sheridan's private suite. How would she feel, if she saw the curtains drawn to save him from seeing her, to prevent her from seeing him?

Her own little cabin was like a boudoir as well as a bedroom, and the girl might have amused herself for hours in writing letters—if there had been any one to whom she could write.

But there was no one. She couldn't tell any of the nuns or the girls at school about this trip this great and sweet adventure, which belonged really to Julia, not to her. She didn't care to write to Father and he wouldn't care for a letter from her.

Julia had forbidden letters to her during the cruise, "because you never know" Manoel might perhaps open the letter As for Emmeline Julia's maid, she had been kind, but she was a servant; besides, Terry wasn't sure whether she liked Emmeline or not. The mulatto woman said queer things sometimes. Terry didn't understand them fully, but she had felt that they were "somehow horrid."

There were all those French novels to read in the cabin.

The girl was in a mood too restless to concentrate easily; still, the books would improve her French She curled up on the cushioned seat under the window, and took up a volume which ought to interest her particularly, because it seemed to be about life on a yacht.

She began it, was charmed, then puzzled, then—she hardly knew what, except that she felt a little sick.

"It's a bad disgusting book" the girl told herself out aloud And the thought flashed into her head that if things went on as they had gone today she would have to do a great deal of talking to herself.

For awhile she sat very still, thinking about the book that was so sickening and hateful. Who had put it in her room? She wondered.

Had it been placed there especially for her, because she was supposed to like such books? Surely Mr. Sheridan wouldn't have done it

But it not he, who could it be? Nobody but that cross old woman who hated her so much.

Terry jumped up, took another French novel from the shelves, turned over the pages, and saw more things about weird women and men who thought the first thing to do when you married was to go and love somebody else, not your own wife or husband.

There were seven or eight of these yellow paper-covered volumes, each of which seemed at a hasty glance to be worse than the others. Terry threw them all on the floor in a heap, leaving on the shelves only books of poetry and travel.

"If they were mine, I'd pitch the whole lot overboard" Terry said, speaking loud again; and then started guiltily when a knock came as if in answer to her words.

The girl opened the door, and saw Mrs. Harkness, respectful, and forbidding.

"For you, Miss, from Mr. Sheridan," the old woman announced, holding out a little silver tray on which lay a large white envelope.

Australia Defeated "Little Bill" Johnston In Davis Cup Singles

Antipodean Tennis Stars Broke Even With United States Entries in First of Final Games.

FIVE-SET BATTLE.

FOREST HILLS, N Y, Aug 31.—Proving unexpectedly formidable, Australia's Davis Cup challenging forces broke even with the United States to-day in the two single matches marking the opening of 1923 play for the historic trophy that carries with it the emblem of world championship

William M. (Little Bill) Johnston, United States went down to defeat before James O. Anderson, Australian captain, in a spectacular, gripping battle 4-6, 6-2, 2-6, 7-5, 6--2, but William T. Tilden, U. S. National champion evened the score for the United States when he crushed John B. Hawkes in a brilliant exhibition in straight sets, 6-4, 6-2, 6-1.

Anderson's victory over the diminutive Californian who this year won the world's champion at Wimbledon, came as a startling surprise to tennis followers who had considered Johnston and Tilden virtuallly invincible in the realm of international play, upsetting the hopes and calculations of the cup defenders, it faced the U. S. with the most dangerous challenge she has had in the past four years, a challenge which can only be flung back by victory in two of the remaining three matches of the series.

To-day, Hawkes and Anderson will face Tilden and R. Norris Wiliams, U. S., captain a new international combination, in the third match while on Monday Tilden will play Anderson and Johnston will oppose Hawkes in the remaining singles matches. Thus the winner cannot be determined before Monday.

The defeat was the first Johnston has ever sustained in Davis Cup play. In three previous years of campetition, he had won twelve matches in singles and doubles, the latter with Tilden as his partner.

The Tilden- Hawkes encounter, though it gave the U. S. a much-needed victory was an anti-climax to the Johnston-Anderson match, Tilden, bringing the full battery of his briliant strokes into play, overwhelmed Hawkes almost from the start. The left-handed Australian proved a hard and aggressive driver but he was out-classed.

SOME POOR PLAYS CAUSED BY FANS

Players Lose Initiative When "Razzed" For "New Stuff" That Fails.

The main trouble with baseball as an attraction in these days lies not in the players but in the fans. Muckerism is so rampant among baseball crowds that the veteran players have lost initiative. If a player tries the unexpected and succeeds he may or may not get a hand. If he tries a desperate play and fails, the noisiest and least intelligent portion of the crowd, denounce him as if he were a sheep thief.

The consequence is that the older a player becomes the more conservative he becomes. By the time his work is second nature with him and he could use his brains and instinct to attempt unusual and spectacular plays he has learned so thoroughly that if the attempts go wrong the mongrels in the stands will take advantage of their distance and numbers to call him every vicious name under neaven that he does the routine thing in the routine way. He dares not takes a legitimate chance.

Wisenheimer, may assert that it is a ballplayer's business to be abused by foul-mouthed mongrels, but it is not. A ball player is a human being, and frequently a sensitive human being. He almost invariably gives the best he has in him, and when he falls down he is deeply chagrined. He is trying to hold his job and he knows it can be held only by accomplishing results. He does not fumble, throw wildly, throw to the wrong base, get caught off bases or strike out because he wants to do any of those things. He makes mistakes even as you and I in the ordinary course of business.

If Day Ever Comes.

If the day ever comes that sees the crowds uniformly give a glad hand to a player who has essayed a novel or desperate stunt in a pinch, even if lack of success should cost the home team the game, then the quality of professional baseball will improve over night 25 per cent.

Suppose a batter such as Fournier or Wheat, both of whom are good first ball hitters, lands on the first pitch and drives in the winning run. What's the result? He is lauded to the skies for being a smart fellow. On the other hand, suppose he pops out in the same case? The razzing would lead a person unacquainted with the sport to suppose that the batter had burned an orphan asylum. How large a proportion of even the more level-headed fans would roast him for having hit at that first ball? We would hate to tell you our own estimate of how large that proportion would be.

Take another illustration: A coacher holds up a runner at third base and the throw goes a little wild, so that the second-guessers can easily see that, in the light of subsequent events the runner should have been sent home. How many fans stop to consider the knowledge of the thrower's arm and of the runner's speed and other elements in the problem that led to the hold up? Precious few. It is not uncommon to hear the boneheads denounce a coach for having held a runner at third when there was a fair prospect he might have been thrown out in the ninth inning of a game in which the coacher's side was half a dozen runs behind.

FOOTBALL NOTES

There will be no football games on Labour Day. The Peck Trophy Final should have been played on that date, according to the rules of the competition. After the game, on Thursday evening, the captiain of the Woollen's informed the press that they would not play on Monday, owing to players being away on a vacation, and was quite willing to forfeit the final game under the circumstances, but since then, the Association has interviewed the Trades and Labour executive so as to change the date which was granted. The P. and D. F. A. will meet on Tuesday evening next, in Chamber of Commerce Rooms, so as to fix the venue and date of the final tie between the G. W. V. A. and Canadian Woollens.

It is stated on good authority, that the C. P. C. senior team will drop out of the league for the remainder of the season, it is a great mistake not to complete the schedule; also, that the C. P. C. junior executive contemplate entering two teams for the W. H. Tayler Junior Trophy which commences on September 8th.

BROTHERS ACTIVE IN FISTIC CIRCLES.

Three Attels flung their fists, namely, Ace, Caesar and Monte. Bernard Dempsey sought pugilistic honors before his brother, Jack, took up the game. Byran, Anthony and Joe Downey are boxing today.

New Orleans has had many brother fighter. Three Galianos and as many Virget boys have had their fling at the game. The Demarl family also boasts three fighters, Frankie, Young Herman and Jack Herman.

In pairs the battling brothers who are or were active include Happy and Tom Littleton, Louis and "Red" Hill, Pal and Vic Moran, Joe and Jules Harang, Ashton and Paul Donze, Battling and Young Barrere, Young and Jack Denny.

GETS TWO YEARS FOR POISONING A STREAM

MONTREAL, August 31. —Two years in the penitentiary was the sentence imposed by Chief Judge Decarie in the Court of Sessions up on A. Dufresne, of Ste. Rose, convicted of having attempted to poison a stream where cows drank. The evidence showed that the accused's father had sold a farm at Ste. Rose to another farmer Louis Tailiefer. The accused had opposed the deal from the beginning and when it was consummated he vowed revenge on the new owner of his father's farm. Shortly afterward, it was discovered that a stream in which the cattle on the property watered had been poisoned with Paris green.

DEMPSEY AND FIRPO ARE BOTH WALLOPERS

"Natural" Fighters With Distinctive Styles Unlike Other Great Heavyweights.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion, and Luis Angel Firpo of the Argentine, who will oppose him in a match for the title at the Polo Grounds, Sept. 14, are two of the hardest hitting heavyweights that ever lived. Yet they are a type far removed from the great ring warriors of other days.

There is little comparison to be made between the fighting styles of these two modern giants of the ring, and any of the former leading heavyweights such as John L. Sullivan, James J. Jeffries, Jack Johnson, James J. Corbett or Bob Fitzsimmons. Both Dempsey and Firpo are "natural" fighters; each with a style all his own.

The low, crouching Dempsey, weaving around an opponent, with his powerful arms always ready to lash out, is one of the most deceiving fighters the ring ever developed. His punches, whether with right or left, are hooked into the ribs, under the heart, or to jaws with astonishing precision and power. He has no swinging blows. His jolts seldom travel more than a foot; frequently six inches.

Dempsey fights in a half crouch, always on his toes. He is an open target to both right and left-hand punches, but is so fast of foot that only the cleverest and fastest punchers have been able to land on him effectively. Georges Carpentier, with his flashing right, nailed Dempsey squarely on the chin, but the champion, seeing the blow start, was going away from the punch by the time it had reached its mark and the full force of it was spent. Yet it jolted Dempsey to his heels. Time and again in his fight with Tommy Gibbons at Shelby, Gibbons landed lightning lefts to the head, but they did not carry enough power to hurt the rugged champion.

Firpo resembles fighters of a primitive era in the savage style of his attack. His club-like right, carrying more power than Dempsey's, according to some experts, has been his main punch and usually effective. He seldom employs his left except to jab or cover up. In the ring he drives his opponents into retreat with the impetus of his rushes, then batters them with his right.

He has developed no effective defense, apparently, though he has steadily improved his general ringmanship. Nevertheless, he has proved his gameness and ability to take punishment.

Jess Willard never was able, in the eight rounds he lasted against Firpo, to land his famous right upper cut. Bill Brennan's left beat a tatoo on Firpo's head in the early rounds of their fight, but failed to bring the South American down.

PUZZLING PLAYS

THE PLAY

In a recent minor league game with three balls and two strikes on the batter, the pitcher in starting to deliver the ball to the batsman accidentally struck his knee in winding up, causing the ball to drop to the ground, almost at his feet. The bases were empty at the time.

The umpire ruled that the failure of the pitcher to deliver the ball to the batsman after starting his windup should be construed as a ball. He rendered such a ruling, walking the batsman.

Two were out at the time, it was the last of the ninth and the score a tie. The next batter tripled, sending the winning run over the plate.

The visiting team claimed the umpire erred in walking the batter by calling a ball when the pitcher accidentally dropped the ball at his feet while winding up.

What about it?

THE INTERPRETATION

The umpire erred in calling the pitch a ball and walking the batsman. The rule is very specific relative to a pitcher accidentally dropping the ball in the act of delivering same to the batter. With the bases empty no penalty is imposed.

For the umpire to have ruled it a ball was a mistake. The error on the part of the umpire placed the run on first that won the game. A protest was in order on the part of the team in the field and would have been upheld.

The umpire should have simply ignored the failure to deliver the ball, treating it merely as an accident.

Control Is Best Asset of Pitcher.

Control is the greates asset of a young pitcher who has baseball ambition, says Jack Ryan, veteran shortstop now doing duty as a coach to the Boston Americans' pitching staff.

"The trouble with most young pitchers breaking into the majors today is that they overlook the fundamentals of pitching, of which control is the very first lesson," continued Ryan. "Instead of trying to acquire control, many of them seek to invent some new freak delivery or spend time trying to learn how to throw the knuckle ball or the fadeaway. After all, there is nothing like speed, curves and a change of pace for a pitcher, plus control. Few of the really great pitchers go in for the freak stuff. If the young pitchers in the minors who seek to make the big show would lay aside all their freak deliveries and get control, their curve and fast one would get them by and we would have much better pitching in the majors."

CLOSE FINISH IN FISHERMEN'S RACE

"Henry Ford" Won $1,000 Purse By Fifty Seconds.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., Sept. 1.—(Canadian Press.)—The luck of Captain Clayton Morrissey changed yesterday and his schooner, Henry Ford, won the fishermen's race, the Sir Thomas Lipton Cup and a purse of $1,000. The Ford, the pride of Gloucester, and one of the hopes of the Gloucester men to win the international fishermen's race this fall, winged home over a 31-mile course fifty seconds ahead of the Elizabeth Howard of New York and leading the new Shamrock of Boston by nearly 15 minutes.

Captain Ben Pine of the Howard, with a smart schooner, but one admittedly slower than the winner, treated the fishing fleet yesterday to an exhibtion of gameness and seamanship. On the last three of the five legs of the race, the Howard made faster time than the Ford.

Pine's consolation for losing was the J. W. Prentiss Cup and a purse of $800. The Shamrock, ending away behind, won a cash prize of $800.

Yesterday's race from the starting gun was between the Ford and Howard for first place, while Captain Marty Welch and his Shamrock well handled by her experienced skipper, ran a good race, but was out of her class.

"SUNNY JIM" SOLD.

Fast Stepping Local Horse Goes to Montreal—Price Paid was $1475.

PORT HOPE, August 31.—"Sunny Jim," owned by George E. Caldwell, administered to by Dr. J. N. Johnston, and driven by George Powell, the greatest mount in this section of the country, was sold on Wednesday to Mr. A. Sumices of Montreal.

"Sunny Jim" was the fastest of the local horses, and in a trial heat Wednesday stepped the mile in 2.10¼ the time being taken by the new purchaser. The horse was first owned by H. M. VanAlstine; but was bought by Mr. Caldwell just a year ago. "Sunny Jim" was always in the money and while owned by Mr. Van Alstine won purses amounting to $800 and also increased Mr. Caldwell's bank account by $1000. The horse was shipped to Montreal Canadian National Express, the charges being $73.60.

The price paid by Mr. Sumices was $1475, the highest figure ever to change hands in a transaction of this kind in Port Hope.

CATCHER BIG COG IN A BALL TEAM

Back Stop in the Big Leagues Is Also Expected to Be a Hard and Sure Hitter.

What a bigger and really more important cog they are to a major league ball team nowadays than a few years ago!

A backstop used to toil about every second or third game. If he participated in 75 tilts a season he felt that he was being overworked.

And on the offense he was always shoved 'way down the batting order. Eighth place was his usual hitting station. For, like pitchers, a catcher wasn't expected to be able to wallop the horsehide.

But times have changed!

A receiver in the main tent now has a real job. To don the old mask and chest protector 100 games at a stretch is not out of the ordinary, with anywhere from 130 to 150 frays as a full season's effort.

And on the attack! Well, a backstopper today is considered almost as important a factor with the bat as any other member of the club. He doesn't go to the plate just because it's compulsory. He must be able to massage the apple. A base knock is a base knock, no matter who is on the clouting end.

Fact is many big league pilots have moved their receivers up in the batting list where their ability to hit the ball will prove more valuable to the scoring proclivities of the team—eighth place in the battle front is not good enough for them.

Just glance over the American League roster for this season. Of the eight teams in the circuit you'll see that in only three of them are the backstops swinging just before the pitcher in bygone years.

Huggins of the Yankees has his receivers hitting sixth, as does Lee Fohl of the Browns. "Donie" Bush employs the same methods with his Nationals, while Frank Chance and Connie Mack have cast tradition to the four winds, the Red Sox receivers batting second and the Athletics' third.

Detroit, Cleveland and Chicago are the only teams which have stuck to the old order of things.

Catchers! Surely they are a more important spoke in the wheel of a big league team than in days of old.

TORONTO TEAM HERE ON MONDAY

Lakeviews, Eastern Ont. Junior Champions to Clash With Parliaments

Peterboro ball fans will have an opportunity of seeing a real game on Monday afternoon at Riverside Park, when the fast Parliament Juniors of Toronto will clash with the Lakeviews, Junior champions of Eastern Ontario. The game is called for 3 o'clock, and should attract a big crowd in view of the fine work of the local Juniors, who have cleaned up Oshawa and Kingston without the loss of a game, and are now waiting for further games in their fight for the Junior O.B.A.A. championship. Frank Whitehouse will be on the rubber for the homesters, and the game will be a good test, inasmuch as the Parliaments are one of the strongest Junior teams in Toronto, and will be assisted by several stars from other Junior aggregations. The Lakeviews are playing snappy ball, and hope to beat the fast visitors as they have cleaned up the Junior outfits in the East. The fan who likes a fast ball game should not overlook this fixture, which will provide lots of entertainment for the holiday afternoon.

In the morning, at 10 o'clock, there will be another good Junior game, when the Adanacs will try conclusions with an All Star team from the Ottawa Junior League.

CANADIAN WORKERS ON CORFU ISLAND

Representatives of Near East Relief and 1,600 Orphans in Occupied Zone.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—(Canadian Press).—Fearing for the safety of United States and Canadian relief workers on the Island of Corfu, as well as refugees, officials of the Near East Relief to-day hastened to get in touch with the State Department.

On the island seized by the Italians are stationed four Canadian and United States relief workers under the command of Colonel Stephen Lowe, of St. Louis, Mo.

Orphan Children.

The Near East Relief also has 1,600 orphan children quartered in the Palace formerly occupied by Kaiser Wilhelm when he visited the island, and officials of the organization expressed considerable fear for their safety.

ODDITIES IN NEWS

BASEBALL.

The champion bull fighter of Spain—Enrique Robles, professionally known as Chicorrito—spends his vacation in our country and gives this description of a baseball game, the first he ever attended:

"The people made much noise and I could not understand why they should be so excited. A few men wearing very dull clothes—nothing like the brilliant costumes of our bull fighters—were running around and throwing a little ball and trying to hit it with a stick. It was very uninteresting."

That sounds like comment by a Man from Mars.

FARAWAY.

Buffalo Bill, riding a camel, is pictured on the cover of American dime novels translated and printed in Italy. Another cover shows Bill in a gondola, rescuing a fair damsel from a burning Mississippi River steamboat. A third has Bill at bay in a canyon, flanked by African lions and tigers.

The Italians are 'eating' this sort of stuff. Their dime novel taste runs to Buffalo Bill and Nick Carter.

Some American ideas about Italy are equally ridiculous. The faraway always is pictured distortedly. That's why wars are possible. Radio and airplane will bring some international understanding and good feeling than a million diplomatic conferences.

Nightgowns from Paris are often scarcely more than chemise as they reach just below the knees. Certainly they must be cool for warm summer nights. It is said they require but two yards of material, since they use ribbon shoulder straps.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

THE TWINS OUT WEST

"Oh, may we go at.. once?" cried Nancy.

"I want you to take your magic shoes and go west,' said the Fairy Queen to Nancy and Nick when they had returned from their last adventure. "You don't mind going, do you?"

"No indeed," said Nancy.

"What's it like?" Nick wanted to know.

'Well, I'll tell you, as you haven't got that far in your geography yet," said the Fairy Queen kindly

"First of all there are great flat places called plains that stretch from sky to sky, or as far as you can see one way to as far as you can see the other way They haven't any hills, but there are lumpy places here and there with funny names. They arn't high enough to be called hills. They are called buttes. If they are flat on top they are called mesas. Nothing much grows on the plains but sagebrush—a low, gray-looking bush—and in some places grass."

"Well, I shouldn't think any one would want to live there!" said Nick.

"Oh, but they do," nodded the Fairy Queen brightly. "Loads of people. And they build lovely towns where there is plenty of water, for wherever there is water, things grow in fine style. Besides that they have big farms called ranches where they have cows and horses and sheep. The plains are wonderful, but the place I want you to go to is more wonderful still, for it's where the plains run bump into a mountain. There's a beautiful creek with water falls where thousands of little speckled fish have a grand time and a lot of cottonwood trees where millions of birds sing, and—

"Oh, may we go at once!" cried Nancy clapping her hands. "I think I should love it out west."

"I think so, too!" smiled the queen "You'll like it better still when you get there Take your magic shoes along everywhere you go And here's a secret! You'll find two ponies tied to a cottonwood tree in a big patch of blue bells at the foot of the mountains.

"Jump on, and they'll take you to a red rock where Mister Gallop, a fairy, lives in a cave. He needs help. That's why I'm sending you."

GERMANY MAY ASK FOR MEMBERSHIP IN LEAGUE

If Germany Applies She Would Probably Be Elected Easily Is One Opinion —Other Important Discussions.

AMERICAN GROUP.

GENEVA, Sept. 1.—(Associated Press).—The reparations problem and the question whether Germany is to be admitted to membership in the League of Nations are two matters, in the opinion of league authorities, that probably will come up at the meeting of league assembly which opens in this city, Monday, September 30.

In this connection an English delegate said recently:

"I don't see how it will be possible to keep the reparation problem out of the discussion, unless it be settled beforehand." And another delegate from one of the northern Scandinavian lands, referring to the popular movement in Germany to apply for membership, said: "Certainly Germany should come in. If she applies she would probably be elected easily."

These and other questions, like the problem of opium have served to create an atmosphere of unusual interest in this year's doings of the assembly.

The first business on the agenda is the election of a president and six vice-presidents who, with the presidents of the six committees later elected, form with the president a bureau responsible for the general conduct or the business of the assembly.

The actual work of the session then begins with a discussion of the annual report of the Secretary General, Sir Eric Drummond, on the activities of the council during the past year and with a statement of what has been done to make effective the recommendations of the previous assembly. After a debate the assembly usually divides itself into six general committees. These include constitutional and legal questions, such as amendments to the covenant of the league the work; of the technical organizations on economics, finance, transit and health; the question of reduction of armaments; the budget and other matters of internal administration; social questions, such as opium, the white slave traffic and refugee problems, and political questions such as the admission of new states.

System Followed.

These committees are virtually small assemblies in themselves, for each country has the right to be represented on all of them. As three committees sit simultaneously one day and three others the next, the work of the assembly is greatly expedited. Newspaper correspondents are kept busy following all these meetings. When the committees make their final reports, usually brief, the full assembly affords a final debate on any point still at issue.

The official languages of the assembly are French and English. Speeches delivered in one are translated into the other tongue. The assembly convention lasts from three to four weeks and generally marks out broad policies whose detailed execution is left to the council, which is the cabinet of the League of Nations.

In view of the late President Harding's recommendation that the United States join the International Court of Justice, of special interest to Americans will be the election of a successor to Judge Ruy Barbosa of Brazil as a member of the court. This election is carried out by the concurrent majority action of the assembly and court. The American group of the old Hague arbitral court exercised its prerogative this year, and nominated a candidate to succeed Judge Barbosa.

ANNOUNCING THIRD SEASON
of Capitol Entertainment

THE chill winds, the falling leaves, and the shortening daylight, all tell us that once more our leisure hours must be mainly occupied with indoor, instead of outdoor, amusement. And on the street, in the cafe, and in the home, young and old are discussing the question, "What are we going to have in the theatres this season?" In answer to this question just let us quote one phrase, "Capitol Entertainment." You know what this means.

INTRODUCED two years ago, the people of Canada soon realized that it was not a mere empty slogan, but that it described a delightful and developing reality.

NOT only in our large cities, but in many of the smaller centres of population, the public has learned that in a theatre where "Capitol Entertainment" is provided, they can rely upon getting the best. The service, from the front door to the seat and out again after the show; the music, rendered by musicians who understand the difficult work of playing for pictures; and the pictures themselves, products of the world's finest cinema studies—all furnish evidence of efficiency inspired by enthusiasm and a determination to entertain.

Very Cordially,

H. R. HITCHINSON, Manager

THE CAPITOL THEATRE

AS the picture, like the play, is the thing, let us make a special reference to the films. Out patrons may rest assured that the photoplays to be presented during the season of 1923-24 will be chosen with the keenest discrimination. Not merely the finest films available, but those best suited to local needs and tastes, will be chosen. The foremost authors, the most talented directors, and stars of recognized charm and genius, have all combined forces to produce film dramas of the highest class. And these great productions will be presented in a manner worthy alike of the pictures themselves and of the improving standards of the industry.

OUR aim still is to provide wholesome and refined entertainment for the community. You have generously encouraged our efforts in past seasons. For this we heartily thank you, and we trust that during the third season of "Capitol Entertainment," which begins in this theatre Monday, September 3rd, we may rely with growing confidence on your support.

WE believe you will especially enjoy our opening program, "The World's Applause," with the talent of three great screen luminaries combined. A superb William de Mille production, featuring Bebe Daniels and Lewis Stone. This photoplay will be remembered when more elaborate ones are forgotten.

MINE EXPERTS IMPRESSED BY NORTH ONTARIO

World's Best Goldfield May Be Discovered There — Cobalt As Good As Ever.

WILL SEND SCOUTS.

MONTREAL, Sept. 1.—"There is no reason why the greatest gold field in the world should not be discovered in New Ontario. It is lying hidden there somewhere in the bush."

This sensational statement carries the full weight of authority behind it, for it was made to your correspondent to-day by no less eminent a judge of mining fields than E P. Mathewson, of New York, president of the American Mining and Metallurgical Institute, which has just concluded a tour of the mining districts of Ontario, which commenced at Toronto on August 20th

"Canadians are altogether too modest," commenced Mr.. Mathewson. "They do not tell half what they could about this wonderful district. The progress made in the gold mining districts of Northern Ontario is amazing, considering the short time it has been under development. We visited the Kinkland Lake, Timmins and Porcupine areas, and we are all impressed with the tremendous future for the gold mining industry in that region. The gold fields are simply wonderful. To have developed the third largest gold mine in the world inside of a few years in an unparalleled achievement, yet this is only the beginning. You have a geological formation that indicates that gold is not confined to Timmins and Porcupine, but extends over to the Province of Quebec. We did not, unfortunately, have time to inspect the Rouyn area in Quebec, but we have no doubt that there are still immense undiscovered gold fields, and I can make the statement with every assurance that new discoveries will be made soon and new mines in operation before long.

To Send Scouts In.

"We have in our party several representatives of important financial interests, and they have already arranged to send scouts into Northern Ontario. These interests will not buy a Hollinger, but they will endeavour to locate good gold bearing properties which can be purchased at a reasonable figure, and will develop themselves.

"We were impressed not only with the value of the deposits, but with the scientific way they are being developed, the character of the machinery, which is first-class in every respect. The methods, too, are good. It is amazing to us to find a district showing so high an average of mining activity within 24 hours of New York. That was something the majority of our members did not expect.

Cobalt Good As Ever.

Mr. Mathewson told of the pleasure with which the members learned of the reopening of the nickel mines at Sudbury and the impression made on them by Cobalt. "There is an idea around," he said, "that Cobalt is going down. This is not the case. It is as good as it ever was, and I learned a remarkable fact when I was there. Do you know that since Cobalt was discovered that camp has turned out two tons of silver a day Think of it. Three hundred working days a year. Six hundred tons of silver and the camp is still expanding, as witness South Lorraine and other properties."

Mr. Mathewson thought one point that had not been sufficiently stressed in regard to New Ontario was the fact that the opening up of that big mining region would lead to the development of agriculture. A lot of arable land would be cultivated and the farmers would find a good market with top prices at the mining camps.

THEATRES

AT THE GRAND.

THE ORIGINALS IN "RAPID FIRE."

There is a unique story attached to the history of the Third Division C.E.F. entertainers, now known as the "Originals". The inception of this famous company is really an odyssy of the great war and of Canada herself as the war revealed her to the World. One can scarcely speak of this famous organization of Canadian soldier boys without reminiscence of many happy hours spent with "Red" Newman, Arthur Holland and the rest of these merry funmakers. For to recall these former members of the Old Dumbells is to recall the early days at Mont St. Eloi in a Y.M.C.A. hut where the party was first brought into existence. It is to see through the haze of memory as one used to peer through the clouds of tobacco smoke, the long low hut lit with dim lamps, the khaki clad men crowded together on the low benches, it is to hear once more the approving laugh of the fighting men, as the witticisms and the drolleries of the concert party flashed out over the flickering candles that formed the footlights into the warm heavy atmosphere beyond. It is to recall the thrill that the first efforts toward amusement brought into your very existence.

It was outside one of there huts where Ted Charter, sitting on an empty Bully Beef box, wrote his famous "Kit Inspection"; where Alan Murray worked out his dances and tried on his new rigs; where Bill Tenant, Jerry Brayford and Bertram Langley rehearsed their songs with Jack Ayre accompanying them on an old piano which had been salvaged from a shell shattered estaminet; and where "Red" Newman and Charlie McLean worked out the material for their own concert party then known as the Y Emmas: it was in one of these huts, too, that Jack McLaren, crouched beside two or three dim candles, wrote the famous sketches that have been so popular in all their shows: while Leonard Young sat working on costumes, etc., and Fred Fenwick spent hours sewing and mending to have his costumes looking fresh and new. At this time Arthur (Jock) Holland was with a famous Imperial concert troupe known as the Bow Bells and later joined the Third Division Concert Party; Jimmie Goode and Bob Anderson were the star comedians of the first Division troupe and later joined the present organization; Tom Young, the popular juvenile, became a member of the Originals shortly after they started to tour Canada in 1919, when they were then all members of the Dumbells. A new member of the organization this year is Gene Pearson, a highly talented female impersonator, who, since the war, has been in Vaudeville and recently joined this famous Company.

To Jack Ayre, who never missed his place at the piano as Musical Director since the first performance behind the lines, fell the work of trying out the old and new musical numbers on a piano that had been buried in an old French Estaminet under the reign of German Artillery for many months. It was here, too, where that agile and altogether unique beauty chorus came into being, which for three years danced to and from in the Y.M.C.A. huts in France, later in Mons, Brussels, New York and Boston, and for the past four years, it freshness and vigor unimpaired, in every city and town throughout Canada first in "Biff Bing Bang," later in the "Dumbells revue of 1922", last season in their own revue "Full O' Pep" and this season in their greatest and most spectacular offering, "Rapid Fire" which comes to the Grand Opera House for two days, commencing with Monday (Labor Day) matinee at 2.30. On account of the lengthy and elaborate production, the evening performance will commnece at 8.15 sharp. Patrons are requested to be in their seats before the rise of the curtain.

"CINDERELLA."

Among the world's great fairy tales, known in almost every language and every clime, "Cinderella" has always occupied a conspicuous place. Its charming romance, its picturesque setting, its vivid moral, and its simplicity have endeared it to countless thousands of children, to say nothing of innumerable people of mature years. For it is one of those nursery stories that stay with us through the years, of which we are never tired of hearing, and which seems always new, no matter in what guise it may be shown.

The chaarcter of the story lends it peculiarly to effective stage presentation ,and many a play has been based upon its central idea. No English Christmas is complete without a Cinderella pantomime. This theatre season an all-Canadian company, elaborately equipped with special scenery, brilliant costumes, and ingenious stage mechanism, will tour this Dominion in an entirely new version of the famous story, in which however, all the salient features of the original have been scrupulously retained.

This production will take the form of a musical phantasy, in two acts and seventeen scenes, all different, covering the entire history of Cinderella. The book and libretto are from the pen of Forrest Audubon Rucker, and the score and lyrics written by Stanley T. Vermilyea, the dialogue is in true fairly book style, and the lyrics will be found to embody the best features of nursery rhymes as to melody and charm of simplicity.

A thoroughly effective presentation is assured by the employment of special mechanism by which the numerous scenes can be changed almost instantaneously, while a complete portable lighting equipment provides a bewilderingly rich color scheme, against which gorgeous costumes are seen to the greatest advantage.

Theo Macfarlane, a gifted and dainty young Montreal artiste, will be seen in the title role, which her youth and beauty admirably qualify her to fill. The balance of the cast is in every sense adequate. "Cinderella" will be seen here Friday and Saturday, Sept. 7 and 8, with special children's matinee on Saturday at 2.30.

I'll Heat Your House for Less Money

GET rid of dusty stoves. They mean work. They eat up fuel. Using them costs you money year after year. Let me put in a Gilson Pipeless Furnace and stop all this unnecessary work and waste.

You don't need a big cellar. There are no pipes. Just an excavation will do. Every room in your house will be cosily heated with healthful, moist, warm air. The Gilson burns coal and wood.

The whole job can be done in less than a day. You'll pay me less for a Gilson than any other heating system. You'll get a job that will give you untold satisfaction.

I'll be glad to tell you all the features about this furnace and give you a free estimate. Get in touch with me.

NEW PICTURE HAS POWERFUL THEME

What harm newspaper publicity and notoriety can do persons in public life when scandal turns its forces against them is the central theme of William de Mille's latest production for Paramount, "The World's Applause," featuring Bebe Daniels and Lewis Stone, which comes to the Capitol Theatre commencing Monday matinee.

Bebe Daniels has the role of Corinne d'Alys, a successful actress, whose high place has been largely due to her insatiable search for publicity. Lewis Stone finished stage and screen artist, makes his debut as a contract player under the Paramount banner in the role of John Elliott, a dramatic producer, who becomes enmeshed in emotional situations of compelling force when his sister (Kathlyn Williams) allows jealousy of her artist husband (Adolphe Menjou) to drag them all into a quagmire of scandal and tragedy.

From this point on the drama proceeds to an unexpected conclusion, creating, it is said, a typically well-rounded dramatic William de Mille entertainment.

An ultra-modern note is struck by Miss Daniels in her costume, which are unusually elaborate. Mr. de Mille considers the cast assembled for "The World's Applause" one of the best in his career as a motion picture director.

Other supporting roles are filled by such well-known players as Brandon Hurst, Bernice Frank, Maym Kelso, George Kuwa and James Neill

THE CAPITOL THEATRE STARTS THIRD SEASON

With the beginning of September, the Capitol Theatre opens its third winter season in Peterboro and a glance at the list of pictures booked for the Peterboro house gives an indication of some interesting evenings in store for patrons of the city's "Theatre Beautiful."

The Capitol is a splendidly-appointed theatre, combining luxury and comfort with the highest type of photoplay and giving its habitues the maximum of satisfaction with the minimum of expenditure. The manager, H. R. Hitchinson, spares no pains to give to his patrons the most courteous and attentive service and every detail in connection with the daily programme is watched with careful attention.

Among the coming winter attractions are listed "The Cheat," with Pola Negri and Jack Holt in a picture that is described as being superb in its acting and beauty of plot and setting.

A production from a story of Vicente Blasco Ibanez, author of "The Four Horsemen," is "Enemies of Women," a super-attraction starring Lionel Barrymore and Alma Rubens.

An ideal picture for Gloria Swanson a French story which gives her plenty of opportunity for the display of wonderful gown, is "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife", adapted from a play that has just closed after a record-breaking year on the road. In New York it did capacity business for six months.

An entirely new type of photoplay based on the story of a girl who tried to get into the movies and introducing nearly every well-known face in the California cinema colony; a presentation of life in Hollywood today, not only in the studio, but in the homes of the famous stars, is "Hollywood," another coming attraction.

Still another is "Down to the Sea in Ships" on which the Philadelphia North American said: "One of the most interesting pictures ever produced. Pretty nearly the best in every thing; acting photography, directing cast. It is a whale of a picture."

These pictures all have special musical scores. The Capitol Orchestra will remain under the careful direction of its present leader, Miss Florence Gladman.

AT THE REGENT.

NO DUMMY USED IN THIS MOTOR CRASH

Cecil B. De Mille Shows the Real Thing in "Manslaughter"

Cecil B. De Mille, accompanied by his production staff and several members of the cast, went to Santa Barbara for an exciting day's work on location in connection with the filming of "Manslaughter," which will be presented at the Regent Theatre next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

The incident filmed— one of the most important in the story— was the accdent in which a motorcycle officer meets his death because of the careless and reckless driving of the chief feminine character in the story. On these scenes is built most of the subsequent story.

A dislocated shoulder, many bruises and several miles of valuable negative were the net results. The producer refused to use the customary dummy in this series of scenes. Hence the bruises and injured shoulder.

Leatrice Joy and Jack Mower were the principals engaged in the action. Thomas Meighen, Lois Wilson Edythe Chapman, Jula Faye, Dorothy Cumming, Casson Ferguson and the other members of the notable cast enjoyed a one day vacation in the absence of the producer.

MILLBROOK, Sept. 1.—The saw mill at Carmel, a few miles south of this village, owned by N. James, of Millbrook, was totally consumed by fire some time during the night.

When Foreman Archie Lunn, who also lives in Millbrook, appeared at the mill at seven o'clock this morning to start operations for the day, he found the structure a mass of ruins. A quantity of lumber ready for shipment to Port Hope was also consumed.

The origin of the fire is unknown. The loss is partly covered by insurance.

Miss Ivy Wilson visited Mrs. Mendell Braund, at their camp on Wednesday.

Camping is beginning to lose its attractions. Most of the campers have either gone to their homes or are contemplating a speedy return after Labor Day. Deserted cottages, and the first red tint of the maples, makes one's thoughts turn to the inevitable winter, despite the spell of warm weather which we are now enjoying. Soon the merry voices will be hushed, and the solidutes will once more be wrapped in their desolation.

LIEUT.-GOVENOR TO OPEN OTTAWA FAIR

Civic Welcome on Opening Day. Complete Week's Program for Big Event.

His Honor Col. Henry Cockshutt, lieutenant-governor of Ontario, will formally open the Ottawa exhibition on Monday, Sept. 10th. This will be his first official visit to Ottawa and he will therefore be tendered a civic welcome by Mayor Plant as well as being the guest of honor for the opening day of the exhibition.

Each year has seen the exhibition advanced in every way and this year new records are aimed at. It is a fair in which the whole of Eastern Canada may take just pride as it is the second largest annual exhibition on the continent and is truly an institution of real worth. For many years the fair has nominally been held for a week, but as a matter of fact it was only a three or four day show. Latterly the aim has been to make it a full week and this year the fair will be complete in every detail from the opening on Monday at noon to the close with the Mardi Gras on Saturday evening.

Educational factors are rightly given prominence. Under this class come the Child's Welfare, baby show, phhsical betterment and other features which are both entertaining and instructive to all as the development of the best boys and girls is of the greatest vital importance to all. Then come the departments which encourage the production of the best in live stock, in grain, vegetables, pure food, domestic science and other creations of skill and brain. Over $35,000 is offered in prize money and the enquiries already made indicate that each department will have a full quota, with quality the keynote.

Special provision has been made for the amusement or entertainment part of the big fair. In front of the grandstand will be an unrivalled program of horse races, auto races, auto polo, balloon ascensions, community singing and select vaudeville offerings, including many thrilling feats as well as acts which are produced for laughing purposes only. There have been special rings provided for the judging of cattle and heavy horses but the light horses will be judged in front of the grandstand and the performances in harness and over hurdles make a horse show that in itself would be more than worth while. In the evenings the program will be augmented by a spectacular fireworks display.

The midway will have a score of new things to amuse and surprise. There will be all kinds of shows of the better class and riding devices which will include the caterpillar, the latest device which is making the biggest kind of a hit in the American amusement places.

The automobile show, pure food show, poultry show, dog show, cat show, dairy department, horticultural and agricultural displays, art exhibit, women's useful and fancy work, merchants' and manufacturers' products, and many other departments are included in the attractions which should not be missed by exhibition visitors.

Special rates are given on the railways and for those who have motors the good roads all lead to Ottawa. The management of the exhibition has provided ample parking space for cars inside the ground.

DECLARE CROPS MUST BE SAVED FROM DISTILLERS

BERLIN, Sept. 1 (Associated Press)—German professors of hygiene have criticized the increase of alcoholism in Germany in a memorial addressed to the various governments urging that further steps be taken to conserve the national food-stuffs now used in making liquor, and to protect public health against the increasing consumption of alcohol.

Doctor I. A. H. Selter, director of the Hygienic Institute of the University of Koenigsberg, issued the memorial on behalf of the Society of German Professors of Hygiene. The document suggests an absolute prohibition of the use of foodstuffs, especially grain, potatoes and sugar, in the manufacture of alcoholic liquors.

"It cannot be contested," the memorial says, "that the production of alcohol deprives the German people of great quantities of foodstuffs. But it is not this fact alone which causes us to raise a voice of warning. We know by experience that mulnutrition fosters alcoholism, and that, on the other hand, increasing alcoholism has a double effect on underfed people. We therefore ask the government to control, with all means at its disposal, the increasing consumption of alcohol. By this means the collapse of feeding can be prevented.

Dr. Selter produces Prussian statistics to show that the use of alcohol is on the increase.

Shortly after the publication of this memorial, it was announced that the producers of alcoholic spirits in Germany had decided to stop using potatoes in their distilleries, and would at once turn over to the food markets all existing supplies.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS HAS SPLIT FACTIONS

BUENOS AIRES, Sept 1. (Associated Press).—The question of Argentina's return to the League of Nations promises to cause a spirited political fight in the present congress before it closes in September. While the chamber recently voted to pay the League secretariat's bills for dues, decision has yet to be made whether to ratify the adhesion given to the League by the Yrigoven government, and if this is done, whether Argentina should continue to remain aloof from participation in the League Assembly until that body acts favorably on the Argentine amendments making all sovereign states members of the League and "democratizing" the representation in the council.

Remaining aloof until such action is taken would constitute the confirmation of the policy of ex-President Yrigoyen, who caused the withdrawal of the Argentine delegation from the Assembly in 1920, but President Alvear is not in favor of maintaining this policy. Having dissented from Argentina's withdrawal when he was a member of the delegation, he is now, as president, seeking to rectify what he believes to have been a mistaken proceeding. He wants his country to renew its relations with the League in full and be represented regularly by a delegation, which could carry on Argentina's effort to democratize the League from the inside, and meanwhile, enable the country to participate in the benefits of membership enjoyed by nearly all other South American nations, including Brazil and Chile.

But the ex-president, reputed leader of the Radical Party which elected Sr. Alvear, and credited with the control of a considerable number of deputies and senators, is decidedly opposed, it is well understood in political circles, to having his policy repudiated. Consequently, while the President had no trouble in obtaining from congress authority to pay the Argentine dues to the League, it is believed that neither ratification of adhesion will be obtained without a contest.

ANTHRACITE STRIKERS ARE LOOKING FOR JOBS IN OTHER INDUSTRIES

But Workers Are Still Optimistic of An Early Resumption of Operations While Operators Are Pessimistic—Hinges on Wage Question.

THE FUEL PROBLEM

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Sept. 4. — (Canadian Press).—The suspension of mining in the upper coal fields remained complete to-day. Many miners are looking for jobs in other industries pending the settlement of the anthracite wage question.

Miners workers are still optimistic of an early resumption, while operators say they do not look for a short suspension so long as the workers demand a big increase in wages, the check off and other concessions.

CONFER WITH FERGUSON.

TORONTO, Sept. 4. — (Canadian Press).—C. McGrath and J. A. Ellis, Federal and Provincial Fuel Controllers, conferred with Premier Ferguson and Hon. Chas. McCrae, Minister of Mines, at the Parliament Buildings this morning relative to Ontario's fuel supply for the coming year.

After the conference Premier Ferguson announced that arrangements are being made to have municipalities appoint local fuel controllers for the purpose of regulating the distribution of anthracite and fixing the price per ton locally. This latter action is necessary, said the Premier, by reason of the difficulty of the Central Fuel Controller fixing prices for outlying places, with the transportation conditions and other exigencies of which he may not be familiar.

ELEVEN PERSONS BAPTIZED SUNDAY

Hundreds of Persons Witnessed Interesting Ceremony.

Eleven persons stepped down into the Otonabee River at Inverlea Park on Sunday and were baptized by Rev David McKee, Pastor of Truth Mission. Hundreds of people stood on the banks and lined the bridge to witness the ceremony, which was very impressive.

Gathered on the shore, in their sombre black robes, the candidates joined in singing several hymns, and the Pastor delivered a short address, "It is no small matter to be gathered here to perfect the likeness of Jesus," the speaker declared. "It may be a small matter in the eyes of the world, but if we want to become the children of God we must do as our great forerunner did. He is our example. If we hope some day to be like him we must come up out of the water as He did. This is our day; now is the day of salvation.

A Preparation.

Jesus has gone to prepare a place for us,' 'said Pastor McKee, "and we must prepare ourselves for that place." The speaker urged those about to take part in the ceremony to strive for service.

Accepting from the Father what he has offered, His followers must obey His command to be filled with the Spirit. This will lead to earnest service, which is one of the signs of a true follower of Jesus.

Those who were baptized were: Mrs. Edwards and her daughter, Jean; Mrs. Ben Bolam; Mrs. Garner; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Woodcock and daughter, Grace; Mrs. R. Glover and daughter, Edith; and Mr. and Mrs. William Drain.

SECOND PHASE OF JAPAN'S CALAMITY

SAN FRANCISCO, September 4.—Canadian Press. — Japan to-day entered the second phase of her calamity. This consisted first in a more definite reckoning through the official channels of the losses sustained in the stricken region as the result of the earthquake, fire, tidal wave, and typhoon, and second, in reconstruction

Reports from various sources have estimated the loss of life in Tokio, Yokohama and vicinity from 100,000 up to 300,000. The latter estimate came to the Associated Press by way of Harbin. Damage to property has been estimated as high as $250,000,000.

It is expected that later and more careful estimates will reduce the casualties figures. In the great shock and excitement that naturally followed for some time after such a disaster exagerated reports are certain to be made.

Martial Law.

Martial law prevailed in all the stricken cities, and help from outside was badly needed.

Reports from Tokio by way of Shanghai, Peking and other Chinees cities, to-day told of rioting, and said that the police were arming the citizens as a means of coping with the situation The rioting was ascribed to the food shortage mainly.

A volcano 40 miles from Tokio is still active The River Sumid has changed its course through the sadly stricken city.

The yen has fallen appreciably on the Harbin stock exchange and business is transacted in Chinese dollars only.

Good Salmon Fishing in Loon Lake, Apsley

Loon Lake, near Apsley, offers excellent sport for salmon trout fishing. Last Friday afternoon a record catch was made by Mr. Eustace Spence and Miss Myrtle Windsor, of Apsley, when eight salmon were landed in about four hours, the largest weighing 9 pounds, and the balance averaging 5 pounds each. This catch was made in the deepest part of the lake, by trolling with a copper line at a depth of about 250 feet.

STOCK MARKET DEVELOPMENTS OVER WEEK-END

Japanese Issues Dropped Several Points But the General List Acted Well.

STOCKS MOVE UP

NEW YORK, Sept. 4.—(Special). — Foreign developments over the protracted week end were of mixed tenor. France displayed a more conciliatory attitude in the reparations mix up, which found expression in Poincare's offer to undertake an industrial co-operative agreement with Germany should the latter consent to abandon the Ruhr resistance. But European despatches were completely overshadowed by the tragedy which visited Tokio and Yokohama. International banking interests had their attention focused on the action of Japanese securities at the opening. Tokio Municipals suffered the worst, the 5 per cent. issue listed on the stock exchange dropping ten points to 65. Japanese Government first 4½'s were off 3½ at 90½. However, domestic news was of a favorable character, and stocks were steady in the early dealings. Industrials acted especially well, reflecting the optimism produced by Studebaker's achievement of record August production and Baldwin's feat of turning out 31 of the largest type of locomotives in 30 hours. Trading was light in the first hour but the general list remained steady and progress on the upside was made by a number of industrials.

Davison Chemical's five-point recovery appeared to be a technical recoil from Saturday's precipitate drop.

Following Dupont's rise into new high ground on the movement, the report was heard that the company contemplated the distribution of two shares of General Motors for each share of Dupont outstanding. The company owns eight shares of General Motors for each share of Dupont outstanding.

Mack Truck to-day declared a quarterly dividend of $1.50 on the Common, payable October 1. This places the issue on a $6 annual basis against the previous rate of $1 quarterly or $4 a year. Kelly Springfield Tire declared the regular quarterly dividend of $1.50 on the 6 per cent. Preferred.

CONDOLENCE FROM CANADA FOR JAPANESE VICTIMS

Expressions of Sympathy Are Pouring Into the Office of the Consul-General to Canada, But Cable Communication With Japan Interrupted

OTTAWA, September 4. Canadian Press. — T. Ohta, the Japanese Consul General to Canada, stated this morning that as yet he has received no official information of any kind from Japan concerning the great disaster in that country.

Japanese cables emanating from the Consulate since the disaster have been returned to the Consulate by the cable companies with the statement that they cannot be sent as all communication is interrupted.

Expressions of sympathy are now pouring into the Consulate. The Prime Minister, Right Hon. Mackenzie King, who was at his summer residence at Kingsmore when the disaster occurred, sent Mr. Ohta, by special messenger, a message conveying his personal regret, and that of the Canadian people.

On behalf of the Province of Ontario, Lieut. Governor Cockshutt has forwarded condolences and sympathy.

ITALY COULD QUICKLY SUBDUE GREEK FORCES

Comparison of Fighting Machines Shows That Italian Army and Navy Are Much the Stronger —Aviation Would Play Big Part

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4. — What would happen if Greece fails "to give satisfaction" for the killing of Italian officers on the interallied commission for elimination of the Albanian frontiers?

How long could Greece last against Italy, provided no other nation came to the former's aid?

Many experts think not long.

A few hours could take the well-equipped Italian navy through the Ionian Sea and into the harbor of Piraeus, the defence of Athens, Greek capital. And a few well-directed shots would, these experts think, end the war.

Italy's peace-strength standing army consists of 250,000 men. But it has a well-trained, ever-ready reserve of more than two and a quarter million men. Its military service is compulsory.

Greek Army.

Like Italy, Greece compels her young men to enter the military service. It commences in the 20th year and lasts for the long period of 31 years. The normal term in the active army is three years for the cavalry and two for the infantry, followed by 21 years in the first serie of the reserve and eight in the second serie.

The approximate strength of Greece's army is 200,000 men. But in its reserve are nearly as many thousands as in that of Italy. The exact number is not available.

On the sea, Italy can boast of the following: First line light cruisers, 2 of 16,000 tons; destroyer leaders, 6 of 12,270 tons; first line destroyers, 12 of 11,680 tons; first line submarines, 4 of 2,600 tons. Fleet submarines, none.

Greece is far removed from Italy in naval strength. It has but three first-class capital ships. It also has 13 destroyers, 6 modern torpedo boats, 2 submarines and a variety of miscellaneous craft. To these have been added the former Austrian destroyer Ulau, and 7 torpedo boats, now used for police duty.

Italy Controls Air.

Aviation is certain to play a big part in any such war. Here again, the Hellenic forces are overwhelmingly outnumbered.

Italy's active air forces include 37 first-line army and navy squadrons, with 370 first-class fighting planes and 8,000 men. Besides this force, there is a large reserve.

Owing to the revolution, etc., the Greek aviation strength is woefully weak. The aviation service boasts about 100 officers and less than half that number of planes, many of them of almost obsolete types.

TO MAKE TERMS MORE ONEROUS

Italy So Threatens Should Greece Delay In Fulfilling the Terms of Her Ultimatum.

LONDON, Sept. 4.—(Canadian res).—Italy will make her terms for the evacuation of Corfu more onerous if Greece delays in fulfilling the terms of his ultimatum, Premier Mussolini is quoted by the Daily Mail's Rome correspondent as declaring.

League Incompetent

A Central News Despatch from Rome to-day says that Premier Mussolini specifically has instructed the Italian delegate to the League of Nations that he has absolutely determined to maintain his position that the League of Nations is incompetent to deal with cases in which the honor and prestige of Italy are concerned.

Suggests Commissions

A despatch from Geneva says N. Politis the Greek spokesman, proposed to the council of the league this afternoon that it refer the proposed investigation of the Greco-Italian dispute to a neutral commission and the proposed indemnity to a mixed commission. He offered to deposit 50,000,000 lire in a Swiss bank as guarantee. The council will consider his proposals to-morrow morning.

A member of the Italian delegation to the Assembly of the League of Nations at Geneva to-day authorzed the League secretary to deny that Italy had ever officially repudiated competency of the league to handle the Greco-Italian crisis.

Athens Isolated

Rome reports Athens completely isolated and the Greek givernment is allowing no reports concerning the "grave internal situation" to be sent from the capital according to a despatch received from Greece, shortly before noon to-day.

Withdraw From League

An exchange telegraph despatch from Rome, to-day says, that Premier Mussolin told the Cabinet that if the Council of the League of Nations asserts its competency to deal with the Greco-Italian Controversy, Italy will withdraw from the league.

A STEAM ENGINE LEFT THE RAILS

Held Up Traffic on Charlotte Street on Saturday Afternoon.

Street car traffic on Charlotte street was partially disorganized on Saturday afternoon when Canadian National Engine 7143 left the track on Hick's siding. A spread rail was the cause of the derailment, and all but one truck rested on the ties.

All possible haste was made in re-railing the big engine, but three hours labor was necessary. The engine had only arrived at noon from Lindsay.

BATHING SUITS PUT OUT A FIRE

A grass fire at the east end of Smith street bridge on Saturday was attended by some unusual features. It was visible from the bathing beach, and the youthful bathers stampeded towards it. On( arrival, they though they might as well put it out so some of them stepped out of their bathing suits and used them to beat out the flames.

BIG CAMPAIGN TO BE STAGED BY ROTARIANS

Local Club Proposes to Assist All Crippled Chilgren Who Are in Need of Help.

TO HOLD SURVEY

A comprehensive survey of the campaign to be carried on by the Peterboro Rotary Club on behalf of the crippled children of the city as planned by himself and Rotarians Dr. Morrison and Andrew Brown, the other members of the committee was given at the weekly luncheon today by Rotarian Dr. A. W. McPherson, chairman of the Crippled Children's committee. The activities of this campaign will enlist the services not only of every Rotarian, but of the Rotary Annes as well and should result in a material betterment of conditions in Peterboro.

Vice-President Reid Wrenn was in the chair and during the meeting announced that a big musical evening under the auspices of Rotary would be given in Peterboro on October 29th.

Rotarian Dr. McPherson first outlined the cases that the committee after considerable consideration had decided would come within the scope of the club's campaign pointed out that an effort would be made not to correct the physical defects that would yield to treatment but also to see that the children received an education and were placed in occupation where they could earn their own livelihood.

The first step would be to hold an open meeting to which the Rotary Annes, the members of the medical profession, the officers of the Health Association, the Mayor of Peterboro the Reeve of North Monaghan and others interested would be invited and at which the whole question would be discussed.

The assistance of the Rotary Annes in carrying out a house to house survey of the city and suburbs would be enlisted. This survey would enable the number of crippled children to be ascertained and afterwards the names would be divided among the Rotarians for a personal investigation after which the committee would be in a position to know just how many children there were who needed help. The next step would be to decide what steps must be taken to remedy the defects and what treatment whether here or else where would be necessary. Rotarian Andrew Brown a member of this committee said that he was sure there was a great work to be done and that the committee expected the co-operation of every member of the club.

The open meeting mentioned by Dr. McPherson will be held in the near future.

BABY SHOW ENTRIES CENTRAL EXHIBITION

Mothers Have Only to Be on Hand When the Class Their Baby is in is Called

There is no red tape surrounding the baby show at the Peterborough Central Exhibition to be held on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, September 12, 13 and 14, at the Exhibition Grounds in the large completely equipped tent to be erected for the occasion, and staffed by medical men, nurses and the women of the Welfare Babies' Clinic.

The entries are not limited to the city, but may be made by mothers of any child who thinks she has a prize winning baby.

No previous entry is required. All the mothers have to do is to have their babies at the tent previous to 2.30 o'clock on the day on which their class is called for examination.

The following will give all particulars:

On Wednesday, September 12th, the class for under-developed children, both boys and girls, will be held, in which those children who have made progress since registration at the Well Babies'' Clinic, will be examined and judged. On the same afternoon there will be a class of babies up to six months of age, one for girls and one for boys.

On Thursday, September 13th, classes will be held including infants from six to eighteen months, boys and girls in separate divisions.

A class for girl babies and one for boys, from eighteen months up to three years of age, which is the limit in age for entry, will be held on Friday, the 14th of September.

No entry fee, only required to buy an admission ticket to the Fair.

THE REGULAR MEETING OF THE G.W.V.A. WILL BE HELD THIS EVENING AT 8 P.M.SHARP ALL MEMBERS ARE REQUESTED TO ATTEND AS MATTERS OF IMPORTANCE WILL BE DISCUSSED. S. WHATLEY, SECRETARY-TREASURER. 1d

FIRST ACCOUNT BY EYE-WITNESS OF TERRIBLE DISASTER IN JAPAN AS EARTH QUAKED AND ROCKED

ONLY 40,000 LEFT IN YOKOHAMA

PEKIN, September 4. Canadian Press.—There are but 40,000 persons left in the city of Yokohama, all the rest being dead or having fled to places of greater safety, according to a landing party from the Steamer Korea Maru, whose report on conditions was received here to-day.

Yokohama's population as given by the last enumeration is approximately 423,000.

The landing party, it is asserted, obtained evidence in support of the earlier story that an attack had been made on the new Premier, Count Yamamoto.

The story as relayed through them was that the count was attacked while attending a session at the Naval Club at which the new Cabinet was outlined, and which the earthquake interrupted. The attacker's aim, it was said, was frustrated by others present.

A great explosion has ocurred at Owakidin, in Hakon, one of the hot springs of Japan, located about fifty miles from Tokio.

Whole Cities and Large Districts Shook to Pieces, and Devastating Flames Overcame Terror-Stricken Inhabitants - Earth Disturbance Centred at Bottom of the Sea.

RELIEF MEASURES

The first eye-witness account of the disaster along the Pacific Coast of Japan and the appalling loss of life and scenes of destruction in Tokio and Yokohama on Saturday was brought to Osaka, more than 200 miles south of the Japanese Capital by the Tokio correspondent of the Osako Mainichi. The correspondent made his way out of the shaking and flaming city on Saturday afternoon during the height of the catastrophe. His story follows:

OSAKA, Japan, September 4th.—(Special.)—My last sight of Tokio was at 3 p.m on Saturday At that time in the midst of unchecked fires and repeated shocks I saw people trying vainly to reach safety, heedless of the hundreds of corpses in the street,

The disaster had come upon Tokio about three hours earlier The centre of the quake was then believed to have been at the bottom of the sea, near Oshima Island, about 50 miles south west of us

It came in the form of a dozen terrible vertical four inch wave movements the earth beneath us rising and falling Within an hour the quake had somewhat subsided, but the tremors continued

Disastrous Results.

A disastrous conflagration followed the shaking to pieces of Tokio and Yokohama. Yokusawa was almost completly destroyed, as were the districts of Cieiba, Kantgawa, Shisuoka, Saitamau. The extent of the damage and the casualties was at first incalculable.

At that time I estimated that nearly 200,000 houses had been destroyed in Tokio, and that a like number of the inhabitants had been killed and injured.

The Crown Prince's palace, nearly all the buildings of our government, the Bank of Japan, the Imperial University and Library department, stores, theatres, public halls, all the newspaper offices—these were totally destroyed.

The Imperial Palace itself was heavily damaged.

The magnificent new "sky scrapers," of which Tokio was proud, and which had been recently completed in front of the central station, were destroyed.

Our Prince Regent, who fled from the Imperial Palace at the first shock, later returned to a somewhat detached structure, which at first was judged to be safe, but as the danger continued he fled again from the city and through Takawaki 60 miles to the northwest. His destination is unknown.

Pinned in the Ruins.

One of the most terrible occurrences of these first brief hours in the crumbling, burning capital, was when the government printing office collapsed and several hundred employees were pinned in the ruins.

Another tragedy, of which we heard early, was near Fuji, where 500 girls were killed in the crash of a factory.

When I left Tokio frantic refugees were struggling to escape through streets lined with corpses.

Relief Measures.

The American Red Cross has formed head quarters at Honolulu, and is registering twenty nurses and six physicians who are ready for immediate despatch to Tokio.

Medical supplies and other relief is being prepared for shipment. It is estimated that five million pounds of flour is available to be sent from Hawaii.

Casualties Exaggerated.

The latest word from Tokio cabled this afternoon from Osaka, in a despatch timed 2.50 p.m. September 4th, gave the contents of a bulletin issued officially as follows:

"Officially reported 350,000 houses in Tokio destroyed; 2500 killed and 100.000 injured."

This report indicates that the casualties in the Japanese earthquake may have been greatly exaggerated. It is possible however that the above cable was slightly garbled in transmission and that the number of killed may have been higher. The first press report direct from Tokio however estimated the dead at from 500 to 1000 and it is possible with establishment of direct communications the casualties will prove to have been far less than reported in the first excitement.

A BUSINESS MAN CALLED BY DEATH

William H. Hamilton Passed Away Yesterday After an Extended Illness.

Peterboro citizens generally received an unexpected shock when it became known that William H. Hamilton, one of the best and most favorably known business men of the city had passed away at eleven-thirty yesterday morning. Mr. Hamilton, as the popular proprietor of the metropolitan grocery, had a wide circle of acquaintances, and in his various other activities had a host of firm friends, old and new. As quite a young man, he became connected with the business that was his in later years, working with Mr. T. W. Robinson from early in 1892 until Mr. Robinson left town six years after that date, when he took over the business himself and has continued operating it ever since. Of a quiet, genial, friendly disposition, those who knew him best, liked him best, and his business prospered steadily.

When the Dustless Sweeper Company was incorporated Mr. Hamilton became identified with it and was president of the board. Recently, when the principle of the sweeper machine was adapted to removing dust from mills and elevators, and a wonderful field opened up to the company, Mr. Hamilton became very enthusiastic, and was expecting to see that branch of his interests grow rapidly, so that his death appeared to come just when his hopes were highest.

In his church life Mr. Hamilton was always consistent, and a real standby of, first, the old Charlotte Street Methodist Church, and then of Trinity. For over thirty-five years he was librarian of the Sunday School, and for about thirty years was a most faithful and kindly usher in the church. In all the work of the church and Sunday school, he was most active and valued at his true worth by his co-workers.

For the past few months Mr. Hamilton has been unable to attend as regularly to his business as he wished, the result of a bad fall he sustained in the elevator of his store some time ago, but the illness which found him in too weakened a condition to fight it off was of only about three weeks' duration. He spent the early part of the season in July at his Stoney Lake cottage, apparently gaining strength, but it was ruled otherwise, and he was taken to the rest that he was abundantly prepared to enjoy.

He was the eldest son of the late William Hamilton, and in his fifty-fourth year. The surviving members of the family are two brothers, Percy and Frank J., and one sister, Margaret A., all at home

The funeral will be held from his late residence, 415 Rubidge Street, on Thursday, September 6, at 10.30 a.m..

BIRTH INCREASE IN MONTH OF AUGUST

The Story Told by the Vital Statistics at the City Hall.

An increase of 14 births and 15 deaths, and a decrease in marriages of one is the story told by August vital statistics compared with the previous month. The totals in August were 50 births, 21 marriages and 35 deaths.

In August last year they were respectively 45, 16 and 25, the increase in all three this year being marked.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Clive Roberts Barton

THE TWO PONIES.

The Twins put on their magic shoes and made a wish, and instantly they were whirled away through space and landed lightly as thistledown in a place away out west that it would have taken us days and nights on a train to get to. But Nancy and Nick were there as quickly as you could jump over a gutter of rainwater.

They looked around so curiously at the miles and miles of flat country that they didn't see the surprise waiting for them. A clear stream was flowing by, with cottonwood trees growing on each bank, and all sorts of green things like a garden. And tied to one of the trees were two ponies — one white and one black, with saddles and bridles, all ready to go.

"Jump on," said the white pony. "I'm yours, Nancy, and, Nick, you're to ride Blackie, my brother. My name's Snow. We're going to take you to the Red Rock Cave in the mountains where Mister Gallop lives. He's waiting."

Nancy and Nick, at the word "mountains," forgot to thank the pony. Everything had happened so quickly they had scarcely had time to get their breaths, so if they forgot their manners for a minute is wasn't to be wondered at. Beyond the place where the ponies were tied the mountains rose so high in the air the Twins had to tilt their heads back to see to the top. And on the tippy toppiest of the highest point there was snow, like whipped cream on top of chocolate cake.

Then Nick remembered his manners. "This is a fine place and we're going to like it. We'll all be friends and help Mister Gallop all we can. What does he do?"

"He's sort of an overseer," said Blackie. "Someone has to run things out here and see fair play. He's a fairy but he dresses like a cowboy and wears boots and spurs and chaps and a big hat and a handkerchief 'round his neck and carries a lasso. He rides a horse called Echo. If you listen you can hear him 'most any time. Jump on."

Nick jumped on Blackie, Nancy climbed up on Snow, and away they went.

COAL PRICES MOUNT STEADILY DURING THE PAST TEN YEARS

By Harry B. Hunt

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—How the prices of anthracite coal have been forced steadily upward for the past 10 years and how these increased prices have been split between production costs, transportation and profits, is shown by a statistical analysis of coal cost just compiled by the U. S. Coal Commission.

In 10 years both the wholesale and retail price of coal just about doubled.

In 1913 the average retail price of stove anthracite in Boston was $8.25 In Washington it was $7.50.

Today the prices respectively, are $15.00 and $15.39.

Since 1913 the freight rate from the anthracite field to Boston has increased $1.25 a ton, to Washington $1.14 a ton.

Eigth of the larger coal companies, closely affiliated with railroads, are grouped together in price quotations. Their product is known as "company" coal. In 1913 the average price of company stove coal at ahe mines was $3.56. Today the company quotations are $8 to $8.35.

Varying Prices

In Boston to-day, $1 pays for 128 pounds of coal. Of this $1.45 cents represents the sale price at the mine and covers production costs, land royalities and operator's profit. The railroads get 23 cents of this $1 for their share in hauling the coal. The remaining 32 cent went to the local dealer.

In New York where $1 buys 145 pounds of coal the division is 56 cents to the mine operator, 18 cents to the railroads and 26 cents to the dealer.

In Philadelphia the consumer gets 155 pounds for his $1, of which 61 16 and 23 cents go respectively to mine, railroads and dealers.

In Washington the buyer gets 141 pounds of coal, and his $1 is split 58 cents to the mine 20 cents to freight and 22 cents to dealer.

Chicago, being a greater distance from the anthracite field pays a greater proportion to the railroads, the Chicagoan getting only 120 pounds of coal for his $1 of which the mine gets 49 cents, the railroads 30 cents and the dealer 21 cents.

St. Louis, which is on the western fringe of the territory using anthracite, as a net price per ton 44 cents lower than Chicago and the St. Louis dealer gets only 15 cents of each $1 the other 85 going to railroads and mines.

Mine Price

Of the quotations to-day, $8 to $8.35 f.o.b. mines the cost of production, according to the commission's ex-perts averages $5.68. Of this the labor cost is $3.97.

The f.o.b. mine price in 1913 was $2.69, with the labor cost averaging $1.62.

Whereas the labor cost per ton has increased 145 per cent in 10 years, the mine sale price has increased slightly over 200 per cent—from $2.69 to $8-$8.35.

The proportionate cost of labor as represented in the mine sale price has decreased from 61.6 per cent to 59.5 per cent.

In considering the increase of labor cost, however, the commission emphasizes two important points.

1. That only a part of the increased cost of production per ton is due to increased wage scale, a part being attributable to changed physical conditions in the mines, such as mining of seam, which formerly were considered too poor to work etc.

2 That the purchasing power of the dollar in 1923 is about 70 per cent. less than in 1913.

BRITISH TRADE UNION CONGRESS SHOWS DECLINE

700 Delegates Indicate Decreased Enrolment of More Than Half a Million.

DENOUNCE MUSSOLINI

PLYMOUTH, Sept. 4.— (Canadian Press Cabe). — The British trade union congress opened yesterday at Plymouth with 700 delegates in attendance representing 4,369,000 members of affiliated unions, a decline of half a million compared with last year's roll.

J. B. Williams, chairman of the congress, presiding, delivered a speech in which he denounced Italy's action against Greece and asked did they intend to stand idly by and see the world's peace imperilled because of the mad lust for imperialism had been transferred from a Hohenzollern to Mussolini. He protested in the strongest terms against any warlike action constituting a breach of the letter or spirit of the league of nations.

The chairman said he belived the labor movement would do everything in its power to prevent the people of this or any other country being sacrificed to the wild ambition and mad lust for power of any man.

HASTINGS WENT DOWN IN DEFEAT

Lost Lacrosse Semi-Final to St. Simons by 10-6

TORONTO, September 4. — In a semi-final play off, full of thrills from start to finish, the St. Simons' Juvenile Team defeated Hastings here yesterday by the score of 10 to 6.

Saunders, the Hastings goalie was the best seen on the local field in many a day. He got in front of everything and it was impossible to put many shots past him, but at that had a very busy morning.

The Hastings boys are the nicest stick handlers seen on these grounds in many years, and are a good clean and manly bunch of boys. Much credit is due their manager in selecting such a bunch of players.

Referee C. Parkinson called the game at 10.30 and play had only commenced when St. Simons scored the first goal; in this period it looked as if St. Simons, had it all over their opponents, the quarter ending 7-1.

W. Clapper, one of the stalwarts of the old Oshawa team, acted as field captain, and when the second quarter commenced he had changed goalies and the Hastings boys settled down and sailed right into St. Simons; at the end of the second period the score stood St. Simons 9, Hastings 4.

In the last two quarters some good fast and brilliant lacrosse was played, Baker, Flint, Goulu, Cowell, Cruickshanks and White, playing on the Hastings home, made the bog boys of the St. Simons' defence work like old timers to keep them from scoring.

When the gong rang for the final period the score stood: St. Simons 10; Hastings 6.

The Line-up—

Hastings — Goal Saunders, point Cochrane, cover point Waye, 1st defence Archer, 2nd defence Dodd, centre Flint, 1st home Cruickshanks, 2nd home Gould, outside Cowell, inside Baker.

Subs, White, Walsh, Lambert, McArthur.

St. Simons — Goal Fletcher, point McKinnon, cover point Cavanagh, 1st defence Carroll, 2nd defence Laut centre Marsh, 1st home Hicks, 2nd home Wallace, outside Bennett, inside Davies. Subs, Bartlett, Lowery.

Referee, C. Parkinson, Toronto.

IRISH FREE STATE MAY HOLD REBELS

Government Justifies the Detention of 12,000 De Valera Followers, Including 300 Women.

DUBLIN, September 4. — Recent powers granted the Irish Government have made it clear that there will be no immediate release, in a body, of the 12,000 De Valera followers, including 300 women, who were seized during the late rebellion.

The Government announces it will continue the present practice of releasing 300 a month.

These prisoners are given their liberty on pledge of quiet behaviour.

The Government made its attitude known following the enactment of a Parliamentary law, permitting the authorities to hold untried prisoners for six monhs longer. Government officials also pointed out that they have power to make further arrests, if necessary.

Treatment of prisoners continues to be a subject of much discussion and investigation. Protest meetings are held every Sunday in Dublin, where Mrs. Maude Gonne MacBride and Mrs. Despard, sister of the Earl of Ypres, are the chief speakers.

They charge that the rebel prisoners suffer from overcrowding in jails, from lack of proper sanitation, and insufficient food. Beating of the prisoners is charged, the women also claim.

73 Per Cent. of Irish Free State Electors in Favor of Treaty

DUBLIN, Sept. 3.— Final figures in the balloting last week for members of the Dail Eireann were made public yesterday. These show that the polling, by parties, was as follows:

Government, 415,143; Republicans, 286,161; Labor, 142,388; Farmers, 135,972, and Independents, 24,291.

The aggregate vote cast was 1,003,955.

The Government Statistical Department in a statement, says the results show that 73 per cent. of the voters supported the treaty and are prepared to work in Parliament under the constitution.

INCREASE IMPORTS OF FARM PRODUCE.

While Canada's Exports of Agricultural Products to U.S.A. Declined.

OTTAWA, Sept. 4. — (Canadian Press).— Canadian imports of agricultural produce from the United States increased considerably during the four months ending with July as compared with last year, while Canadian exports of similar products to the United States fell off during the same period according to a bulletin just issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

GLOBE SHIMMIES DOES NOT ROTATE.

New Astronomical Complaint Caught By Earth—Sun and Moon Have It.

LONDON, Sept 4. — This old globe of ours is not rotating as a rigid body in the heavens, but it is behaving as if it were a jelly-like substance, and some parts of its surface are moving relatively to other parts. This startling suggestion is put forward by Prof. W. de Sitter of the University of Leyden, in Nature.

According to the Professor it would follow that the distance between various points on its surface is shifting slightly. Wireless time-signals exchanged between various observatories have shown discrepancies, reaching on occasions several tenths of a second.

Similar fluctuations in recent years have been observed on the surface of the moon; in fact, something queer is happening in the solar system, because even the sun seems to have been infected by the new astrono-

Big Radio Antennae Installed in Hawaii.

HONOLULU, September 4. — A new radio antennae system, six and a half miles long, with the object of protecting messages from interference and to maintain them in absolute secrecy, has just been installed by the Radio Corporation of America at Koko Head.

The antennae are strung in a direct mathematical line with the company's station near San Francisco, and will receive signals on a wave length of approximately 12,000 meters. The system is believed to be one of the largest in the world.

TORONTO, September 4th. — (Special.) — Cables received this morning indicate that the loss of life in Tokio alone will be about one hundred and fifty thousand, while in Yokohama there will be another one hundred thousand.

The Italion and French embassies in Tokio were destroyed, also the C. P. R. Steamships building in Yokohama was wrecked.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 4. — The casualties from the earthquake and fire total 500,000, and 300,000 houses have been burned, it is estimated by the metropolitan police of Tokio, according to a courier from Cyama, who reported to-day at Temioka to the Radio Corporation of America.

The report received in San Francisco this morning, said the Imperial Palace was being guarded by a regiment of infantry, a battalion of engineers and the Imperial Division.

SEATTLE, September 4. — The passenger liners Empress of Canada and President Jefferson, which came within radius of the tidal zone off the coast of Japan are safe, accordingto word received by the Canadian Pacific Line agency here.

KOBE, Japan, Sept. 4.—Great destruction and loss of life have resulted from the earthquake which Saturday struck Japan the most severe blow received in her history. Both Tokio and Yokohama are reported to be virtually in ruins, hundreds of cities and towns on the Idzu Peninsula have been levelled by fire, and tremors, and the casualties at the present time cannot be estimated.

Yokohama is completly isolated and is declared to have burned or be burning. It is learned that the Chief of Police of Yokohama sent a wireless message to Osaka appealing for help and declaring that 'Yokohama is a sea of flames."

Death and destruction were spread over an area roughly comprised within a radius of fifty miles of Tokio. How extensive the casualties and the material damage outside that zone is, has not been determined as all communications with Japan are still interrupted except for brief connections by radio with Tomioka and occasional despatches from Japan to Shanghai.

With railroad lines telephone wires and all other means of communication and travel between Tokio and the remainder of Japan and the outside world cut off Tokio and the other cities on the central eastern sea coast on the island of Hondo are isolated in their desolation.

The cities of Tokio and Yokohama were described by the superintendent of the Japanese Government wireless station at Tomioka which operates via radio correspondence, as 'Like Hell.'

Buildings were falling, fire was spreading everywhere; dead and dying were on all sides; there were explosion and cries of horror and fear by the panic-stricken populace.

What quake and fire did not destroy on land, tidal waves are reported to have crushed or sunk at sea. The fate of the ships in Yokohama Harbor and what ships were there, still remain to be determined.

Japan has about 1,500 earthquakes a year, or an average of four shocks a day, most of which are not violent. In Tokio a shock is felt on an average of once a week.

More or less destructive 'quakes occur in Japan on an average of once in every two years and a half.

The greatest quake of the 230 serious ones that have occurred since the Fifth Century, was in 1707, which shook the entire south-western portion of Japan over an extent of about 500,000 miles. It originated beneath the ocean and was followed by huge tidal waves.

On December 23 and 24, 1854, there were two violent quakes after which tidal waves crossed the Pacific ocean in 12 hours and 40 minutes, leaving traces on the tide guage diagrams at San Francisco and the most violent quakes in Japan were as follows:

684 A.D.—An area of about three square miles in Tosa was submerged.

1361—Severe earthquakes around Koyti.

1396—Quake at Tokaido killed 20,000; Hamana Lagoon was formed.

1596—Bungo, Kyushu, visited by a quake; 700 killed; Kyoti shaken.

1792—At Hizen, 15,000 killed.

1844—At Shinano, 12,000 killed.

1896—Sanriku districts—27,000 killed.

There are many large modern buildings in Yokohama. Among them are the pacific Mail offices; the Toyo Kisen Kaisha offices; the American Express building; Cook's (Tourist) building; Arthur and Bond, departmental store; banks, hotels and hospitals..

A ROW OVER GERMANY EXPECTED IN LEAGUE

Question of Admittance Likely to Make Sharp Division, With France and Belgium Opposed.

By Henry Wood

GENEVA, Sept. 4. — (United Press).—When the fourth annual assembly of the League of Natioss convenes at Geneva, September 3, there is one question that gives every indication of dominating every moment of the session up till the very end— the admission of Germany.

Whether Germany actually files her application for admission or whether she doesn't, it is not certain that the question of getting her into the League or of keeping her out, will be matters of constant discussion and constant intrigue.

Coupled with other applications for membership, which have already been filed, and with others that are expected the question of new members will be one of the most important of the entire assembly.

The league as now composed consists of fifty-two states. With the exception of territories that are now under protectorate or colonial organization, this number embraces every independent nation in the world except the following Abyssnia, Afghanistan the Dominican Republic, Ecuador; Germany Mexica, Russia, Turkey and the United States.

Ireland, whose application for membership has already been filed and will unquestionably be accepted is one of those countries of the category mentioned above namely, that are or were under protectorate.

Two other countries of this category that may present requests for membership are the Kingdom of Irak, and the new government of Egypt. While both of these would probably be admitted yet there is no denial of the fact that Leaguers are beginning to get a trifle alarmed at the large number of English dominions that are becoming members of the League.

Were Ireland, Irak and Egypt to be admitted at the present session, this would bring the English bloc up to nine, the other being besides England herself, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, India and South Africa.

operation with the government in welcoming and attending to the needs of immigrants.

The reoprt of the Diocesan League was submitted by the corresponding secretary, Miss F. Corkery, of Lindsay. The minutes of the Lindsay convention in January were read by Mrs. Phelan, of Peterborough.

Miss O'Connell of Peterborough, gave a splendid account of her visit to Halifax and the work of the Dominion convention there in June.

The Rev. Father O'Sullivan, of Port Hope, delivered a very inspiring address. Reports from the various sub-divisions were followed by the election of officers for 1923-24.

Pres.—Mrs. Walsh, Lindsay.

1st Vice-Pres.—Mrs. Lalande, Cobourg.

2nd Vice-Pres. — Mrs. Gough, Lindsay.

3rd Vice-Pres.—Mrs. Legendre, of Peterborough.

Corres.-Sec.—Miss Corkery, Lindsay.

Recording Sec.—Mrs. E. Kennedy, Lakefield.

Treasurer — Miss M. Kennedy, Lakefield.

Mrs. Gough was chosen as represenative of the Peterborough Diocese at the National convention to be held in Edmonton.

Mrs. Quinlan, Pres. of the Port Hope sub-division, very kindly invited the Diocese to hold its next convention in Port Hope.

His Lordship Bishop O'Brien expressed his approval of the work being carried on and his words of advice and encouragement were gratefully received.

The meeting closed with the presentation of bouquets of roses to the Diocesan President and to the National President.

A very daintily served tea was in readiness for the guests on the conclusion of the meeting and was greatly appreciated by the visiting ladies. While tea was being served a delightful piano solo was rendered by Mrs. Crowe, followed by a very beautiful vocal solo by Mrs. Kennedy. Many of the guests left later for their homes by mptor.

The annual convention of the Catholic Women's League of the Diocese of Peterborough, was held at St. Joseph's Villa, Cobourg, on August 28th, and was attended by the delegates from all the sub-divisions. The meeting was opened by the local President, Mrs. J. T. Lalande, with prayer and an address of welcome. The Diocesan President, Mrs. Gough, of Lindsay, then assumed the duties of chairman and addressed the meeting. The National President, Mrs. Lovering, of Hamilton, spoke at some length on the aims and work of the League, urging among other things the support of all the members in the Big Sisters movements, which are so well organized in the larger cities, and so-

Points in Labor Dispute of Pennsylvania Miners

Here is how the miners and operators stand on the proposals made by Gov. Pinchot for settlement of the anthracite wage controversy:

EIGHT-HOUR DAY.

Both sides agree the basic eight-hour day should be established.

10 PER CENT. WAGE INCREASE.

The miners say a 10 per cent. increase isn't enough, but it may be made the basis of further negotiation, providing an increase over that figure may be obtained for day labor. The operators say it is too much, and that they can not accept it unless they are permitted to add the additional cost to the price of coal.

CHECK OFF.

The miners are not satisfied with the proposal that a union representative be permitted to station himself in the companies' offices on pay day to collect union dues, insisting the companies shall deduct the dues from the miners' pay. The operators are opposed to the check-off, but are willing that the union shall collect dues at the companies' offices.

UNION RECOGNITION.

The miners say recognition of the union denies the operators the right to bargain on wages with the miner as an individual. The operators say the union now is recognized and recognition isn't an issue.

Japanese Viscount Killed With Twenty Others at a Caucus

OSAKA, September 3. — It is reported that Viscount Takahashi, the former Premier, and twenty other leading members of the Seiyukai, or Government party, were killed on Saturday while holding a conference. A representative of the Osaka Jiji Shimbo met a number of destitute foreigners at Nakone, who stated that about forty foreigners had perished there.

GET BASEBALLS FREE, BOYS.

Ask mother to get you Quaker Corn Flakes, boys. Then you can save the coupons from the packages and get a whole baseball outfit free —mitts and balls, and everything. Tell her that Quaker Corn Flakes are the best corn flakes made and that they come in a big, wax-wrapped package and do not cost any more than other corn flakes. Tell her that she can get fine aluminum ware and silverware by saving the coupons, too.

Some Mentally Deranged Returned Men May Need Different Treatment.

OTTAWA, Sept. 4. — Following an request by C. G. MacNeil, secretary Dominion Command, Great War Veterans Association, General W. S. Hughes, superintendent of Canadian Penitentiaries, has directed the surgeon at each institution to conduct an examination of returned soldier inmates in order to ascertain their mental condition. The move is in line with action in the United States where in Wisconsin above 50 per cent. of the veterans in the penal insitutions were mentally abnormal and where 20 per cent. of these men were suffering from some mental disability directly tracable to military service.

ITALY HOLDING CORFU AND CONTENDS LEAGUE HAS NO JURISDICTION

Willing to Submit Question of Competency of the League in Present Crisis to The Hague Court.

Occupation Complete.

LONDON, Sept. 4.—(Canadian Press)—Italy is holding Corfu, which commands the Adriatic, as a pledge for Greek reparations and is waiting grimly for Greece to comply with her ultimatum. Greece having appealed to the League of Nations, is also awaiting, and Italy thus far has ignored the protest of the Council of Ambassadors against her action in seizing Corfu.

The Greek Legation here made public the text of the Greek reply to the Ambassadors' Council, proposing the appointment by the Council of a commission consisting of three members for an inquiry into all the circumstances of the Janina crime, and declaring readiness, if Greece is found in any way responsible, to grant all reparations decided upon by such commission. The reply requests the intervention of the Council with Italy.

The prospects of an early settlement are not improved. The Italian Government takes the stand that it did not sign the Treaty of 1864, which confirmed the neutrality of Corfu, and is, therefore, not bound by the treaty. Further, Premier Mussolini has instructed the Italian representatives at Geneva to abstain from further discussion of the affair and the only hopeful aspect is that Italy seems disposed to have the court of International Justice pronounce on the League's competency to deal with such an international dispute.

The British Government is still firmly supporting the view that the dispute is eminently one for the League of Nations and regards the whole question as subjudice, pending the League's decision. In the event of the League Council abstaining from intervention, it is stated that the Scandinavian delegates are resolved to withdraw from the League, as did Argentina in 1920.

Great despondency prevails in Athens, where the fact that Italy was able so quickly to land fifteen thousand men in Corfu is considered proof of Mussolini's determination. The occupation of Corfu seems to be complete and the Italians have thoroughly organized the place as though for a long stay.

WOULD SUBMIT QUESTION INTERNATIONAL TRIBUNAL

ROME, Sept. 4.—(Canadian Press) —Premier Mussolini, it is understood, is ready to withdraw the Italian delegates from the Geneva conference, if his viewpoint concerning the conflict with Greece is not shared by the League of Nations.

If Italy's viewpoint that the League of Nations is incompetent to settle the Greco-Italian difficulty is not accepted by the League, Italy,

AMONG 20 DEAD AT CORFU MOST WERE CHILDREN

Shrapnel Shells Fell Among Orphans Bathing on the Beach.

SIXTEEN KILLED.

ATHENS, Sept. 3—Colonel Stephen E. Lowe, of St. Louis, a member of the Red Cross and attached to the Near East Relief at Gorfu, reports that altogether there were twenty killed by the Italian bombardment prior to the occupation of the island Among the victims were sixteen children most of them killed by shrapnel, which was fired among a crowd of Red Cross orphanage children bathing in the sea.

The first direct news from Corfu since the Italian occupation was received to-day with the arrival of the Greek Steamship Iamini, which hd baoard Col. Lowe, Miss Emma Wood, of Baltimore, Chief Nurse of the Corfu Near East Relief Hospital Dr. Kennedy, of Kingston Ontario, director of the British Save-the-Children Fund, together with a group of expelled Greek officials and sixty Greek soldiers.

Col. Lowe, describing the bombardment, said:

"The number killed reached twenty; nine of these were killed out right and eleven died in hospitals. Thirty two wounded are now in hospitals and there were perhaps fifty slightly wounded.

'Of the twenty dead, sixteen were children. All the killed and wounded were refugees or orphans from United States and British orphanages housed in the old fortress.

The large number of children among the easualties was due to the fact that several shells landed in barracks which were being used as orphanages, while shrapnel shells exploded in the water in front of the fortress, where four hundred Near East Relief orphan boys were bathing at the time."

WHY NOT BOOM SEPTEMBER?

Summer resort proprietors, transportation companies, Chambers of Commerce and other interested parties in Ontario should get together with a view to selling September to the thousands of people who might as well spend that month in the river and lake sections of the Province if the idea of doing so could only be put over.

The trouble with the tourist season at present is that it does not last long enough.

Everybody wants to crowd into the lake resorts in July and August, and to quote Ethel Barrymore, "That's all there is. There isn't any more."

In other words, the season is a matter of eight or nine weeks.

Yet September usually affords magnificent outing weather for the tourist. Bright, calm, warm, hazy days and cool, starlight nights with just chill enough in the air to induce healthful sleep.

Why should summer resorts be deserted and such wonderful days be wasted?

Simply because of the fact that the end of August has come to be accepted as the end of the season.

Many summer visitors, of course, have to go home because of the opening of school, but there are thousands of others who could stay through summer.

Would it not be good business to boom September?

THE BAND CONCERT SEASON.

The band concert season came to an end last week, and the citizens of Peterborough owe the members of the Rangers Band a debt of gratitude for a series of very delightful programmes in which the band has performed most creditably.

True the organization has in a sense been paid for its music inasmuch as the City Council provided a grant.

The sum voted, however, would not represent a very large per capita quota, especially when the time devoted to rehearsal is taken into consideration.

Considered on a basis of dollars and cents, the grant would not pay for a very large amount of music.

Fortunately, however, in these concerts the bandsmen play because they love music.

It is enthusiasm that brings them to practices and concerts, that leads them to swelt on a hot bandstand in uniforms none too cool on torrid summer evenings.

And because of that enthusiasm they have earned the thanks of the community.

Incidentally it has been demonstrated beyond cavil that the Sunday evening concerts are decidedly more popular than the Friday programmes, the attendance being doubled on the former occasion.

It might be well to remember that fact when next year's schedule is being arranged.

STREET PAVING.

Although the suspension of traffic over the Hunter Street Bridge for some weeks has been an inconvenience, especially to the people of East City, the annoyance will soon be forgotten in the comfort of driving over a smooth surface or of walking across the bridge without being smothered in dust or splattered with mud according to the weather conditions.

So great has been the improvement as a result of the paving of the bridge and Hunter street east generally that it is hoped that the Council will be encouraged to launch out in a more ambitious paving programme next year in accordance with the plans of the City Engineer.

A few years ago it was the custom in Peterborough to make sarcastic remarks about Lindsay mud and comment upon the condition of that town's leading thoroughfares.

In the forcible, if inelegant, words of the cartoon stripe, "Them days is gone forever."

Lindsay has for some time been carrying out a progressive scheme of street paving until at the present time there are twenty miles of permanent roadway within the town limits.

In this respect our neighbors have set a pace that has been much too fast for us to follow, and it is only this year that we have really begun to seriously consider the paving question.

A good start has, however, been made and next year should see a number of other leading streets taken care of in regard to being provided with a permanent surface.

AN UNUSUAL OFFER.

The advertising columns of the Examiner contained an offer the other day from an advertiser to trade a motor car for a Victrola.

That was rather an unusual proposition in these days when a lot of people are sacrificing almost everything else for the chance to secure a gas-propelled vehicle more or less pretentious.

And yet in many respects there is a good deal to be said from the viewpoint of the man who wants to trade.

Unless he ventures to play jazz at 2 o'clock in the morning and thereby arouses the ire of the neighbors, the Victrola owner is perfectly safe from injury.

He has a certain amount of cranking to do, but, on the other hand, he never has to crawl under the machine and half drown himself in oil and grease.

There are no speed cops making life miserable for him, and no one to drive him into a ditch.

If his machine happens to stall it won't be on a railway crossing or just in front of a street car.

He needs no license, requires no garage and his tool kit is a simple affair.

His repair bill is a minus quantity, there are no blow-outs or punctures and no rough voiced policeman stops him in front of a crowd to say, "Say, where do you think you're going anyway?"

Of course, he doesn't see much of the country, but he can stay home and be safe, and that is something in these rapidly moving days.

NEW WAYS OF THRIFT.

It is a sign of the times that insurance companies are now issuing policies which are intended to provide for the education of boys and girls, says the Ottawa Journal. The plan is quite simple. A parent insures his life for a certain sum when a baby is born into the family, and makes the date of maturity coincide with the time when the child will be ready to enter college. The annual premiums are relatively small, and yet they are sufficient for the purpose. In the event of the death of the child, the principal may be diverted. This scheme has the advantage of ordinary insurance protection, and yet provides for the accumulation of a sum sufficient to meet the expenses of a college course.

To men of limited and yet regular income, this plan for the meeting of a special call in connection with the education of one or more children should present a strong appeal. The difficulty which ordinarily arises at that momentous period in home life when a son or daughter is ready for college, is the means. There has not been any sustained or systematic preparation for such a substantial call on resources, and in too many instances this obstacle is insuperable. Had a policy of the nature just referred to been taken out in sufficient time the problem would find a happy solution.

More than one-half of all the financial troubles which occur in our homes are due to lack of foresight and definite planning. This is another way of saying that the man who looks ahead in a prudent and calculating way has a great advantage over the man who is careless in such matters. The foundation of all true thrift is a willingness to sacrifice during the early days of married life. It yields a certain profit as time proceeds. To live up to one's income is the sure road to an impecunious old age, with this important matter of educating children coming in between.

THERE'S A LESSON IN THESE EVENTS.

Public attention has been turned toward banking and business. The developments in banking circles in recent days have turned the course of thought and discussion that way.

So it is that we express one hope, viz., that when people are talking and discussing these affairs they let their thinking and their talking get far enough back and near enough home to do them some good.

If their thoughts and their conversation get caught on the pivot of mere gossip about what is being passed about on the street there is going to be nothing in it for them. They are simply going to pass along something they have heard: "Mr. So-and-So told me that he had this on good authority three or four weeks ago," and so on.

On the other hand, there is a chance to do some careful thinking. The failure of a bank is the culmination of a lot of individual dealings. A bank is not a concern that lives to itself. It is in a very real sense a public service used some time or other by the majority of our people.

If a bank has a number of accounts that have ceased to be classed as good it means that it is called upon to face and handle an accumulation of cases that have resulted from individual bad management.

Each business that has trouble can go on back to the group within which it operates. If the thing is sifted out fine enough it will be found that the individual in his dealings, in his conception of a dollar, and in the limitation or curbing of his tastes, has probably not come down to brass tacks.

We are living in a time when people want things. As an illustration, you can go back to the safest and best of all institutions, the home. Our ideas of starting housekeeping are greater than they used to be. Not so very many years ago a bride and groom were content to start in a small way; they were happy in a cottage that was being furnished piece by piece as the money was available for each addition. Each bit of furniture that was added was a mark of achievement and perhaps sacrifice for a common purpose. There was no debt; there was the excellent satisfaction that the things in the home were paid for, and there was a little, perhaps not much, left over.

That may be a homely illustration on a small scale, but it serves to show the state of mind and the contentment that came from doing things on a reasonable basis, and within the limits of the family purse. People were not hanging their hats higher than they could reach.

In recent years, and particularly in the last year of the war, and in 1920, we had a taste of big money and a prosperity that had no real reason for existing.

When the war was over the wise thing would have been to scale down and face the inevitable inflation. The trouble was that all of us were busily engaged in seeing how deflation could be passed along. We failed to see that in the process of real deflation all of us were going to be more or less hurt. We fought the thing and hung on. We asked the banks in very many cases to help us to hang on. We wanted to make our financial wounds very light, not realizing or caring that by doing so we would make a harder load for some person else.

We are a well-off people as a whole; we are solvent and able to pay our way, but we still retain fairly big ideas. We do not urge national or personal stinginess; a wise expenditure of available funds is much better.

The real benefit of a banking failure is going to come from the individuals starting to put their own houses in order; from a determination to pay our bills and thus allow those to whom we are obligated to discharge their obligations. A man with a clean sheet is a contented man, and a home over which debt is not hanging has a chance of being a fairly happy place.

There is a big lesson for the Canadian people to read from present conditions. The only possible way to make use of the lesson is for each individual to apply it to his own case.—London Advertiser.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The worst feature about the passing of summer is that there is a September morn appearance to most of the coal cellars.

The name of Allan Crawford must be added to the list of British heroes who sacrificed their lives that the Empire's flag should be planted in the distant places of the earth.

"Yes, we have no holidays," is the mournful song of the school children today.

Peterborough's Exhibition will be held next week. You are getting ready to go, of course.

Bigger patronage in 1923 for the Peterborough Industrial means a still bigger Exhibition in 1924. And everybody can help in that department.

Those who struggled to get through the crowd at the Toronto Exhibition know why yesterday was called "Labour" Day.

The Opera House Changes Hands and Will Be Run As Up-to-Date Movie Theatre — Cheese Sold For 23¼c.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 4.—R. H. Cole, who has owned and successfully managed the Opera House here for the past 17 years, has disposed of the property to Capt. T. E. Hyland of Belleville, who will run the theatre as an up-to-date picture house with plays at intervals. Capt. Hyland will take immediate possession, but the formal opening under his management will not be held until Monday next, 10th September. On Thursday night the play, "Cinderella," which was booked by Mr. Cole some time ago, will be given.

Capt. Hyland has had over 20 years' experience in the theatrical business, chiefly in some of the larger cities in the United States. His home is in Belleville, but he comes here from Buffalo, where he had been located for some time. He announces that he will endeavor to make the theatre a place where high-class entertainment will be given at popular prices. There will be a picture show every night, and it is his intention to present only those films which are shown in the cities. There will also be a number of good road shows during the coming season.

Capt. Hyland has a war record. He enlisted with the 75th Battalion in Toronto and spent five years overseas, going into the service as a private and working his way up to a captaincy. The latter rank was conferred upon him for distinguished conduct at the first battle of Vimy Ridge. He was wounded three times.

The Opera House was built over 40 years ago by a joint stock company, composed of local residents, who found it a white elephant on their hands as they were never able to make it pay. The building is large and out of all proportion to the theatrical needs of the people of Campbellford when this town was a village. The late Capt. Tice later acquired the property. Mr. Cole bought it 17 years ago from Miss Cook, who inherited it from Capt. Tice, and his venture as a theatrical manager proved successful. Capt. Hyland has been after the building for some time, regarding the local field as a desirable one, and finally prevailed upon Mr. Cole to sell out. The building will be renovated and re-furnished throughout.

Cole's Opera House, as the place has been known for years, has been the scene of many an exciting political meeting. It has been the public assembly hall ever since its erection, and the place in which all the society functions have been held.

Cheese Brings 23¼c.

Two of the season's records were broken at the meeting of the Cheese Board Saturday afternoon, the price paid being the highest received and the number of boxes boarded the largest. There were 740 offered for sale, nearly all of the factories showing a greater output, the salesmen explaining this by saying that pasture has been improved by the recent rains.

The buyers present were Ivey, Cook and Fitzgerald. There was only one bid, that of Mr. Cook, who when the sale opened offered 23¼ cents, the same as that paid at Stirling and only one-quarter of a cent less than the price paid at Belleville earlier in the day. Some of the salesmen hesitated over accepting this bid, but Mr. Cook assured them that that was his limit, and none of the other buyers present raised him. The offer was finally taken.

The number of boxes boarded by the different factories was as follows: Brae, 55; Crow Bay, 50; Empire, 121; I. R. L., 60; Kimberley, 98; Meyersburg, 35; New Model, 32; Prince of Wales, 60; Stanwood, 50; Trent Valley, 49; West Seymour, 50; Woodlands, 80.

Cook took Brae, Empire, Kimberley and Prince of Wales; Ivey, Crow Bay, Stanwood and Trent Valley, and Fitzgerald, the balance.

The next meeting will be held Saturday, 15th September, at 3.30.

Special Meeting Council.

A special meeting of the Town Council was held at 11 a.m. Saturday, those present being Mayor Meyers, Reeve Anderson, Councillors Allan, Burke and Cole. Town Solicitor T. A. Humphries was in attendance with a copy of the bylaw which he had prepared to provide for the issue of debentures to the amount of $65,000 to pay for the construction of the Wellington street sewer. This bylaw was fathered by Councillor Cole and adopted.

The matter of a debenture issue of $8,850 to pay for the Front street sewer was deferred until the next regular meeting, and Reeve Anderson and Councillor Allan objected to having the cost of the law suit which resulted from that work added to the actual expenditure on the sewer.

Business Men Had a Cricket Game—Colville Residence Sold.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept 4. — Campbelford did not permit the holiday to pass without a celebration, Labour Day this year being marked by a well conducted game of cricket between business men of the town, and a team composed of employees of the Campbellford Cloth Company. These teams have met several times before but this was the first game that was completed, each side going twice to bat and the final score being 170 to 125 n favor of the mill men. Every player who took part in the sport yesterday showed vast improvement over previous performances. Two of the star fielders were Herb Leonard for the town and W. Bailey for the mill men, both of whom made several difficult catches of flies set up by some of the heavy batters on either side. Mr. Leonard also distinguished himself as a bowler and shared the honors in the line with I. A. Humphries, R. T. Cowell, Percy Hind, Jim Blute, O. H. Gledhill, L. Parish and J. H. Bell. The wicket keepers were F. Iming for the town team and S. J. Abernethy for their opponents.

There are some members of the rising generation in Campbellford who are lacking in respect for the dignity and solemnity of cricket. These young men, watching the contest yesterday appeared to labor under the delusion that it was expected of them to —— the players just as they do so vigorously at a baseball game. They were promptly suppressed yesterday after being informed that the sport which they were witnessing was a decorous pastime.

The teams will meet next Tuesday evening at 5 o'clock for another game and if each cannot complete an inning, play will be continued on Friday evening at the same hour.

In the meantime the local cricketers would like to get a gome with some outside team, and it is believed that 11 men could be picked from the 22 now on the roster capable of holding their own with any amateur eleven.

Owing to the absence of some of the players the game yesterday was carried on with ten men on a side. Campbellford and

Some person or persons developed a case of criminal lunacy Sunday night, the particular form of insanity being a desire to see the fire brigade in action. # FAIRMOUNT LADIES AID GAVE CONCERT

Entertained a Capacity Crowd in Cavanville Community Hall.

MILLBROOK, Sept. 4.—The entertainment given in the Cavanville Community Hall on Thursday evening by the Ladies' Aid of Fairmohnt Chnrch drew an audience which comfortably filled the hall, the programme providing a most enjoyable hour and a half and winning hearty applause from the listeners. Rev. R. T. Richards took the chair, probably for the first time since coming to his new charge, his opening address being calculated to give the audience an opportunity of proving the truth of the old adage, "Laugh and grow fat," the humorous nature of his remarks keeping "audible smiles" on every countenance.

The programme was as follows:

Vocal solo, "I'm Dreaming of You," by Miss Southam.

Piano solo, "The Kitten on the Piano," by Miss Marie McBain.

Reading, "The School Concert," by Miss Helen Staples.

Play, "Sunbonnets," the characters taking part being: Mrs. R. Hootan, Miss Myrtle Hootan, Miss Marie McBain, Miss Lottie Ball, Miss Jessie Shaffeur, Mrs. George Hootan, Mrs. J. Earle, Miss E. McIndoo, Mrs. J. Grandy, Mrs. Murray McBain and Miss Lillian Stoneham.

Mrs. Hootan, as "Mrs. Butterfield, a practical person," carried the leading role in a most capable manner, the unconscious sarcasm and dry humor of her frequent remarks keeping the audience in a gale of laughter throughout. Possibly the only criticism that could be offered in connection with any of the characters was that all did not speak loud enough to be heard in every part of the hall. The Aid will doubtless feel encouraged to put on another play during the fall or winter months, taking advantage of so central and satisfactory a concert hall as the one at Cavanville provides.

SEYMOUR PIONEER VICTIM OF STROKE

Richard Grills Passed Away After a Short Illness.

CAMPBELLFORD, Sept. 4. — Seymour township lost another of its pioneers when Richard Piper Grills, passed away Sunday at the home of his son Albert on the Third Concession. About a year ago, the deceased suffered a paralytic stroke which he never recovered. Had he lived until the 17th of November he would have been 79 years old.

The deceased was a member of one of the best known farmers in this district, a man who from his youth worked without ceasing to make his district the flourishing agricultural section which it is today and who was known far and wide as a successful farmer who specialized in the dairy business.

The late Mr. Grills was born in Darlington township, where his parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Grills, lived for a short time after there arrival from England. When their son was one year old, they moved to Seymour and settled on the English Line near Tabernacle Church, on what was then a wild bush farm. The property that they and their children reclaimed from the forest is still in the family, being at present occupied by a son of the deceased.

There were very few educational advantages in those days but the pioneer saw to it that the education of their children was not entirely neglected. Richard Grills first attended school in a rule log structure in which light came through openings in the wall in which there was no glass and in which the interior furnishings were scant. But even in these surroundings the boy secured a periodical education that fitted him for clerical work later in life.

When he reached the age of manhood, the late Mr. Grills was married to Mary Ann Foy, a native of Wales and about a year later settled on a farm of his own in the neighbourMrs. Grills died some years ago and her husband married again, his second wife also having predeceased him.

Deceased was prominent in the dairy business in a district which controls the Empire cheese factory, the largest institution of the kind in the county. For six years he was secretary and was afterwards appointed to the position of salesman, acting in that capactiy up to a few years ago when he was obliged to resign on account of ill health. For the last five or six years he had resided with his son Albert, and was an active worker about the farm up to the time he was stricken with paralysis a few years ago. He was a devoted member of Tabernacle Church which he helped to found. Always unassuming by nature he never aspired to take a prominent part in public affairs but devoted himself entirely to his private business and the improved farms that are now occupied by his sons, all in the immediate district, are so many witnesses to his intelligence and industry. All his sons elected to remain on the land.

The sons of the deceased are Albert on the Third Concession, Alfred, who owns a fine farm in the same neighbourhood and William H. on the homestead. One son, George, died 11 years old.

Four daughters survive, Mrs. George Hay of Menie Mrs. George Stollery of the English Line, Mrs. Albert Rowe of Campbellford and Miss Ida of Detroit. Another daughter Mrs. James Sanders of Campbellford, died two years ago.

William the only brother of the deceased lives on the farm on which the Grill family first settled when they came to Seymour. William served many terms as a member of the Seymour Council, retiring about two years ago. Mrs. George Anderson of Seymour West; near Campbellford, is a sister.

The funeral was held at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon to the English Line cemetery. Rev. J. E. Glover of the Seymour circuit conducted the services in Tabernacle Church.

BELLEVILLE BEATS OTTAWA TORONTO UMPIRES UNLIKED

OTTAWA, Sept. 3.— The Grand Trunk baseball team of Belleville defeated the local St. Patrick's here Saturday afternoon, by 8 to 4, in a first round game of the Ontario Baseball Association play-off. Five thousand people witnessed the game, the score of which just about indicates the play. The second game will be played at Belleville on Wednesday. Two umpires were sent up from Toronto, Hallinan and Thorne, and the latter came in for a rough ride from the crowd for his decisions behind the plate.

Bill Skuce and Jack Williams were the opposing pitchers. St. Patrick's heavy hitters were not able to do much with Williams' slants and shoots which came from the port side, while the Grand Trunks slammed the offerings of Skuce hard and often, the hitting of little Brownscombe, their left fielder, being a feature. The little fellow got a three-bagger, a double and a single during the fracas. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Belleville | 1 | 3 | 0 |
| St. Patrick's | 4 | 7 | 4 |

Batteries — Williams and Mills; Skuce and Proulx.

NAGASAKI, Sept. 4.—There is no building in sight in Yokohama, only ruined walls are visible according to the captain of the Spinyo Maru, which has just arrived here from Yokohama. Thousands of refugees gathered in a park were half drowned by a flood caused by the bursting of the city water pipes.

The fire in Tokio, it is reported, subsided at five o'clock Sunday evening which is held to mean that nothing inflammable was left in the city. The Chinese Legation was among the destroyed buildings. The inmates of the Tokio Prison, including recently arrested Socialists, were liberated when the building caught fire. From to-day army airplanes will fly daily between Tokio and Osaka to carry important news and official mails.

WHO FIRST FELT "LIKE A FIGHTING COCK"?

COCK-FIGHTING was born with the cocks.

But it is only 80 years ago that the first man felt "like a fighting cock!"

Now he has brothers, sisters, nephews, nieces, all over the world —all feeling "like a fighting cock!"

It happens this way: A person half sick with bad stomach, dull and heavy headache, takes Beecham's Pills just before going to bed. Immediately the Pills begin to harmonize the digestive and eliminative organs.

Consequently, this person has a good night's sleep and arises in the morning with clear brain, bright eye, keen appetite, and full of energy for work and play.

It is now just 80 years since Beecham's Pills first began correcting disordered stomachs and stirring sluggish livers and bowels to natural activity — and feeling "like a fighting cock" is associated as inseparably with Beecham's Pills, as the pills are with good health.

BELIEVE ALL SALVATION ARMY WORKERS ARE DEAD

NEW YORK, Sept 4.—All Salvation Army officers and workers in Japan are believed to have lost their lives in the earthquake, according to a cable reaching the organization's headquarters here to-day by a roundabout route. The message came through San Francisco where it was received by Coponel Masahut Kobayashi who for many years has in charge of a corps of Japanese Salvationists on the Pacific Coast. The Salvation Army training school and hospital were in the heart of Tokio and are said to have been completely wiped out. Commissioner and Mrs. William Eadie and a full staff were in charge of the hospital when the disaster occurred. Commander Miss Booth immediately replied to the message with an announcement that money and supplies would be rushed to the stricken areas of Japan by the Army with all possible speed.

KING'S CONDOLENCE

LONDON, Sept 4 —King George has sent the following message of condolence to the Emperor of Japan:

FOOD RIOTS REPORTED

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 4. — Food riots have broken out in Tokio according to a radiogram received to-night by the Radio Corporation from Iwaki Station, 155 miles from Tokio.

The gendarmerie is reported in these advices to have exerted the most strenuous measure to suppress these disorders, even attacking the rioters with their swords.

NAVAL BASES WIPED OUT

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 4—The Japanese naval bases at Kamakura and Yokosuka were entirely destroyed in the earthquake, according to despatches received by the Japanese Consulate here. Eight of the fifteen districts in Tokio were partially destroyed and the fires are not yet under control in some districts. All the bridges over the River traversing Tokio were carried away by the tidal flood.

EMBASSIES DESTROYED

OSAKA, Sept. 4. — The Italian and French Embassies in Tokio were destroyed by the earthquake. This information is given in a late wireless message from that city.

A Late Summary.

SAN FRANCISCO—A late summary of the cabled bulletins would indicate the following result of the losses:

In Tokio, eight wards out of fifteen virtually wiped out, including the business and financial district, the Imperial palace and the Bank of Japan. All bridges in the city have been swept away, and 200,000 houses are burned or shaken down. Loss of life is estimated at 150,000. The capital may be transferred temporarily to Koyto or Osaka. French and Italian embassies reported destroyed. No word of British Embassy yet.

Nagasacki reports Prince Shimadzu, formerly of the Great House of Hatumsa, killed in the disaster. Several others of royal blood are also said to have lost their lives or to have been injured.

Reports from Yokohama say the foreign and business section of the city are entirely wiped out, largely by fire, with over 1,400 private homes burned. The office building of the C.P.R. has been destroyed and the fate of the staff is unknown.

Nagoyad is reported as completely destroyed. Population 620,000.

In Sasgo, six hundred were killed in the collapse of a railway tunnel through the quake.

In Ito more than 500 houses were washed away.

At Hako it is easier to count the living than the dead.

Enonshima, the "picture island" off the coast, is reported submerged, and Odawar was swept by the tidal wave with much loss of life

Kamakura and Yoko Euka, Japanese naval bases, are both reported entirely destroyed by the earthquake.

Oshima, an island 30 miles from Tokio, reports a volcano in eruption, doing much damage.

At Kawayuchi, five hundred houses were destroyed and 1,500 damaged by quake and fire. At Chojamachi, forty operators were killed in the telephone exchange through shock.

Rioting a Menace.

Reports received at Shanghai today said rioting menaced the destroyed Japanese cities. Two hundred Koreans, driven from Tokio by soldiers enforcing martial law, procured arms in Hachiolf, near the capital, and started disturbance. The police were arming officials and citizens and citizens to cope with the situation, according to a Japanese news agency, which states that the revolting Koreans had connections between Tokio and Yokohama.

At Nagasacki, the death of Prince Masayoshi Matsukata, former Premier and Minister of Finance, is reported. A message to the Nagoya railway bureau, says that the Prince died from the effects of injuries sustained in the earthquake.

Europeans Safe.

LONDON—Reports say "all Europeans are believed to be safe, both in Tokio and Yokohama." Thus reads a cable despatch received by a London firm from an allied company in Japan, according to the Daily Express.

SAYS CANADIAN RELATIONS WITH JAPAN ARE IMPROVING

OTTAWA, Sept. 4. — Tamekichi Ohta, the consul-general of Japan for the Dominion of Canada, has been recalled by his government and will likely leave Ottawa about Sept. 18. He will be succeeded by Mr. N. Mataunga, who is a widely experienced memmer of the Japanese consulate service.

ITALY HOLDING

it is understood, is ready to submit the question of the League's competency to the International Court at The Hague. This court, however, if called upon, must give a decision from an abstract standpoint, without reference to the present Greco-Italian conflict.

GREEK AND ITALIAN REPRESENTATIVES TO MEET

PARIS, Sept. 4.—Canadian Press) —News was received here this afternoon that the Italian representative had informed the Council of the League of Nations that Italy refused to accept the League's jurisdiction in the Greco-Italian dispute.

This was taken here as disposing of the proposition for League intervention, and it is thought highly probable that a direct meeting of Greek and Italian representatives will be held within a day or two, probably at Athens.

Information received at the Foreign French Office from Greece indicates a desire on the part of the Athens Government to talk directly with Italy, and a disinclination to insist upon action by the League.

It is declared in diplomatic circles that the League Council has already set a precedent against intervention in a case which is before the Ambassadors' Council. It is recalled that, when Albania demanded League intervention to prevent enroachments upon her territory by Jugo-Slavia, the League Council decided it could not take up the matter as long as it was in the hands of the Ambassadors.

Contract Let.

The contract for the new wing and for alterations and improvements to the Counties' Children's Shelter at Port Hope has been let to Thomas Garnett and Sons. The basement is to be enlarged, making it the full size of the building, and a new furnace will be installed.

Campbellford Trophies.

The play-off took place at Victoria Park here yesterday in the finals of the doubles in the Campbellford bowling tourney. The rink that went from here to Campbellford was skipped by F. J. Skitch, who had with him Capt. Hugh McCullough, Edwin Guillet and E. C. Guillet, the latter father and son. After winning the big silver cup put up by the Campbellford rink in competition they paired off and went into the doubles. As two of the Cobourg men were drawn at the extreme end of the draw, they met in the finals. As the hour was late, it was decided that they should play off on their home green, and the game did not take place until last evening. E. C. Guillet and F. J. Skitch won the gold-lined sugar and cream sets, and the second prize, a half-dozen each of Rogers silver coffee spoons, went to their opponents. The rink received also silver cake knives along with the cup.

Horse in Hospital.

A band of gypsies who were camped near here, pulled out on Monday. Mr. R. C. Smith, inspector of the Humane Society, learned from some source that one of their horses was in a very bad condition, and immediately set out to find them, arriving in their midst as they were about to break camp at Gage's Creek. He had the horse taken to Dr. Zealand's hospital at Port Hope for treatment.

THORNE FAMILY WELL KNOWN IN CAVAN HISTORY

John Thorne, the Founder, Used to Walk to Toronto to Work as a Bricklayer.

A STURDY PIONEER.

MILLBROOK, Sept. 4.—The recent Cavan and Millbrook Old Boys' and Girls' Re-union has stirred up so many memories and recalled to mind so much that is interesting in connection with the early history of township and village that more and more of such material is constantly being discussed and brought to the fore. The story of the Thorne family is one of much interest in Cavan's history, one of the first settlers being John Thorne, who came in 1818 from Kent County, England, with his father and brothers. They were all handy with tools, and bricklaying was John Thorne's chief hobby. He plied his art in Toronto and built many chimneys as fireplaces were entirely in use at that time. As there was no way of conveying the necessary stone and sand, a cart was constructed, the wheels being cut from a good-sized log, and all the parts and pins made of wood, no nails being available.

This cart was drawn by an ox, and was the first vehicle of its kind to pass along Toronto streets (then "muddy York.")

Second Brick House.

Bishop Strachan's house was built by John Thorne; it stood opposite what is now the Union Station, and was the second brick house in Toronto. He also worked on the building of Little Trinity church, where the popular Canon Dixon has guided his faithful flock for many years. Taking up land from the Crown in Cavan township, he married Eleanor Redmond, whose only brother, Samuel Redmond, was grandfather to the Redmond brothers who founded the fine stock on the 4th Line, Cavan. Mr. and Mrs. Thorne raised a large family as was the custom in their day, ten children coming to their home, who all married and settled near the family homestead.

Homestead Remains.

The late Mr. Thorne and sixty grandchildren, many of whom have helped materially in keeping Cavan "on the map" by their industry and ability. The old family homestead stands among the trees as solid as when it was built eighty years ago. Mr. Thorne made the bricks, burned the limestone to make his own lime, and built the stone foundation. This hardy pioneer would walk to Toronto from his home on the second concession of Cavan and work at his trade, and Mrs. Thorne and her sister-in-law, Mrs. Redmond, would also walk to the city over corduroy roads, the former carrying her nine-months' old baby in her arms, and taking a supply of clean clothing to her husband.

Built First Corn Mill.

Mr. Thorne took a keen interest in the welfare of Cavan township, and had the first mill (run by hand) with which to grind corn, many a man coming for miles carrying his bushel on his back to have it ground and taking the meal home again the same way. The first cherry trees in Cavan were carried by Mr. Thorne on his back from Toronto, and the first cider mill was also fitted up by him. He sat in the council for forty years, and when he was Justice of the Peace he ruled with a firm hand, many a young man in the township taking second thought before committing any unlawful act which would bring him before Squire Thorne. He had a large number of law books in his library which he read carefully, his neighbors for miles around coming to him for counsel.

Descendant Fell in War.

Mr. Thorne's eldest daughter, Mary, married John Shaw, whose grandson, Lieut. A. Shaw, fell in the recent great war, his name being inscribed on the soldiers' monument in front of the town hall, Millbrook. Elizabeth, his second daughter, married Edwin Thorndyke, and their son, Joseph, was reeve of Cavan for several years. It was such men as this splendid pioneer who helped to make the township what it is today; he lived to the ripe old age of ninety-two years and one evidence of his excellent constitution lay in the fact that when he finally yielded to the call of the Great Reaper, his teeth were quite perfect, neither decayed, become loose, nor fallen out. Two of his sons, William and Robert, settled in Emily township, while John lived near the Otonabee river, in South Monaghan. The latter raised a family of prosperous sons, including Joseph, who located just west of Carmel, and George who remained on the old homestead and, two years ago, passed to the great beyond.

MEIGHEN IN QUEBEC.

Spoke Twenty Minutes In French At Cartierville,

MONTREAL, Sept. 4.—(Canadian Press)—Some thousands of people attended the picnic at Cartierville Saturday when Right Hon. Arthur Meighen, leader of the Conservative opposition in the federal house, and a number of Conservative politicians, French-Canadian and English-speaking addressed the gathering. It was remarked that large numbers in the crowd were wearing Meighen buttons and a feature of the proceedings was the fact that Mr. Meighen spoke for some twenty minutes in the French language.

JAPAN PHEASANT WARNS NATIVES OF EARTHQUAKE.

Beats Best Instruments by Seconds in Recording Tremors. Other Birds and Some Animals Are Sensitive.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 4 (Associated Press).—Have you a little earthquake-predictor in your home? If not you should get a pheasant, says Prof. F. Omori, a Japanese seismologist writing in a recent bulletin of the Imperial Earthquake Investigation Committee, for this bird is exceedingly sensitive ot earth tremors even when so slight as to be unobservable by humans.

Observation of a pheasant in Japan during a period of about three years, in which 23 earthquakes were recorded on delicate instruments, showed that it crowed either before, or during, every slight shock. In 34 percent of the cases the bird crowed before the scientist's machine recorded the quavers, beating the instrument by as much as eight seconds. In 20 percent of the occurrences the bird crowed simultaneously with sensible earthquake motion; and in another 20 percent of cases the bird crowed when the motion was too slight to be sensible to the observer. In only five cases did the pheasant crow after the motion was recorded, and only once did he fail to crow at all.

The keen perception of earthquake occurrence by the bird is no doubt due to its acute sense, by which it is enabled mechanically to feel the small vibrations in the preliminary stage of the seismic motion, Prof. Omori says. It is known that earth shocks are preceded by preliminary tremors that are so slight as to be hardly recordable.

That the pheasant should be very sensitive and take alarm at the slightest disturbance, either natural or artificial, is probably a condition necessary to its existence, the scientist declares, as the bird with its long pointed tail and compartively small wings, has no high flying capacity and nestles on the ground among the thick undergrowth.

It was observed, however, that the pheasant did not take alarm and crow when the ground was shaken by the passing of cars, heavily loaded trucks or wagons, or other artificial means.

In Japan, Prof. Omori writes, there is a general belief that pheasants perceive earthquakes much earlier than humans. Certain other animals show symptoms of terror at the time of, or previous to, an earthquake, he adds, and cites several occasions when the musical croaking of frogs in a pond ceased just before or at the moment of a sensible tremor. If the shock be strong there is caused a general noise ness, cocks crowing and dogs barking.

A certain abbot was riding a horse near a town that was visited by a strong quake, when suddenly the animal dropped flat on the ground. The rider, who had not yet perceived the shock attempted to urge the horse to his feet, but all his whipping was in vain until the shaking was over.

To Make Hairs Vanish From Face, Neck or Arms

(Beauty Culture)

Keep a little powdered delatone handy and when hairy growths appear make a paste with some of the powder and a little water, then spread over hairy surface. After 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and it will be entirely free from hair or blemish. This simple treatment is unfailing, but care should be exercised to be sure and get genuine delatone, otherwise you may be disappointed.

Decrease in Birthrate Worries the French

PARIS, Sept. 4—(Associated Press)—The peril of a greater, stronger Germany overwhelming a steadily weaker France by sheer force of numbers, looms increasingly large in the pessimism of French sociologists studying the shrinking birthrate of their country.

The increase of 160,000 in population for 1920, small as it was, aroused the hope of the government and the public, for it was generally believed that the rush of war-tired soldiers and women, anxious to marry and establish homes, was the turning point. They have been disappointed. The net excess of births over deaths the following year was only 9,000 and the results of last year, still being tabulated, are rather dreaded by sociologists and economists.

President Millerand not long ago spoke of the birth rate question as "that of life itself for France." His efforts, he said, were devoted to furthering the creation of homes and the rearing of children.

France's plight in a world of war is likened to that of the little boy who grows slowly while all his companions develop like weeds. In the 16th century France had half the population of Europe; at the end of the 18th she had only one fourth, and today she has little more than one-tenth.

Since 1871 deaths have exceeded births, and only immigration has saved the race from rapid extinction by a loss that frequently was a quarter of a million a year.

Whatever the reasons for the half century of decreasing birthrate, the present shortage of living quarters, the vicissitudes of life, and the lowered moral standards are blamed today by students for the condition that persists in spite of a really national campaign for more children.

EARLY HISTORY CAVAN TOWNSHIP

The Past Reviewed in Brief For Re-Union Boys And Girls.

A Reunion, to some, seems to make the past even more real than the day in which they are living. "The present state of things is the consequences of the past," said wise Ben Johnson, "and to inquire into the sources of circumstances which we enjoy is a natural sequence."

Lieutenant-Governor Simcoe's proclamation in 1792 dividing Upper Canada into 19 counties, is the first official record in which the counties of Northumberland and Durham are specialyt mentioned and described. Mr. Willmot surveyed the Townships of Cavan Manvers, and Cartwright in 1816 and '17, but before that time, by an Act of Parliament passed in 1802, these two counties became part of the District of Newcastle to which Victoria and Peterborough also belonged. The population of this district in 1810 was 2,316 souls. The court house and gaol were at Newcastle, but this being found inconvenient these buildings were later erected at Amherst (Cobourg), though much local controversy and legal strife were the consequence of the selection. It was not until 1831 that an Act was passed making this the "legal" gaol of the district, and indemnifying the magistrates for what was considered "the illegal expenditure of the money applied towards its erection."

In 1810 the assessed value of property in the whole district of Newcastle was only 35,000 pounds. There was then not even a road, the settlers passing from one clearing to another by a path along the lake shore, and instead of the large lake steamers of today the pioneers had canoes, or "bateaus" for navigating the waters. A regulation of those early years states that, "Persons trading from place to place as hawkers and pedlars, being not resident householders, shall obtain from the county treasurer a license for such calling, and pay two pounds for foot pedlars, five pounds when using a horse or horses, seven pounds, ten shillings for a boat, and ten pounds for a docked vessel." Penalty for non-compliance, ten pounds.

In 1849, among items for other townships, appears twenty-five pounds to be expended on improvements of roads and bridges between Cavan and North Monaghan, and twenty pounds on the boundary line between Cavan and Monaghan (now the Provincial Highway). In that year in the list of roads assumed by county council as county roads is mentioned "From the gravel road at the head of Rice Lake, running northerly between the townships of Hamilton, Hope, Cavan and South Monaghan." The warden and a committee of four members of the county council were to "receive and open tenders" for the construction of these roads, contract for the performance of the work, erect toll-gates, appoint toll-gate keepers, agree upon a tariff chargeable at each gate, and begin to collect tolls as soon as five miles, or more, had been completed. "Tolls collected to be applied towards the expense of maintaining and repairing said roads." Ministers of all denominations were to be exempt from paying any toll when in the pursuit of the duties of their calling.

In 1850 the members of the county council from Cavan were: John Thorne and Thomas Syer. In 1851, '52, '53, John Swain and George Hetherington. In 1854, '55, '5 and '57, John Swain and George Hetherington.

The population of Cavanin 1820, the first record made after a township was surveyed was 44th, number of persons assessed 92, valuation of property $2,324. Each ten years mark an increase, the population in 1830 being 1,323, persons assessed 276 and property valuation $14,035; in 1840 the population was 2,869, and property valuation $32,704; in 1850 population 4,438, number of persons assessed 710, and valuation of property 280,000. In 1923 the population is considerably less, being about 2,000, and assessment of property $1,500,000.

Much of the above early history of Cavan Township was gleaned from a small volume published at the office of the "Cobourg Star" in 1857, by Clench and Floyd, entitled: "An Index to the By-Laws, Most Important Standing Resolutions, and Committee Reports of the Municipal Council of the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham, from 1810 to 1857. Compiled from Authentic Sources by Morgan Jellett, Counties' Clerk." The book is valuable because of age and contents, and is the property of Mr. Robert Hootan, 12th Line, Cavan.

ADJUTANT BUNTIN OFF TO NEW FIELD

Occupied Local Position For a Few Short Weeks

Adjutant Wallace Buntin, after a short period as morality officer in Peterborough, has been transferred by Salvation Army Headquarters to Windsor, where he will have charge of a Corps. He left the city on Sunday.

Regarding his plans Adjutant Buntin said he considered the first duty of a soldier is obedience. He thinks Peterborough needs social workers, and the city has a big place in his heart. Thoroughly acquainted with the city and with many people in it, he was admirably fitted for the position he held.

During his term of office he dealt with 42 cases. Four of these involved immorality, one was a case of non support and one of desertion.

A number of girls were admonished for keeping late hours in doubtful company. To their mothers was explained the danger of the situation, and the Adjutant had the satisfaction of turning aside these girls from possible disaster. Boys who indulged in stealing were steered away from the police court by a timely word. It was Mrs. Buntin's office, to which she referred as a privilege, to deal with the girls.

Work Appreciated.

Many members of the Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs expressed appreciation of the work done by Aljutant Buntin and his wife, and declared his appointment to be one of the best moves the city has made.

"He was a first class man on the job," said G. A. Gillespie. "The position was the best ever opened in the city form the standpoint of Peterborough's good, and Adjutant Buntin was peculiarly fitted to fill it. He had the right way of dealing with people."

WASHING FLANNEL.

Never use yellow soap for washing flaunels because it contains resin that is hard on the wool. Rubbing flannels thickens and hardens them. The temperature for rinsing and washing should be the same.

MANY FOREIGNERS DEAD IN YOKOHAMA

All Baptist Missionaries in Japan Reported Safe —100 Methodists There

LONDON, Sept. 4.—(Canadan Press)—The British Consul at Yokohama and about 100 of the foreign residents of the city are believed to be dead, according to despatches received by the Central News by way of Shanghai.

Shippin is still unable to enter Yokohama harbor owing to continued submarine upheavals.

All Baptist missionaries in Japan are believed safe, according to cable gram received early to-day by the American Baptist Foreign Missionary, from Charles B. Tenny, Secretary of the Japan Baptist Mission.

It was shown by statements received from the Foreign Mission offices in Toronto last night, that there are nearly a hundred Canadian Methodists in Japan although there is strong probability that the greater number of them were in fields 60 miles or so from the section suffering the most severly from the disaster. In cases where the missionaries worked in the larger cities there are also state missionaries now home on furlough in Toronto. The strong probability is that in most instances their wives and children would at this time of the year be at cottages in the resorts. A number of the missionaries themselves too, would also be away from the cities.

The Church of England in Canada under auspices of its missionary society known as the M.S.O., has a total of thirty missionaries actually in Japan at the present time under the M.S.C.C. auspices, at least five are from Toronto.

AT THE GRAND.

"RAPID FIRE."

The Grand Opera House opened its 1923-24 season most auspiciously yesterday, when record crowds greeted the Originals in their latest revue, "Rapid Fire," at both afternoon and evening performances. The former members of the Dumbells were inspired when they chose that name, for their latest production, "Rapid Fire," is not only reminiscent of the military service of the cast, but is also a fitting description of the performance itself, inasmuch as it moves at top speed from the overture until the final drop of the curtain.

The new revue is the biggest and most elaborate presentation the soldier entertainers have yet given us. Thec costumes of the "lauies" are gorgeous and costly, and there are some most ornate scenic effects and fittings, one curtain heavily bejewelled being a striking fe ture. It is easily the most handsomely mounted production in the history of the organization.

As to the performance itself, it seems only necessary to say that Red Newman, Arthur Holland, Jimmy Goode, the famous quartette, Tom Young, and all the rest of the "Full o' Pep" crew are still with the originals. That bunch of entertainers couldn't be boring if they tried, and they excel themselves in their new production.

Newman is the same irresistible, amusing "Red." He's all through the revue and, as usual, he is a hit in anything he touches, whether as old King Tut, as a mic crook, with Charlie McLean as his companion in crime, in his favorite role as the "Old Sweat," in a military scene, as a comic opera general in a most entertaining burlesque, and in his inimitable song numbers. He has thre or four of these, the biggest of which, "The Stoker," is given in a most realistic atmosphere, the scene being laid in a ship's hold where the musical setting is salty with sea spray. There is only one "Red" Newman.

Arthur Holland continues to add to his laurels as an impersonator in "Rapid Fire." He has a wealth of new dresses and a repertoire of new and catchy songs which he puts over in his usual effective manner. All his numbers were enjoyable with "A Rose in Repose," and "Monty of the Mounted," scoring the highest.

Jimmy Goode, black face comedian, who is justly featured in this performance brings with him a lot of brand new jokes but fortunately delivers them in his old manner. He is especially funny as a night clerk in a hotel skit with Fred Fenwick.

Ted Charters, whose "Kit Inspection" number will always be a classic, delivers a mock sermon on "Flirtation" that convulses the audience. Charters is a real comedian and does good work all through the production.

Tom Young, whose rich baritone has been a feature in other programmes, is heard to great advantage in a solo, "Hidden Treasure," and also scores in a splendid number "My Dear Old Mother's Song Book," the music of both songs being written by Leonard Young, the managing director of the company. In the latter number various members of the company sing the chorouses of favorite old songs most effectively.

The quartette, Tom Young, Bertram Langley, Bill Tennant and Jerry Brayford, rise to their highest standard of excellence on this occasion. Their first number, a stirring Scottish song, arouses enthusiasm, but their big hit is their rendition of two of Amy Woodforde-Finden's four Indian Love Lyrics, "The Temple Bells" and "Kashmiri Song" one of the most artistic numbers of the long programme Alan Murray adds to the effect by a clever dance during the scene

Gene Pearson, a new comer to the cast with a wonderful soprano voice, sings the Spanish waltz song "Carmena," most effectively He is a notable addition to the company.

There are several big spectacular scenes, "In the Valley of the Kings" and "When Catherine Ruled," being a demonstration of how far the originals have travelled from the makeshift scenery they used at the front.

Two amusing sketches are included in the programe, one "Mulligan Up," being a realistic war skit, and the other, "Vive La Republique," a burlesque pure and simple, in which Red Newman and Bob Anderson contribute some great comedy work.

A pleasing innovation is the introduction to the audience at the end of the programme of the members of the company as they look in real life, Jimmy Goode doing the honours. It was an effective finale.

The augmented orchestra under the direction of Ivor Ayre adds much to the enjoyment of the occasion.

"Rapid Fire" is a great show, the Originals bigger and better than ever, and should enjoy a record run throughout Canada.

It will be the attraction at the Grand to-night, and another capacity house is assured. The members of the Peterboro Central Baseball team will be the guests of Manager Bickell on this occasion.

IN MEMORIAM

GOODWIN — In loving memory of our dear and only son, Tom, who passed from the battlefields of France to the higher life, Sept. 2nd, 1918:

"The Dead."

Sound the "Last Post,"
'tis night, and they are sleeping,
Our well-loved dead, who died that we might live;
While in the breeze the sound of gentle weeping
Tells of a love which God alone can give.

Sound the "Last Post," yet soon will come the dawning,
After the hushed and deep still calm of night;
And radiant sunshine flood the bright new morning,
When we shall see again our heart's delight.

Sound the "Last Post." He gave and He has taken,
And left us love— a love which knows not death—
Then cheer your hearts, for we are not forsaken,
For God is love, the old, sweet story saith.

Sound the "Last Post," and clear the "Last Trump" sounding,
We know no fear, for God was with us all:
And, with our dead, our hearts with love abounding,
We rise triumphant at that last great call.

Lovingly remembered by all the dear ones in the home circle. 551 Chamberlain street.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

31st, August, 1923.

Editor, Peterborough Examiner,
Peterborough

Dear Sir:

Having recently read in your columns an article referring to the encroachment of weed growth on the navigable channels of the Trent Waterway I thought that a wrong impression may have been created and might possibly effect the development of this waterway as the most ideal cruising ground on the North American continent.

I would therefore like to inform the public through your columns that in cruising these waters for the most part of the summer from Trenton to Orillia with my 75 foot cruiser I have experienced no difficulty whatever with weeds and from the reports of the Secretary of the Association I understand that no visiting cruisers, of which there has been a considerable increase this year, have had any trouble.

It is possible that your article may have been prompted by persons owning small motor boats who navigate with no charts and therefore do not stay in the proper channels and as in the case with all inland waters, weeds will be encountered.

It is my hope that you will find it convenient to publish the contents of this letter in any form you may see fit so as to counteract the unwarranted adverse publicity given to the Trent Waterway.

Yours faithfully,
Gordon Fraser.

WEDDING BELLS

PORTER—OLIVER.

A pretty wedding took place at half-past two o'clock on Saturday at the Park street church, when the pastor, Rev. W. E. Morrow, united in the hold bonds of matrimony Ruby L., daughter of Mrs. Emma Oliver, of Bobcaygeon, and Neil F. Porter, of Peterborough. The ceremony was performed in the presence of a large number of friends, the bridegroom being one of the most popular and hard-working members of the Park street congregation. The Tuxis Boys, of whose class he was leader, decorated the church in artistic fashion for the occasion. The bridal couple were married within a floral square a profusion of ferns, gladioli and white floral bells making a very decorative arrangement.

The bride, who entered the church to the strains of the wedding march played by the organist, Mr. B. Robinson, wore a charming gown of white satin, with tulle veil and wreath of orange blossoms. Her shower bouquet of ophelia roses and valley lilies.

Her sister, Miss Edith Oliver, of Bobcaygeon, who acted as bridesmaid, was dressed in a pretty frock of pink crepe de chine with large pink hat and bouquet of pink gladioli. Mr. William Bullied supported the bridegroom.

After the ceremony, a dainty wedding breakfast was served at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Corner, Lake street. The young people left later for Hamilton, the bride travelling in grey canton crepe, with hat, shoes and stockings to match and wrap of navy crepe lined with grey. She wore also the gift of the bridegroom, a grey squirrel neckpiece. The gift to the bridesmaid was a lavalliere of pearl and onyx, to the groomsman an onyx tie pin, to the soloist an onyx bar and to the organist an Eversharp gold pencil.

On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Porter will reside in Peterborough.

The ceremony was performed by the pastor of the Methodist Church at Kingston Mills, Rev. A. S. Doggett.

At eleven o'clock, the bride, who was given away by her father, entered the church, which was prettily decorated for the occasion with autumn leaves and asters, to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, played by her sister, Miss Adelaide Batten. She was charming in a suit of navy Poiret twill, with hat of grey panne velvet trimmed with silver cloth and shoes and stockings to match. During the signing of the register Mr. Henry Batten sang "At Dawning."

Ushers for the ocasion were Clifford Selkirk and Ernest Batten.

After the ceremony, a reception to the immediate friends and relatives of the contracting parties was held at the home of the bride. Mrs. Richard Batten wore a gown of black satin and Mrs. John Selkirk was attired in taupe satin, both wearing coursage bouquets of sweet peas. A wedding breakfast, from tables prettily arranged with quantities of asters and sweet peas, was served to about thirty guests.

ROME, Sept. 4—(United Press).—After centuries of digging, exploring and searching, in the course of which hundreds of bronze and marble statues and busts of inestimable value were found, the Rome subsoil has still in store wonderful surprises for the archeologist and the art lover.

The latest find is a colossal statue of Minerva, entirely of alabaster, which the art experts of the Italian government have declared as absolutely unique.

Professor Paribeni, who is the chief appraiser for the Department of Fine Arts, says that, while mediocre statues of marbles of greco-roman make are very common, and are to be seen in almost every museum, from the Louvre to the Metropolitan, to say nothing of the Vatican, which has the most complete collection of statues of Roman emperors, and the Roman Museum, which has whole wings full of intact and mutilated masterpieces of Greece and Rome, a statue of alabaster of finest Greek workmanship was unknown to the archeologists.

The statue was found where once was located the so-called Emporium, a kind of storage-home, where the Romans used to deposit the blocks of marbles brought to Rome by water not only from the quarries of Tuscany, but from Greece and Egypt as well.

The statue of Minerva must also have been brought to Rome by water from some Greek city, and never put up, probably because it arrived damaged. The head and the arms have been found and the statue will be repaired. It shows Minerva sitting, and in its long underground life, the alabaster has acquired a wonderful hue, Professor Paribens maintains the statue belong to the first century of August.

Immediately after its discovery the statue was removed to the storeroom of the Thermae Museum.

FIRST ACCOUNT

Three Big Problems

The Japanese government is boldly facing three gigantic problems arising out of the greatest disaster in the history of Japan. The first problem is that of providing food, shelter and clothes for more than 2,000,000 people in Tokio, and for many additional millions in the other cities and districts affected. The emergency commendeering act will enable the authorities to requisition the necessary supplies and labor. The relief work is being organized throughout the nations. The second problem is that of maintaining peace and order in Tokio and other cities, where already looting and violence are reported. Martial law has been invoked and other military measures have been adopted to cope with this situation.

The third problem is that of reconstructing the ruined cities at railways roads and telegraph and telephone lines. It is estimted that at least 1,000,000000 pounds sterling will be required for this work. The entire Japanese people are determined bravely to go through this unprecednted national trial.

Relieve Millions

Osaka is peaceful and quiet, but the people have realize that the relief of millions of their compatriots and the saving of the empire largely depend upon them.

The worst suffering reported from the entire devastated region is at Yokohama.

Lawlessness and disorder are prevailing there the local authorities being insufficient to handle the situation. It is said the city was burned to ashes by Monday morning and great heaps of bodies filled the streets, the casualties are estimated at 100,000.

An emergency relief bureau has been established in Tokio and an army of citizens, who escaped the disaster is supplying provisions and water to the victims.

The troops are also doing their best to alleviate the suffering.

Innumberable bodies of earthquake victims are clogged in the River Sumida which flows through Tokio.

Jumped into River

Thousands of frenzied men and women, overcome with excitement and fatigue, went mad and threw themselves into the river when the shocks were occurring.

Thousands of others perished when the bridges across the Sumida collapsed.

MASON ACCUSES FRANCE TRYING SPLIT GERMANY

The Search For Security Against United Enemy Has Resulted in Splitting Germany Into Three Areas.

HER ONLY SECURITY.

NEW YORK, Sept. 4. — (United Press).—France's search for security against a united Germany has already resulted in separating the German republic into three antagonistic political areas. South Germany, led by Bavaria, is monarchist. East Germany is socialistic, a coalition Communist and Socialist government holding power in Saxony. North Germany, under the leadership of Prussia, is bourgeois republican.

The authority of Berlin is constantly growing less in Bavaria and Saxony. The three geographical divisions of Germany are falling prey to the political bitterness that always exists among extreme conservatives, radicals and moderates. In addition to this, Saxony and Bavaria are recalling their conquest by Prussia in years gone by.

Not a Hopeless Task.

It is therefore by no means a hopeless task the French government is trying to accomplish in its pressure to split Germany into independent states. The German peoples have never been wholly united in modern tims. The Teutonic nations have been bitterly opposed to one another's ambitions since tribal days. The nearest approach to union was when Bismark formed the German Empire in 1871. But, to do that, he first had to defeat another German state, Austria. The Austrians were not included within the German Empire and for a while were the bitterest enemies of the Hohenzollerns.

Thus the German Empire has existed as a uniting force for Germans less than fifty-five years. For generation upon generation previous to that, France succeeded in preventing a German union, either by diplomatic finesse or by war. The French claim this old antagonism of Paris toward a unified Teutonic nation has been justified by the events which have happened since 1871. German aggression against the world, according to French statesmen, was prevented from manifesting itself before 1871 only because France would not allow the Germans to exist as a political unit.

The French never speak of Germany (L'Allemand) but always of The Germans (Les Allemands). This is significant of the attitude of France toward the trans-Rhine group of Teutonic states.

Only Security For France.

There can never be any security for France, apart from a joint Anglo-American guarantee, unless the German republic is broken up into its original parts. The German passive resistance in the Ruhr is in reality Germany's answer to France's effort to disintegrate the Reich. As long as the German people hold together in the matter of passive resistance, the Berlin government will continue to exercise authority over the whole of Germany.

But, if France forces Berlin to bring passive resistance to an end, there will be serious danger of Germany splitting up, as Austro-Hungary has been split up. Such a fate for the Germans would be by no means tragic. The small nationalities that have been remade out of the fallen Hapsburg empire have not lost their existence, while their prosperity is showing signs of rapid recovery.

The disunion of the old German Empire into a number of small republics, monarchies or grand duchies is certainly within the possibilities of practical policies. Unified Germany has met with the greatest disaster in modern history. If Berlin's statesmen cannot find a way out of the Ruhr situation, satisfactory to the German states, the French policy is likely to be successful in sending Germany back to its geographical positions of the pre-Bismark era.

Your Health

By DR. CLIFFORD C. ROBINSON

KEEP YOUR FACE HEALTHY

Nothing pleases a woman like being told she is "different." Some men fall for the same bunk.

That is why a woman wishes to be known as having a different odor in her face powder or rouge. Result about a thousand different powders, cosmetics and face builders, all to make milady beautiful.

Anyone who stops to think will agree that a beautiful woman is a healthy woman.

Your skin is the overcoat of your body. It fits you better than any coat you ever had particularly the part of it that shows on your face. If any pimples, blotches, blemishes or scale appear on its smooth velvety surface it shows to your discomfort and disadvantage and sometimes disgrace.

The skin of the face mirrors your character, to an extent little thought of by most people. Beauty is only skin deep, is a common expression. It is not true. Beauty reaches far down into your life and character, to the depths of the real foundation, simple health and hygiene. Perhaps this is not strictly medical but it is true.

A caterpillar, in the course of a month, will eat 6,000 times its own weight in food. Some people try hard to emulate the caterpillar and then wonder why they are not healthy and beautiful.

The face is subject to such disorders as erythema, rosacea, eczema, lupus-erythematcus and malignant growths of many kinds. Do not aggravate your sensitive skin by artificial adornments. A little cold cream or sensible wash for the face may be necessary at times for facial massage which is always helpful.

Simple foods, such as bran or wheat, green vegetables, milk and fruits, should be eaten. Pure air with proper exercise promotes the functions of the skin and keeps the blood stream in a nourishing condition.

I Never Saw Its Equal, Says Hamilton Nurse

"In all my experience with medicines and caring for the sick, I have never come across anything to equal Tanlac," said Mrs. Elizabeth E. Murray, 158 Barnsdale Avenue, Hamilton, Ont. Mrs. Murray has had considerable experience as a nurse, and is widely known and highly esteemed.

"About three years ago my stomach commenced to trouble me, and I got so bad I thought my time was getting short. I had severe pains in my stomach and sides, and gas caused such a smothering sensation I just had to gasp for breath. I was afraid to eat, knowing the agony I would suffer. I became very nervous and always had to have someone else thread my needle for me. My rest was so broken it seemed that I would never get a good night's sleep. I felt tired and weak, and it was an effort to look after my house.

"It was astonishing how Tanlac helped me. My indigestion has disappeared entirely, my appetite is wonderful, and I now eat my regular meals without any bad after effects. My nerves are in perfect condition; I can thread a needle at dusk, and I never wake up during the night, and I feel so strong and well my housework is more like play. Tanlac has done away with my troubles, and I simply can't praise it enough. My husband has also taken Tanlac with excellent results."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 37 million bottles sold.

Milton Deck Appointed to Mission Station in New Ontario.

HALL'S BRIDGE, September 4.—Hall's Bridge, ever noted as a summer resort, still continues to preserve its reputation as a paradise for tourists. Many during the past summer, from all parts of Canada, and from the Eastern and Southern States, have come and gone, and having been so thoroughly satisfied and refreshed, are resolved that 1924 will find them repeating a similar experience. People of every occupation and profession, find dear old Mother Nature in Buckhorn willing to impart unstintingly of her healing and restorative virtues.

During the opening part of the season the fish seemed to bite indiscriminately, and were caught in abundance. But for the past two weeks to catch the large ones taxes the skill and patience of Isaac's most devoted disciple. The apparent slackening off is attributed by some to the fact that the fish are getting new teeth, although the abundance of food in the water undoubtedly makes them indifferent where the fisherman's bait is concerned. The "deep sea" fishermen who frequent Lake Katchecoma and Gull Lake report that the trout are fairly easily

However for him who fishes in vain there is consolation in the belief that "day by day in every way" the fish are getting bigger and bigger.

September is the time when throughout Ontario teachers are getting located in their new fields of service. They had formed ideas of their new districts, and now they venture forth to verify the accuracy of the fruit of their imaginations.

SECOND REBELLION AGAINST BRITAIN.

Americans Now Object to Price of Silver Set By Combine.

By MILTON BRONNER

LONDON, Sept. 4.—On September 4 a bunch of Americans will gather at Reno, Nev., to issue a second declaration of independence from Great Britain.

The first gathering of Americans some 150 years ago objected specifically to a tax on tea. This second gathering of Americans objects specifically to what Britain does with the prices of silver. The meeting 150 years ago was participated in only by colonials. The one in September will be participated in by Canadians, South Americans and probably Mexicans.

Senator Taskar L. Oddie of Nevada is the moving spirit of the September meeting. He has invited the leading world producers of silver to discuss a method of combining so as to defeat the silver combine which, it is charged, controls the prices of the silver market in the world through a group of powerful London firms. The Reno meeting will represent 80 per cent of the world's silver production.

It is one of the anomalies of world commerce that England fixes world prices for many important things. It can fix the wool price, because a great part of the world's raw wool is produced in the British empire. The same applies to raw furs. Even when it comes to wheat, England maintains itself by reason of the crops grown in Canada, Australia and India and by the further fact that Argentine wheat is largely carried in British ships.

But silver is produced on a large scale in only one part of the empire—Canada. Nevertheless, through London's grip on the China and India markets, it has up to now fixed the price of silver bullion. At Reno it will be proposed that the producers organize an export corporation to control the placing of silver on the market.

Four London firms of silver brokers, it is contended, largely fix the prices. These are Samuel Montagu & Co., Pixley and Abell, Mocatta and Goldsmid, and Sharps and Wilkins.

All of these have grown very rich and the Montagu firm has especially prospered. The head of the firm, the second Baron Swaythling, sits in the House of Lords. His clever brother, Edwin Samuel Montagu, until recently sat in the House of Commons and, under Lloyd George, was secretary of state for India, one of the most important of all cabinet posts.

Their cousin, Sir Herbert Samuel, is British high commission for Palestine and also a former cabinet officer.

The Million Dollar Doll

By C. N. and A. M. Williamson

Authors of "The Lightning Conductor"

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY

Teresa Desmond, (Terry) lovely and unbelievably innocent is imperson ating her beautiful half sister.

Juliet Divine, known as the Million Dollar Doll—whose sketchy career is unknown to Terry.

Miles Sheridan, Terry's 'Dream Prince' furnished the money for her convent education when she was a child. His wife is making him wretched with her infidelity and in order to facilitate her obtaining a divorce Miles offers the Million Dollar Doll $20 000 to take a yacht trip with him stipulating that he will not "trouble' the girl. This he knows will give his wife sufficient grounds for divorce. Juliet is unable to take the trip herself but working on her little sister's gratitude to Miles she persuades Terry to go in her place. Terry is an exquisite counterpart of her sister.

Betty Sheridan, Miles' wife is deeply in love with

Paul di Salvano, a handsome Italian.

Eustace Nazlo, a wealthy Greek who does not know of Terry's relationship to quiet is in love with the younger girl.

Poor little Terry unaware of her sister's reputation and how she must appear in the eyes of the world starts the voyage with Miles who does not recognize in her the little girl he befriended so long ago. Mr. Harkness his servant is sternly disapproving of "The Million Dollar Doll."

CHAPTER XXXI

A Young Demon

Terry took the letter with a beating heart, a murmured "Thank you."

Mrs. Harkness would have moved stolidly away, but the girl stopped her. "Oh, please wait," she exclaimed. "There may be an answer."

"I understand that there was no immediate answer, but I may be mistaken. I will wait of course, Miss, if you desire me to do so." The pillar of respectability stationed itself stiffly in the doorway.

Terry's deadly boredom was lit suddenly into excitement.

The envelope was addressed to "Miss Juliet Divine." It had a coquettish little coloured flag on it, and the name of the yacht. It looked as if there were a very fat letter inside—as if Miles Sheridan had written to her on pages and pages of paper—or rather, to Julia.

The first letter from her Prince—perhaps the only letter she would ever receive from him! She couldn't bear to desecrate the envelope by tearing it, but snatching up a slim paper knife from the desk, she slit the thick paper straight across the top.

Then she pulled out a heet folded over something compact and fat. Why, the stuff was money—quantities of money!

Her cheeks burning, Terry read the few lines written in the same clear, small handwriting as that on the envelope.

"Madam: Please find enclosed the sum of ten thousand dollars, to be paid to you according to verbal understanding, on the day of your coming aboard 'Silverwood.' According to this same understanding, you will receive a similar amount in bank notes at the close of the cruise. A receipt written at your leisure will oblige,

Yours faithfully,
Miles Sheridan."

A wave of strong young rage swept Terry Desmond like a flame. After all, she was not her red-haired father's red-haired daughter for nothing.

She had said that she could accept no money. She felt that she had been betrayed by Julia and insulted by Miles Sheridan.

Standing before the desk, her back had been half turned to Mrs. Harkness. Now she whirled upon the dour Ulster woman, her eyes dark, her cheeks red with fury.

"A young demon!" thought Sheridan's old nurse as, without even counting them, Terry dashed the notes on the floor with the French novels.

"That's my answer!" she cried. "Tell Mr. Sheridan I won't have his money. Take it back to him and take those books too. They're disgusting."

Ruth melted to grief. With a choked sob, the demon flung itself on the divan-bed. No more sounds came, but the astonished eyes of Mrs. Harkness saw the slim shoulders heave, and the bright head burrow itself deep between the cushions.

Seldom had the Irish woman been so dumbfounded. The shameless hussy was refusing the price of her shame—or rather, what her shame would have been if Mr. Miles was the low sort the world was going to think him.

And the likes of her, the little baggage, to talk about "disgusting books," when they'd been brought aboard for her on purpose by Mr. Phillips! He ought to know what the spalpeen's taste was!

Mrs. Harkness hesitated, not sure what she ought to do. It went against her tidy soul to leave the mass of money lying on the floor, to say nothing of the books. If she simply turned and shut the door in a dignified way which would teach the young shrew her place, why, the money might up and burn the bills out of spite, when her back was turned.

The thought of this risk was too much. The old woman bent painfully down, picked up the bank notes (consisting of ten one thousand dollar bills), thrust them into the large pocket of her dress, and proceeded scornfully to collect eight yellow-covered French novels.

As she retrieved these, Mrs. Harkness reminded herself of the books' arrival. Her beloved master had walked on board and broken the news to her that there would be a young woman, Miss Juliet Divine, with them during the whole Mediterranean cruise, and that she—she, his old nurse, would have to wait upon her!

Mrs. Harkness had once seen a picture in some newspaper (not a Sunday supplement; she didn't approve of Sunday papers) representing this Juliet Divine person in tights and very little else; the leader of the "Water Lily Girls in the Midnight Frolickers. Mrs. Harkness had remembered the name because it had struck her on sight as being sacrilegious that a dancer in a theatre should dare call herself "Divine."

"Oh, sir, an actress alone with you on the yacht!" she had protested, as old nurses have—or think they have—the right to protest.

Then Mr. Miles had laughed—not one of his old pleasant, merry laughs—and said, "Not so much of an actress as need worry you, Harky. Just a sort of Show Girl, if you know what that is, or if you don't I'll tell you: a girl who makes a mechanical doll of herself on the stage now and then, as an advertisement of her face and figure, so people shan't forget she exists and knows how to wear diamonds.

"That's what I'm having her on board for; as a Show Girl, an advertisement. You know enough about my affairs, Harky, you guess the rest without my having to explain any further."

Harky did know and could guess.

BE CAUTIOUS OF SUBSTITUTES

There are several medicines on the Canadian market to relieve Kidney and Rheumatic Ailments, but there is one preparation that seldom fails to give quick relief and for that reason Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills are in a class by themselves.

This statement is vouched for by well known residents of this city. For instance Mr. Arthur Pinch, well known in the city, states that he was unable to work and suffered severe pain, from backache, but after using three boxes of Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills, he was able to go back to work and is as well as ever.

Mr. Thos. Oldham, another well known Simcoe street resident, has no hesitation in saying that for Kidney and Rheumatic Ailments, there is no equal of Dr. Banta's Pills.

Never neglect Kidney Ailments as they are liable to lead to other complications, but always keep on hand a box of Banta's Pills. If they fail to do what we claim for them, return your box to your dealer and your money will be refunded.

Dr. Banta's Kidney and Rheumatic Pills are sold at Lynch's Drug Store, 168 Hunter street. Mail orders attended to promptly. m.w.-84

Efficient Housekeeping

The modern idea of economy extends into the household as well as into every branch of business. Most housewives pride themselves upon the fact that their homes are conducted in an efficient, business-like manner.

Every housewife knows, too, that the business of running a house, providing for the wants and needs of the different members of the family and meeting the almost daily emergencies is second to none.

The Want Ads. in the Examiner are a great boon to the efficient housewife. In securing helpers, in purchasing various articles of household equipment, disposing of discarded furniture, in fact in countless ways, the Want Ads. are the housewife's most valuable assistant.

Maple Leafs Trim Cobourg-Bethany Takes Round From 'Cogs'

BRADLEY STRUCK OUT 18 IN MAPLE LEAFS DEFEAT OF COBOURG BY 11 TO 1

Peterboro Juvenile Allowed Only Four Hits and Deserved a Shut-Out — Team Batted Well.

FIRST PLAY-OFF.

Charlie Curtis' good little team, the Maple Leafs, local juvenile champions, proved much too clever for the Trail Rangers, the Coboury representatives in the Juvenile O.B.A.A. series, at Riverside Park on Saturday, the Leafs winning handily by 11 runs to 1. Last year's Midget champions who have this year taken the jump into the Juvenile class were strong in all departments of the game and their superiority over the visitors was easily evidenced.

"Chuck" Bradley, the Leafs sterling left-hander, had the Cobourg crew badly baffled at all stages, fanning no fewer than eighteen of the Trail Rangers and allowing only four hits of which two were bunched in one inning to give the visitors their only counter. Bradley earned a shutout for the hit that drove in the solitary Cobourg run could have been cut off with a little faster fielding and it required a bad bounce which turned a single into a freaky double to do the trick. Bradley was going just as strong at the finish as when he started striking out the last five men who faced him.

Outside of Bradley's fine work, the hitting of Delahaye and Thirnbeck featured. Each got a pair of doubles and a single in five trips to the plate and this batting prowess was a big factor in the run getting. The fielding feature was a double play started by Corbett and with Franks as the pivot.

Cobourg had a squad of some seventeen players in uniform and made several changes during the game. Their fielding was not as steady as the Leafs and with the exception of Hulton who got two hits in four times up they were helpless with the bat while Davidson, who went the route for them was touched up freely by the local youngsters whose thirteen hits included six doubles.

First Inning.

Cobourg—Owens walked and stole second. Drope fanned. Hutton struck out. Bevan grounded to Franks. No runs, hits or errors.

Peterboro—Delahaye popped to Drope. Half rolled to Bevan. Marchen grounded to Drope, a nice stop. No runs, hits or errors.

Second Inning.

Cobourg—Brimming fanned. Gibson missed three. Lloyd fanned. No runs, hits or errors.

Peterboro—Thirnbeck doubled to left. Grant hit to Drope who lost it, Thirnbeck scoring. Johnston grounded to Hutton. Grant went to third on a passed ball. Frank flied to Brimming. Corbett grounded to Davidson. One run, one hit, one error.

Third Inning.

Cobourg—Davidson popped to Bradley. Ovens walked and stole second. Andrews struck out. No runs, hits or errors.

Peterboro—Bradley struck out. Delahaye doubled to left and stole third. Hall walked. Marchen flied to Brimming, Delahaye scoring after the catch while Hall went to third on Bevan's bad throw home. Thirnbeck doubled to left scoring Hall. Grant singled through short. Johnston grounded to Lloyd. Two runs, three hits, one error.

Fourth Inning.

Cobourg—Hutton singled to right, the first hit off Bradley and stole second. Bevan flied to Hall. Brimming fanned. Hutton reached third when Corbett missed Delahaye's throw. Gibson fanned. No runs, one hits, no errors.

Peterboro—Franks doubled to left. Corbett hit to Bevan who threw wide to first, Frank scoring and Corbett reaching second. Bradley flied to Brimming. Delahaye doubled to left centre, scoring Corbett Hall rolled to Bevan. Marchen fanned. Two runs, two hits, one error.

Fifth Inning.

Cobourg—Lloyd fanned. Davidson rolled to Bradley. Rollings fanned. No runs, hits or errors.

Peterboro — Thirnbeck fanned. Grant was thrown out by Hutton. Johnston singled back of short. Johnston stole second and went to third on Ovens' bad throw. Franks fouled to Hutton. No runs, one hit, one error.

Sixth Inning.

Cobourg—Ovens fanned. Drope walked and was out stealing, Delahaye to Frank. Hutton doubled to centre. Bevan doubled to left scoring Hutton. Brimming flied to Johnston. One run, two hits, no errors.

Peterboro—Corbett was safe when Bevan's threw pulled Lloyd off the bag. Bradley reached second on Ovens' high throw to first. Delahaye singled through short scoring Corbett and Bradley and going to second on the throw in. Hall hoisted to Hutton. Delahaye stole third. Marchen singled through the box scoring Delahaye and stole second. Thirnbeck singled through short scoring Marchen and going to second when Newton let it roll through. C. Grant hoisted to Lloyd. Thirnbeck stole third. Johnston grounded to Rollings, who had replaced Drope at short stop. Four runs, four two errors.

Seventh Inning.

Cobourg—Gibson beat out a hit to short. Lloyd hit into a double, Corbet, to Franks to Johnston. Davidson was safe on Thirnbeck's fumble. Rollings fanned. No runs, one hit, one error.

Eighth Inning.

Cobourg — Ovens popped to Franks. Seeney batting for Newton walked and stole second. Hutton fanned. Bevan fanned.

Peterboro—Hall doubled to right and went to third on a wild pitch. Marchen popped to Davidson. Thirnbeck hit to Rollings whose throw to the plate was too late to get Hall. C. Grant singled to short. Johnston flied to Gibson, Thirnbeck scoring after the catch. Franks popped to Hutton. Two runs, two hits, no errors.

The Lakeviews, Junior city champions, have already established their claims to the championship of Eastern Ontario and are now waiting to see what the western division can produce in the way of opposition.

The Maple Leafs have already taken one game from Cobourg and will try conclusions in Cobourg on Wednesday for the second game of the series. The winners will meet the Western Ontario champions.

The Midgets and Bantams have but a few teams entered against them this year.

TENNIS

Play Before Breakfast.

The first games in the city tournament were played Saturday morning at 6 o'clock.

Dr. Miss Young defeated Mrs. Cranfield by 6-3 and 6-4, and Miss B. Giroux lost to Mrs. Cruthers by 6-0 and 6-4.

The games were well contested all the way, but the winner had the edge of experience which counted in slipping over the odd points.

All entrants in the tournament are asked to get in touch with their opponents and play off their games as soon as possible.

A party of ten or twelve of the Peterboro Tennis Club motored to Toronto to see Miss Kitty McKane and her English companions play Canadian stars yesterday.

TILDEN AND JOHNSTON WIN DAVIS CUP AGAIN

Finals of the Singles Witnessed the Routing of Hawkes and Anderson of Australia.

TILDEN WONDERFUL.

FOREST HILL, N. Y., Sept. 4.—The United States scored a clean sweep to-day in the final two singles matches of the Davis Cup challenge round, finishing the international championship series with a margin of four games to one over the Australian challengers. After William M. Johnston had clinched the Cup by routing John B. Hawkes in the first match, 6-0, 6-2, 6-1, William T. Tilden conquered James C. Anderson, 6-2, 6-3, 1-6, 7-5, in a match filled with both brilliant and mediocre play.

The crushing character of the closing victories, though again securing the United States possession of the Davis Cup, came as a distinct anti-climax to the gruelling, spectacular play in the first two days of the challenge round. The gallery of 13,000 that taxed the capacity of the big West Side club's stadium, had come expecting a last desperate stand on the part of the Australians, who had proved so unexpectedly powerful in dividing the first two singles encounters and forcing the doubles match Saturday to five terrific, record-breaking sets before bowing in defeat. But they were doomed to disappointment. At no stage of Monday's play was there the least uncertainty of the outcome, for the mastery of both Johnston and Tilden was complete at practically every stage of both matches.

This year's victory, gained by the same margin as that over Australia a year ago, put the United States into the lead in total number of victories since the Davis Cup first was put into competition in 1900. The United States has now won it seven times, Australia six, and the British Isles five.

There was no surprise, except perhaps its overwhelming nature, in Johnston's defeat of Hawkes, but the ease with which Tilden, outside of the third set, conquered Anderson, was altogether unexpected.

For two sets, Tilden had his opponent helpless in the face of withering, relentless accurate attack. Tilden had everything. His cannon ball service was invincible; he drove Anderson from side to side with forehand and backhand shots that streaked across the court, and his mixture of pace had the Australian completely at sea. Anderson was wild and his service was far from its usual effectivness, but against such amazing opposition he was helpless.

Then an incident, one of the most unusual recorded in international played, occured suddenly to change the complexion of the match. Tilden's final point in the ninth game of the second set, a cross-court shot, seemed several inches out to the gallery, though it was ruled a placement for the United States champion. The crowd, however, voiced vigorous disapproval of the decision and called for a re-play. Both players, nonplussed by the situation, offered to do so, but the referee ruled otherwise and the third set was begun, amid another noisy outburst.

The demonstration so nettled Tilden that he virually tossed the third set away with his listless work. Except in the third game, when he broke through Anderson's service, Tilden let down in all departments of his play, allowing many of Anderson's drives to whistle past without the least effort to get his racquet on them.

Both settled down in the fourth set and Tilden ,while he failed to strike the pace he maintained in the first two, won after the most spirited battle of the match. Tilden smashed across two service aces and four placements to take the lead in the third game after a bitter deuce struggle, but Anderson retaliated by breaking through Tilden's delivery at love. There were two more service breaks before the first set was deuced at 5-all, then Tilden called on his reserve, capturing the last two games to clinch the set and match with dazzling burst of speed.

LAKEVIEWS WIN FROM TORONTO JUNIORS 4 TO 3

Whitehouse Strikes Out Thirteen Queen City Batters in Yesterday's Exhibition Game.

HOME RUN HELPED.

The Lakeviews, Eastern Ontario Junior champions added another to their fast growing string of victories at Riverside Park yesterday afternoon when they beat the Parliaments of the Spalding League, Toronto by 4 runs to 3 in an interesting exhibition game. Manager Lew Lebarr's team were always in front, leading by 4 to 0 at one stage, but the visitors kept on plugging and closed the gap considerably towards the end.

Frank Whitehouse on the rubber for the Lakeviews turned in another splendid performance fanning thirteen of the visitors and allowing only six hits and one earned run up to the sixth he had the Toronto crew blanked. He was knocked out in a collision with Lew Lebarr at that stage and the visitors got two runs over before the effects of the accident had disappeared.

Foy a right hander did the heaving for the visitors and held the Lakeviews to seven hits of which Whitlow and Collins got three each. Foy did not seem to have much stuff on the ball but his control was good and his offerings bothered most of the winners so far as meeting them safely was concerned.

Cameron did some nice fielding at short for the Lakeviews in spite of three errors and Lew Lebarr handled several bad throws in good style. For the visitors Cairns at the centre fielder carried off the fielding honors with three nice running catches.

Lakeviews scored two in the first after two were out. Cameron popped to Keenan and L. Lebarr was thrown out by Foy. Keenan made a nice running pick up of Moore's bounder but Williamson let the throw get away and Moore reached second. He rode home ahead of Whitlow when the latter hit to left for the circuit, Regan losing the ball. Collins singled through short and stole second but Whitehouse fanned.

There was no further scoring until the fourth when Lakeviews added another pair. Whitlow first up flied to Williamson. Collins singled to right and stole second. Whitehouse singled through short and went to second on the throw to the plate, Collins stopping at third. Bradshaw sacrificed Collins home with a bunt to Foy and Whitehouse scored on Foy's bad throw to third. McIntyre's roller to Foy retired the side.
